This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world’s books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that’s often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book’s long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google’s system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google “watermark” you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can’t offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book’s appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

INTRODUCTION

TO THE

GR\NYA-S\UTRAS.

WE begin our introductory remarks on the literature of the Gr\nya-s\utras with the attempt to collect the more important data which throw light on the development of the Gr\nya ritual during the oldest period of Hindu antiquity.

There are, as it seems, no direct traces of the Gr\nya ceremonies in the most ancient portion of Vedic literature. It is certain indeed that a number of the most important of those ceremonies are contemporaneous with or even earlier than the most ancient hymns of the Rigveda, as far as their fundamental elements and character are concerned, whatever their precise arrangement may have been. However, in the literature of the oldest period they play no part. It was another portion of the ritual that attracted the attention of the poets to whom we owe the hymns to Agni, Indra, and the other deities of the Vedic Olympus, viz. the offerings of the Srauta-Ritual with their far superior pomp, or, to state the matter more precisely, among the offerings of the Srauta-Ritual the Soma offering. In the Soma offering centred the thought, the poetry, and we may almost say the life of the Vasish\thas, of the Visv\mitras, &c., in whose families the poetry of the Rig-veda had its home. We may assume that the acts of the Gr\nya worship, being more limited in extent and simpler in their ritual construction than the great Soma offerings, were not yet at that time, so far as they existed at all, decked out with the reciting of the poetic texts, which we find later on connected with them, and which in the case of the Soma offering came early to be used. Probably they were celebrated in simple unadorned fashion; what the person making the offering had to say was doubtless limited to short, possibly prose formulas, so that these ceremonies remained free from the poetry of the above-mentioned families of priests. We think that the character of the verses given in the Grihya-sūtras, which had to be repeated at the performance of the different ceremonies, justifies us in making these conjectures. Some of these verses indeed are old Vedic verses, but we have no proof that they were composed for the purposes of the Grihya ceremonies, and the connection in which we find them in the Rig-veda proves rather the contrary. Another portion of these verses and songs proves to have been composed indeed for the very Grihya ceremonies for which they are prescribed in the texts of the ritual: but these verses are more recent than the old parts of the Rig-veda. Part of them are found in the Rig-veda in a position which speaks for their more recent origin, others are not contained in the Rig-veda at all. Many of these verses are found in the more recent Vedic Samhitās, especially in the Atharva-veda, a Samhitā which may be regarded in the main as a treasure of Grihya verses; others finally have not as yet been traced to any Vedic Samhitā, and we know them from the Grihya-sūtras only. We may infer that, during the latter part of the Rig-veda period, ceremonies such as marriage and burial began to be decked out with poetry as had long been the case with the Soma offering. The principal collection of marriage sentences and the sentences for the 1 It is doubtful whether at the time of the Rig-veda the custom was established for the sacrificer to keep burning constantly a sacred Grihya fire besides the three Srauta fires. There is, as far as I know, no express mention of the Grihya fire in the Rig-veda; but that is no proof that it had then not yet come into use. Of the Srauta fires the gārhapatya is the only one that is mentioned, though all three were known beyond a doubt. (Ludwig, Rig-veda, vol. iii, p. 355; in some of the passages cited the word gārhapatya does not refer to the gārhapatya fire.)

2 Rig-veda X, 85. It is clear that what we have here is not a hymn intended to be recited all at once, but that, as in a number of other cases in the Rig-veda, the single verses or groups of verses were to be used at different points in the performance of a rite (or, in other cases, in the telling of a story). Compare my paper, 'Ākhyāna-Hymnen im Rig-veda,' Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, vol. xxxix, p. 83.—Many verses of Rig-veda X, 85 occur again in the fourteenth book of the Atharva-veda.
INTRODUCTION.

burial of the dead\(^1\) are found in the tenth Mandala of the Rig-veda, which, for the most part, is known to be of later origin than the preceding portions of the collections\(^2\). If we look into the character of the verses, which these long Grihya songs are composed of, we shall find additional grounds for assuming their early origin. A few remarks about their metrical character will make this clear\(^3\). There is no other metre in which the contrast between the early and later periods of Vedic literature manifests itself so clearly as in the Anushubh-metre\(^4\). The Anushubh hemistich consists of sixteen syllables, which are divided by the caesura into two halves of eight syllables each. The second of these halves has as a rule the iambic ending \((\varpi - \varpi \varphi)\), though this rule was not so strictly carried out in the early as in the later period\(^5\). The iambic ending is also the rule in the older parts of the Veda for the close of the first half, i.e. for the four syllables before the caesura\(^6\). We know that the later prosody, as we see it in certain late parts of Vedic literature, in the Pali Pitakas of the Buddhists, and later in the great epic poems, not only departs from the usage of the older period, but adopts a directly contrary course, i.e. the iambic ending of the first pada, which was formerly the rule, is not allowed at all later, and instead of it the prevailing ending is the antispast \((\varpi - \varphi \varpi)\). It goes without saying that such a change in metrical usage, as the one just described, cannot have

\(^2\) Compare my Hymnen des Rig-veda, vol. i (Prolegomena), pp. 265 seq.

\(^3\) Compare the account of the historical development of some of the Vedic metres which I have given in my paper, 'Das altindische Akhyana,' Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, vol. xxxvil, and my Hymnen des Rig-veda, vol. i, pp. 26 seq.

\(^4\) The Trishubh and Gagati offer a much less promising material for investigation, because, so far as can now be made out, the departures from the old type begin at a later period than in the case of the Anushubh.

\(^5\) Compare Max Müller's introduction to his English translation of the Rigveda, vol. i, pp. cxiv seq.

\(^6\) To demonstrate this, I have given in my last-quoted paper, p. 62, statistics with regard to the two hymns, Rig-veda I, to and VIII, 8; in the former the iambic ending of the first pada obtains in twenty out of twenty-four cases, in the latter in forty-two out of forty-six cases.
taken place at one jump. And accordingly a consideration of the Vedic texts reveals a transition period or rather a series of several transition periods between the old and the new standpoints. The first change is that every other ending of the first pāda is allowed by the side of the iambic ending. The two forms of the ending, the one prevailing in the earliest, and the one prevailing in the later period of the prosody, the iambic (⋯⋯⋯⋯) and the antispastic (⋯⋯⋯⋯), are those that occur most frequently in the intermediate period, but besides them all other possible forms are allowed.

This is precisely the stage of metrical development which the great Grhyas of the tenth Mandala of the Rigveda have reached. Let us consider, for instance, the marriage songs and the marriage sayings, X, 85, and see what kind of ending there is at the end of the first pāda. Of the first seventeen verses of this Sūkta sixteen are in Anushrubh metre (verse 14 is Trishrubh); we have therefore thirty-two cases in which the metrical form of these syllables must be investigated. The quantity of the syllable immediately preceding the caesura being a matter of indifference, we have not sixteen but only eight a priori possible combinations for the form of the last four syllables of the pāda; I give each of these forms below, adding each time in how many of the thirty-two cases it is used:

1 Compare the statistics as to the frequency of the different metrical forms at the ending of the first pāda, p. 63 of my above-quoted paper, and Hymnen des Rig-veda, vol. i, p. 28. I have endeavoured in the same paper, p. 65 seq., to make it seem probable that this was the stage of prosody prevailing during the government of the two Kuru kings Parikshit and Ganeagaya.
INTRODUCTION.

We see that all the possible combinations are actually represented in these thirty-two cases, and accordingly the metrical build of this Sûkta shows that it belongs to a period to which only the latest songs of the Rig-veda collection can be referred, but the peculiarities of which may be often noticed in the Atharva-veda and in the verses scattered throughout the Brâhmana literature.

A hasty glance suffices to show that those verses of the Grîhya ritual which do not appear in the Samhitâs, but which are quoted at full length in the Grîhya-sûtras, are also in the same stage. For instance, the seven Anushṭubh verses which are quoted Śaṅkhâyana-Grîhya I, 19, 5, 6, give us the following relations, if we investigate them as we did those in Rig-veda X, 85:

\begin{array}{c}
\circ \ - \ - \ \kappa \\
\ - \ \circ \ - \ \kappa \\
\ - \ \ - \ \circ \ \kappa \\
\ - \ \ - \ \ - \ \kappa \\ \ - \ \ - \ \ - \ \kappa \\

\[
\begin{array}{c}
4 \\
1 \\
14
\end{array}

Thus even the small number of fourteen hemistichs is enough to give us seven of the eight existing combinations, and no single one occurs at all often enough to allow us to call it predominant.

Or we may take the saying that accompanies the performance of the medhâg’ananâ on the new-born child. In the version of Āsvalâyana\(^2\) we have:

-\ -\ -\ -\ ||\ -\ \circ\ -\ - \\
\text{medhâm te devaḥ Savitā} \\
-\ -\ \circ\ -\ ||\ -\ -\ -\ -
\text{medhām te Āsvinau devau.}

In the version adopted in the school of Gobhila\(^3\) the context of the first line is different, but the metre is the same:

\[- - - ||- 0 0 -\]
\[\text{medhám te Mitrávaruhan.}\]

Or the saying with which the pupil (brahmaśārin) has to lay a log of wood on the fire of the teacher\(^1\):

\[- 0 - 0 0 || 0 -- 0\]

There would be no object in multiplying the number of examples; those here given are sufficient to prove our proposition, that the development of the Ğrīhyā rites in the form in which they are described to us in the Sūtras, that especially their being accompanied with verses, which were to be recited by their performance, is later than the time of the oldest Vedic poetry, and coincides rather with the transition period in the development of the Anushūbh metre, a period which lies between the old Vedic and the later Buddhistic and epic form.

Besides the formulae intended to be recited during the performance of the various sacred acts, the Ğrīhyā-sūtras contain a second kind of verses, which differ essentially from the first kind in regard to metre; viz. verses of ritualistic character, which are inserted here and there between the prose Sūtras, and of which the subject-matter is similar to that of the surrounding prose. We shall have to consider these yagnagāthās, as they are occasionally called, later; at present let us go on looking for traces of the Ğrīhyā ritual and for the origin of Ğrīhyā literature in the literature which precedes the Sūtras.

The Brāhmana texts, which, as a whole, have for their subject-matter the Vaitānika ceremonies celebrated with the three holy fires, furnish evidence that the Ğrīhyā fire, together with the holy acts accomplished in connection with it, were also already known. The Aitareya-Brāhmana\(^2\) gives this fire the most usual name, the same name which is used for it in the Sūtras, grihya agni, and describes a ceremony to be performed over this fire with expressions which agree exactly with the style of the Grihya-sūtras. We often find in the Brāhmaṇa texts also mention of the terminus technicus, which the Grihya-sūtras use many times as a comprehensive term for the offerings connected with Grihya ritual, the word pākayagñā. For instance, the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, in order to designate the whole body of offerings, uses the expression: all offerings, those that are Pākayagñās and the others. It is especially common to find the Pākayagñās mentioned in the Brāhmaṇa texts in connection with the myth of Manu. The Taittiriya Samhitā opposes the whole body of sacrifices to the Pākayagñās. The former belonged to the gods, who through it attained to the heavenly world; the latter concerned Manu: thus the goddess Iḍā turned to him. Similar remarks, bringing Manu or the goddess Iḍā into relation with the Pākayagñās, are to be found Taittiriya Samhitā VI, 2, 5, 4; Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa III, 40, 2. However, in this case as in many others, the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa contains the most detailed data, from which we see how the idea of Manu as the performer of Pākayagñās is connected with the history of the great deluge, out of which Manu alone was left. We read in the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa:

vishayāyanvaśabdhāya rītviq antataḥ kamsena katuṛgrhitās tisā āgyāhūtīr sindṛth prāpadam guhoti, &c.

1 Some of the places in which the St. Petersburg dictionary sees names of the Grihya fire in Brāhmaṇa texts are erroneous or doubtful. Taittiriya Samhitā V, 5, 9, 2, not grihya but gahya is to be read. Aupāsana, Satapatha Brāhmaṇa XII, 3, 5, 5, seems not to refer to a sacrificial fire. Following the identity of aupāsana and sabhya maintained in the dictionary under the heading aupāsana, one might be tempted in a place like Satapatha Brāhmaṇa II, 3, 2, 3 to refer the words ya esha sabhāyām agnī to the domestic fire. A different fire is however really meant (Kātyāyana-Śrauta-sūtra IV, 9, 20).

2 Sāṅkhāyana I, 1, 1: pākayagñān vyākhyāyāmaḥ; I, 5, 1 = Pāraskara I, 4, 1: katvāraṁ pākayagñā huto-hutā prahutaṁ prājita iti.

3 I, 4, 2, 10: sarvāṁ yajñaḥ . . . ye ṛṣa pākayagñaḥ ye kete r.

4 I, 7, 1, 3: sarvāṁ vajñena devāṁ suvargāṁ lokam āyam, pākayagñena Manur arāmyam, &c.

5 I, 8, 1, 6 seq. The translation is that of Prof. Max Müller (India, what can it teach us? p. 135 seq.).
'Now the flood had carried away all these creatures, and thus Manu was left there alone. Then Manu went about singing praises and toiling, wishing for offspring. And he sacrificed there also with a Pâka-sacrifice. He poured clarified butter, thickened milk, whey, and curds in the water as a libation.' It is then told how the goddess Iďā arose out of this offering. I presume that the story of the Pâkayagnā as the first offering made by Manu after the great flood, stands in a certain correlation to the idea of the introduction of the three sacrificial fires through Purûravas. Purûravas is the son of Iďā; the original man Manu, who brings forth Iďā through his offering, cannot have made use of a form of offering which presupposes the existence of Iďā, and which moreover is based on the triad of the sacred fires introduced by Purûravas; hence Manu’s offering must have been a Pâkayagnā; we read in one of the Grīhya-sūtras: ‘All Pâkayagnās are performed without Iďā.’

There are still other passages in the Brâhmaṇa texts showing that the Grīhya offerings were already known; I will mention a saying of Yāgñavalkya’s reported in the Satapatha Brâhmaṇa: he would not allow that the daily morning and evening offering was a common offering, but said that, in a certain measure, it was a Pâkayagnā. Finally I would call attention to the offering prescribed in the last book of the Satapatha Brâhmaṇa for the man ‘who wishes that a learned son should be born to him;’ it is there stated that the preparation of the Āgya (clarified butter) should be performed ‘according to the rule of the Sthâlīpāka (pot-boiling),’ and the way in which the offering is to be performed is described by means of an expression, upaghâtām\(^1\), which often occurs in the Grihya literature in a technical sense.

1 It is true that, as far as I know, passages expressly stating this with regard to Purûravas have not yet been pointed out in the Brâhmaṇa texts; but the words in Satapatha Brâhmaṇa XI, 5, 1, 14–17, and even in Rig-veda X, 95, 18 stand in close connection to this prominent characteristic of Purûravas in the later texts.

We thus see that the Brāhmaṇa books are acquainted with the Grihya fire, and know about the Grihya offerings and their permanent technical peculiarities; and it is not merely the later portions of the Brāhmaṇa works such as the fourteenth book of the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, in which we meet with evidence of this kind; we find it also in portions against the antiquity of which no objections can be raised.

While therefore on the one hand the Brāhmaṇa texts prove the existence of the Grihya ceremonial, we see on the other hand, and first of all by means of the Brāhmaṇa texts themselves, that a literary treatment of this ritualistic subject-matter, as we find it in the Brāhmaṇas themselves with regard to the Srauta offerings, cannot then have existed. If there had existed texts, similar to the Brāhmaṇa texts preserved to us, which treated of the Grihya ritual, then, even supposing the texts themselves had disappeared, we should still necessarily find traces of them in the Brāhmaṇas and Sūtras. He who will take the trouble to collect in the Brāhmaṇa texts the scattered references to the then existing literature, will be astonished at the great mass of notices of this kind that are preserved: but nowhere do we find traces of Grihya Brāhmaṇas. And besides, if such works had ever existed, we should be at a loss to understand the difference which the Hindus make between the Srauta-sūtras based on Sruti (revelation), and the Grihya-sūtras resting on Smṛti (tradition) alone\(^2\). The sacred Grihya acts are regarded as ‘śmārta,’ and when the question is raised with what right they can be considered as a duty resting on the sacrificer alongside of the Srauta acts, the answer is given that they too are based on a Sākhā of the Veda, but that this Sākhā is hidden, so that its existence can only be demonstrated by reasoning.\(^1\)

But the Brāhmaṇa texts furnish us still in another way the most decisive arguments to prove that there have been no expositions of the Grīhya ritual in Brāhmaṇa form: they contain exceptionally and scattered through their mass sections, in which they treat of subjects which according to later custom would have been treated in the Grīhya-sūtras. Precisely this sporadic appearance of Grīhya chapters in the midst of expositions of a totally different contents leads us to draw the conclusion that literary compositions did not then exist, in which these chapters would have occupied their proper place as integral parts of a whole. Discussions of questions of Grīhya ritual are found in the Brāhmaṇa literature, naturally enough in those appendices of various kinds which generally follow the exposition of the principal subject of the Srauta ritual. Accordingly we find in the eleventh book of the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa\(^2\), among the manifold additions to subjects previously treated, which make up the principal contents of this book\(^3\), an exposition of the Upanayana, i.e. the solemn reception of the pupil by the teacher, who is to teach him the Veda. The way in which the chapter on the Upanayana is joined to the preceding one, is eminently characteristic; it shows that it is the merest accident which has brought about in that place the discussion of a subject connected with the Grīhya ritual, and that a ceremony such as the Upanayana is properly not in its proper place in the midst of the literature of Brāhmaṇa texts. A dialogue (brahmodya) between Uddālaka and Saukeya precedes; the two talk of the Agnihotra and of various expiations (prāyaskittā) connected with that sacrifice. At the end Saukeya, filled with astonishment at the wisdom of Uddālaka, declares that he wishes to come to him as a pupil (upāyāni bhagavantam), and Uddālaka accepts him as his pupil. It is the telling of this story and the decisive words upâyâni and upanîyâ which furnish the occasion for introducing the following section on the Upanayana. The subject is there treated in the peculiar style of the Brâhmaṇa texts, a style which we need not characterize here. I shall only mention one point, viz. that into the description and explanation of the Upanayana ceremony has been inserted one of those Slokas, such as we often find in the Grihya-sūtras also, as a sort of ornamental amplification of the prose exposition. 'Here a Sloka is also sung,' says the Brâhmaṇa:

\[ \text{tritiyasyām sa gāyate sāvitryā saha brāhmaṇah}. \]

From this passage we see, on the one hand, that the composition of such isolated Slokas explaining certain points of the Grihya ritual goes back to quite an early period; on the other hand, we are compelled to assume that the Slokas of this kind which are quoted in the Grihya-sūtras differ nevertheless from the analogous Slokas of the early period, or at any rate that the old Slokas must have undergone a change which modernized their structure, so as to be received into the Grihya-sūtras; for the metre of the Sloka just quoted, which has the antispast before the caesura in neither of its two halves, and which has even a double iambus before the caesura in one half, is decidedly of an older type than the one peculiar to the Slokas quoted in the Grihya-sūtras.

1 This is also the way in which Sāyana understands the matter; he makes the following remark: tam hopaninya ity upanayanasya prayutatvât taddharmān asmin brâhmaṇe nirûpyante.
2 Cf. above, p. xiv; below, p. xxxv.
3 Sect. 12 of the chapter quoted.
4 'The teacher becomes pregnant by laying his right hand (on the pupil for the Upanayana); on the third day he (i.e. the pupil) is born as a Brâhmaṇa along with the Sāvitṛ (which is repeated to him on that day).'
5 It is not likely that verses of this kind are taken from more comprehensive and connected metrical texts.
6 Cf. on this point below, p. xxxv.
Another Gr̥hya section in the Satapatha Br̥ahmana seems to have found its place there through a similar accidental kind of joining on to a preceding chapter as the above-mentioned passage. In XI, 5, 5 a story of the battle of the gods and Asuras is told: the gods beat the Asuras back by means of constantly larger Sattra celebrations and conquer for themselves the world of heaven. It seems to me that the description of the great Sattras celebrated by the gods is the occasion of the joining on of a section beginning with the words\(^1\): ‘There are five great sacrifices (mahāyāgaṅgas); they are great Sattras: the offering to Beings, the offering to men, the offering to the Fathers (i. e. the Manes), the offering to the Gods, the offering to the Brahman.’ After this introduction follows an account of one of the five great offerings, namely of the Brahmayāgaṅga, i. e. of the daily Veda recitation (svādhyāya). The third Adhyāya of Āsvalāyana’s Gr̥hya-sūtra begins in exactly the same way with the sentence: ‘Now (follow) the five sacrifices: the sacrifice to the Gods, the sacrifice to the Beings, the sacrifice to the Fathers, the sacrifice to the Brahman, the sacrifice to men,’ and then follows here also a discussion of the Brahmayāgaṅga, which is entirely analogous to that given in the Satapatha Br̥ahmana. Āsvalāyana here does not content himself with describing the actual course of ceremonies as is the rule in the Sūtra texts; he undertakes, quite in the way of the Br̥ahmana texts, to explain their meaning: ‘In that he recites the R̥ikas, he thereby satiates the gods with oblations of milk, in that (he recites) the Yagus, with oblations of ghee,’ &c. It is plain that the mode of exposition adopted by Āsvalāyana in this passage, which is different from the usual Sūtra style, finds its explanation in the supposition that exceptionally in this case the author of the Gr̥hya-sūtra had before him a Br̥ahmana text, which he could take as his model, whether that text was the Satapatha itself or another similar text.

Among the extremely various prescriptions which we find

\(^1\) Satapatha Br̥ahmana XI, 5, 6, 1.
in the last sections of the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, there is a rather long section, which also really belongs to the Grīhya domain. To quote from this section¹: ‘If a man wishes that a learned son should be born to him, famous, a public man, a popular speaker, that he should know all the Vedas, and that he should live to his full age, then, after having prepared boiled rice with meat and butter, they should both eat, being fit to have offspring,’ &c. Then follows a description of an Āgya offering, after which the marital cohabitation is to be performed with certain formulas. This, however, is not the last of the acts through which the father assures himself of the possession of such a distinguished son; certain rites follow, which are to be performed at birth and after birth, the Āyushya ceremony and the Medhāghanana. These rites are here prescribed for the special case where the father has the above-mentioned wishes for the prosperity of his child; but the description agrees essentially with the description of the corresponding acts in the Grīhya-sūtras ², which are inculcated for all cases, without reference to a determined wish of the father. It is a justifiable conjecture that, although this certainly does not apply to the whole of ceremonies described in the Grīhya-sūtras, many portions of these ceremonies and verses that were used in connection with them, &c., were first developed, not as a universal rite or duty, but as the special possession of individuals, who hoped to attain special goods and advantages by performing the ceremony in this way.

It was only later, as I think, that such prescriptions

² Cf. Prof. Max Müller's notes to the passage quoted from the Brāhād Āranyaka. I must mention in this connection a point touched upon by Prof. Müller, loc. cit. p. 222, note 1, viz. that Ārvāḷāyana, Gṛhīya I, 13, 1, expressly calls 'the Upanishad' the text in which the Puṇsavāna and similar ceremonies are treated. It is probable that the Upanishad which Ārvāḷāyana had in mind treated these rites not as a duty to which all were bound, but as a secret that assured the realisation of certain wishes. This follows from the character of the Upanishads, which did not form a part of the Vedic course which all had to study, but rather contained a secret doctrine intended for the few. assumed the character of universality, with which we find them propounded in the Grihya-sūtras.

It is scarcely necessary to go through the sections of the texts of other Vedic schools referring to the Grihya ritual in the same way in which we have done it in the case of the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa. The data which we have produced from the great Brāhmaṇa of the white Yagur-veda, will be sufficient for our purpose, which is to give an idea of the stage in which the literary treatment of the Grihya ritual stood during the Brāhmaṇa period. As we see, there were then properly no Grihya texts; but many of the elements which we find later in the Grihya texts were either already formed or were in the process of formation.
Most of the verses which are used for the Grihya acts—in so far as they are not verses composed in the oldest period for the Soma offering and transferred to the Grihya ceremonies—bear the formal imprint of the Brāhmaṇa period; the domestic sacrificial fire and the ritual peculiarities of the Pākayagñās which were to be performed at it, were known; descriptions of some such Pākayagñās were given in prose; there were also already Slokas which gave in metrical form explanations about certain points of the Grihya ritual, just as we find in the Brāhmaṇa texts analogous Slokas referring to subjects connected with the Srauta ritual.

Thus was the next step which the literary development took in the Sūtra period prepared and rendered easy. The more systematic character which the exposition of the ritualistic discipline assumed in this period, necessarily led to the taking of this step: the domain of the Grihya sacrifices was recognised and expounded as a second great principal part of the ritual of sacrifices alongside of the Srauta domain which was alone attended to in the earlier period. The Grihya-sūtras arose which treat, according to the expression of Áśvalāyana in his first sentence, of the grihyāṇi\(^1\) as distinguished from the vaitāṇikāni, or, as Śāṅkhāyana says, of the pākayagñās, or, as Pāraskara says, of the grihyāsthālīpākānām karma. The \(^1\) Similarly Gobhila: grihyākarmāni.

Grhya-sūtras treat their subject of course in exactly the same style in which the sacrifices of the Srauta ritual had been treated by the Srauta-sūtras, which they constantly assume to be known and which are the works of teachers of the same Vedic schools, and oftentimes even perhaps the works of the same authors. Only certain differences in the character of the two groups of texts are naturally conditioned on the one hand by the greater complexity of the Srauta sacrifices and the comparative simplicity of the Grhya sacrifices, on the other hand by the fact that the Srauta-sūtras are entirely based on Brāhmaṇa texts, in which the same subjects were treated, while the Grhya-sūtras, as we have seen, possessed such a foundation only for a very small portion of their contents.

It goes without saying that the above-mentioned statement that the subjects treated of in the Grhya-sūtras are Pākyayānas or Grhyaṭhālīpākas should not be pressed with the utmost strictness, as though nothing were treated in the Grhya-sūtras which does not come under these heads. First of all the term Ṭhālīpāka is too narrow, since it does not include the offerings of sacrificial butter which constituted a great number of ceremonies. But besides many ceremonies and observances are taught in the Grhya-sūtras, which cannot in any way be characterised as sacrifices at all, only possessing some inner resemblance to the group of sacrifices there treated of, or standing in more or less close connection with them.

The Sūtra texts divide the Pākyayānas in various ways; either four or seven principal forms are taken up. The 1 I believe with Stenzler (see his translation of Ārvalāyana, pp. 2 seq.) that pākyayāna means ‘boiled offering.’ It seems to me that the expression pāka in this connection cannot be otherwise taken than in the word sthālīpāka (‘pot-boiling’). Prof. Max Müller (History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 203), following Hindu authorities, explains Pākyayāna as ‘a small sacrifice,’ or, more probably, ‘a good sacrifice.’ The definition of Lāṭyāyana may be also here quoted (IV, 9, 2): pākyayāna ity ātabhakṣata ekāṅgau yācyān.

2 Compare, for instance, the account of the ceremonies which are to be performed for the journey of the newly-married pair to their new home, Sāṅkhāyana-Grhya I, 15, or the observances to which the Śāntaka is bound, Gobhila III, 5, &c. According to the rule Sāṅkhāyana I, 12, 13 we are, however, to suppose a sacrifice in many ceremonies where there does not seem to be any.
commonest division is that into the four classes of the hutas, a hutas, prahutas, prasitas. The division into seven classes is doubtless occasioned by the division of the Haviryaṅgas and of the Somayaṅgas, which also each include seven classes; for the nature of the sacrifices in question would hardly of itself have led to such a division. The seven classes taken up are either those given by Gautama VIII, 15: 'The seven kinds of Pākayaṅgas, viz. the Ashtakā, the Pārvana (Śtālīpāka, offered on the new and full moon days), the funeral oblations, the Śravani, the Āgrahāyani, the Kaitri, and the Ārvayugī.' Or else the seven classes are established as follows, the fourfold division being utilised to some extent: 'Huta, Prahuta, Āhuta (sic, not Ahuta), the spit-ox sacrifice, the Bali offering, the redescend (on the Āgrahāyana day), the Ashtakā sacrifice.' According to the account of Prof. Bühler, the exposition of Baudhāyana, who gives this division, keeps closely to the course which it prescribes. For the rest, however, the Grhyas texts with which I am acquainted do not follow any of these divisions, and this is easily accounted for, if we consider the artificial character of these classifications, which are undertaken merely for the sake of having a complete scheme of the sacrifices. On the contrary, as a whole the texts give an arrangement which is based on the nature of the ceremonies they describe. In many instances we find considerable variations between the texts of the different schools; often enough, in a given text, the place

1 Sāṅkhāyana I, 5, 1; 10, 7; Pāraskara I, 4, 1. Doubtless Prof. Bühler is right in finding the same division mentioned also Vasishtha XXVI, 10 (Sacred Books of the East, vol. xiv, p. 128). Āvalyayana (I, 1, 2) mentions only three of the four classes.

2 In Lāravayana (V, 4, 22–24) all the sacrifices are divided into seven Haviryaṅga-samsthas and into seven Soma-samsthas, so that the Pākayaṅgas do not form a class of their own; they are strangely brought in as the last of the Haviryaṅgas. Cf. Indische Studien, X, 325.

which is assigned to a given chapter is not to be explained without assuming a certain arbitrariness on the part of the author. But, as a whole, we cannot fail to recognise in the arrangement of the different texts a certain agreement, which we will here merely try to explain in its main traits; the points of detail, which would complete what we here say, will occur of themselves to any one who looks at the texts themselves.

The domestic life of the Hindus represents, so to speak, a circle, in which it is in a certain measure indifferent what point is selected as the starting-point. Two especially important epochs in this life are: on the one hand, the period of studentship of the young Brahma-kârin devoted to the study of the Veda; at the beginning of this period comes the ceremony of the Upanayana, at the end that of the Samâvartana; on the other hand, marriage (vivâha), which besides has a special importance for the Grihya ritual, from the circumstance, that as a rule the cultus of the domestic sacrificial fire begins with marriage. One can just as well imagine an exposition of the Grihya ritual, which proceeds from the description of the studentship to that of the marriage, as one which proceeds from the description of the marriage to that of the studentship. The Samâvartana, which designates the end of the period of studentship, gives the Hindu the right and the duty to found a household\(^1\). On the other hand, if the exposition begins with the marriage, there follows naturally the series of ceremonies which are to be performed up to the birth of a child, and then the ceremonies for the young child, which finally lead up to the Upanayana and a description of the period of studentship. The Hirâyakesi-sûtra alone, of the Sûtras treated of in these translations, follows the first of the two orders mentioned\(^2\); the other texts follow the other order, which has been already described by Prof. Max Müller almost thirty years ago, and we cannot do better than to give his description:\(^1\) 'Then (i.e. after the marriage) follow the Samskāras, the rites to be performed at the conception of a child, at various periods before his birth, at the time of his birth, the ceremony of naming the child, of carrying him out to see the sun, of feeding him, of cutting his hair, and lastly of investing him as a student, and handing him to a Guru, under whose care he is to study the sacred writings, that is to say, to learn them by heart, and to perform all the offices of a Brahmacārin, or religious student.'

1 Hirâyakesi says: samâvrîtta āhâryakulân mātāpitaraubhibhriyāt, tâbhyām anugrâto bhâryām upayâkkhet.

2 The same may be said with regard to two other Grihya texts which also belong to the black Yagur-veda, the Mânava and the Kâśaka. See Jolly, Das Dharma-sûtra des Vishisn und das Kâśakagrîhyasûtra, p. 75; Von Bradke, Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländ. Gesellschaft, vol. xxxvi, p. 445.

In this way we find, as a rule, in the foreground in the first part of the Grihya-sūtras this great group of acts which accompany the domestic life from marriage to the studentship and the Samāvartana of the child sprung from wedlock. We find, however, inserted into the description of these ceremonies, in various ways in the different Sūtras, the exposition of a few ritualistic matters which we have not yet mentioned. In the first place a description of the setting up of the sacred domestic fire, i.e. of the ceremony which in the domain of the Grihya ritual corresponds to the agnyādheya of the Srauta ritual. The setting up of the fire forms the necessary preliminary to all sacred acts; the regular time for it is the wedding\(^2\), so that the fire used for the wedding acts accompanies the young couple to their home, and there forms the centre of their household worship. Accordingly in the Grihya-sūtras the description of the setting up of the fire stands, as a rule, at the beginning of the whole, not far from the description of the wedding.

Next the introductory sections of the Grihya-sūtras have to describe the type of the Grihya sacrifice, which is universally available and recurs at all household ceremonies. This can be done in such a way that this type is described for itself, without direct reference to a particular sacrifice. This is the case in Pāraskara, who in the first chapter of his

\(^1\) History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 204.
\(^2\) See, for instance, Pāraskara I, 2, 1: āvasathyādānams dārakāle.
Sūtra describes the rites recurring at each sacrifice, and then remarks: 'This ritual holds good, whenever a sacrifice is offered.' Similarly Āśvalāyana, in one of the first chapters of his work, enumerates the rites which are to be performed whenever he intends to sacrifice. Sānkhyāyana chooses for this the sacrifice which the bridegroom has to offer, when a favourable answer has been granted to his wooing; Gobhila gives at least the greater part of the rules in question à propos of the full moon and of the new moon sacrifice; Hiranyakesin, who opens his account at the period of the studentship of the young Brāhmaṇa, describes the sacrificial type à propos of the Upanayana rite.

The sacrifices which are to be offered daily at morning and at evening, those which are celebrated monthly on the days of the new moon and of the full moon—the Grihya copies of the Agnihotra and of the Darsapūrnamāsa sacrifices—and, thirdly, the daily distribution of the Bali offerings: these ceremonies are commonly described along with what we have called the first great group of the Grihya acts, immediately preceding or following the Vivāha.

We find, as a second group of sacred acts, a series of celebrations, which, if the man has founded his household, are to be performed regularly at certain times of the year at the household fire. So the Sravāna sacrifice, which is offered to the snakes at the time when, on account of the danger from snakes, a raised couch is necessary at night. At the end of this period the festival of the re-descent is celebrated: the exchanging of the high couch for the low couch on the ground. Between these two festivals comes the Prishataka offering on the full-moon day of the month Āsvayugā; it receives in the Grihya texts the place corresponding to that which actually belongs to it in the series of the festivals. As a rule the acts we have just mentioned are followed, in accordance with the natural series, by the Ashṭākā festivals, which are celebrated during the last months of the year.

Alongside of these acts which are connected with fixed points of the year we find in the various Grīhya texts an account of a series of other ceremonies, which, in accordance with their nature, have no such fixed position in the system of the ritual. Thus, for instance, the rites which refer to the choice of a piece of ground to build a house or to the building itself; further, the rites connected with agriculture and cattle raising. In many texts we find together with this group of acts also an account of the ceremonies, related to fixed points in the year, which stand in connection with the annual course of Vedic study: the description of the opening festival and of the closing festival of the school term, as well as a point which generally follows these descriptions, the rules as to the anadhyāya, i.e. as to the occasions which necessitate an intermission in the study of the Veda for a longer or for a shorter period. As a rule, the Grīhya-sūtras bring the account of these things into the group of acts which refer to the household life of the Grīhasītha; for the Adhyāpana, i.e. the teaching of the Veda, held the first place among the rights and duties of the Brāhmaṇa who had completed his time at school. On the other hand these ceremonies can naturally also be considered as connected with the school life of the young Hindu, and accordingly they are placed in that division by Gobhila, between the description of the Upanayana and that of the Samāvartana.

The sacred acts connected with the burial and the worship of the dead (the various kinds of Srāddha rites) may be designated as a third group of the ceremonies which are described to us in the Grīhya-sūtras. Finally, a fourth group comprises the acts which are connected with the attainment of particular desires (kāmyāni). Among the texts here translated we find a somewhat detailed account of these ceremonies in the Gobhila-sūtra and in the Khādira-Grīhya only.

These remarks cannot claim to give a complete outline of the contents and arrangement of the Grīhya texts; they only aim at giving an idea of the fundamental traits, which in each particular text are modified by manifold variations, but which nevertheless are to these variations as the rule is to the exceptions.

We must now speak of the relations of the Grīhya-sūtras to the two other kinds of Sūtra texts, with which they have so many points of contact in the Srauta-sūtras and the Dharma-sūtras.

Prof. Bühler, in several places of the excellent introductions which he has prefixed to his translations of the Dharma-sūtras, has called attention to the fact that the relation in which the Sūtra texts of the same school stand to each other is very different in different schools. Many schools possess a great corpus of Sūtras, the parts of which are the Srauta-sūtra, the Grīhya-sūtra, &c. This is, for instance, the case with the Āpastambiya school; its Sūtra is divided into thirty Prāmas, the contents of which are divided as follows:

I–XXIV: Srauta-sūtra.
XXV: Paribhāshās, &c.
XXVI: Mantras for the Grīhya-sūtra.
XXVII: Grīhya-sūtra.
XXVIII–XXIX: Dharma-sūtra.
XXX: Sulva-sūtra.

In other cases the single Sūtra texts stand more independently side by side; they are not considered as parts of one and the same great work, but as different works. Of course it is the Dharma-sūtras above all which could be freed from the connection with the other Sūtra texts to such an extent, that even their belonging to a distinct Vedic school may be doubtful. The contents of this class of Sūtras indeed have hardly any connection with the subdivisions and differences of the Vedic texts handed down in the various schools; there was no reason why Brahmins, who studied various Sākhās of the Veda, should not learn the ordinances concerning law and morals given in these Sūtras as they were formulated in the same texts. The Grihya-sūtras are not so independent of the differences of the Vedic schools. The close analogy between the sacrificial ritual of the Grihya acts and that of the Srauta acts, and the consequent necessity of taking into account the Srauta ritual in the exposition of the Grihya ritual, necessarily brought the Grihya-sūtras into closer connection with and into greater dependence on the Srauta-sūtras than in the case of the Dharma-sūtras. But above all, the Grihya ceremonies demanded the knowledge of numerous Mantras, and accordingly as these Mantras were borrowed from the one or the other Mantra Sākhā, there followed in the case of the Grihya text in question an intimate connection with the corresponding Mantra school. We find accordingly as a general rule, that each Grihya-sūtra presupposes a Vedic Samhitā, whose Mantras it quotes only in their Pratikas, and that besides each Grihya-sūtra presupposes a previous

1 Professor Jolly in his article on the Dharma-sūtra of Vishnu, p. 71, note 1, points out that in the eyes of Hindu commentators also the Dharma-sūtras differ from the Grihya-sūtras in that the former contain rather the universal rules, while the latter contain the rules peculiar to individual schools. Cf. Weber, Indische Literaturgeschichte, 2. Aufl., S. 296.

2 It seems as though the choice of the Mantras which were to be prescribed for the Grihya ceremonies had often been intentionally made so as to comprise as many Mantras as possible occurring in the Mantra-Sākhā, which served as foundation to the Grihya texts in question.

3 When Govindasvāmin (quoted by Bühler, Sacred Books of the East, vol. xiv, p. xiii) designates the Grihya-kāstra as sarvādhi-kāstra, this should not be understood literally. In general it is true the Grihya acts are the same for the disciples of all the Vedic schools, but the Mantras to be used in connection with them differ.

4 In the introduction to Gobhila I have treated of the special case where a Grihya-sūtra, besides being connected with one of the great Samhitās, is connected also with a Grihya-samhitā of its own, so to speak, with a collection of the Mantras to be used at the Grihya acts.
knowledge of the ritual which is acquired through the study of the proper Srauta-sūtra\(^1\). It is not necessary to quote the numerous places where the Grihya-sūtras either expressly refer to the Srauta-sūtras, or point to them by repeating the same phrases or often even whole Sūtras. It will be sufficient to quote one out of many places, the opening words of the Āraṇīya-Grihya, which in a way characterise this work as a second part of the Srauta-sūtra:

‘The rites based on the spreading (of the three sacred fires) have been declared; we shall declare the Grihya rites\(^2\).

Thus it is not difficult to perceive the dependence of the Grihya-sūtras on the Srauta-sūtras; but there remains the much more difficult question whether in each particular case both texts are to be regarded as by the same author, or whether the Grihya-sūtra is an appendix to the Srauta-sūtra composed by another author. Tradition accepts the one alternative for some Sūtras; for other Sūtras it accepts the other; thus in the domain of the Rig-veda literature Āraṇīya and Sāṅkhāya are credited with the authorship of a Srauta-sūtra as well as of a Grihya-sūtra; the same is true of Āpastamba, Hiranyakesin, and other authors. On the other hand, the authorship of the Grihya-sūtras which follow the Srauta-sūtras of Kātyāyana, Lāṭyāyana, Drāhyāyana, is not ascribed to Kātyāyana, Lāṭyāyana, Drāhyāyana, but to Pāraskara, Gobhila, and Khādirākārya.

It seems to me that we should consider the testimony of tradition as entirely trustworthy in the second class of cases. Tradition is very much inclined to ascribe to celebrated masters and heads of schools the origin of works which are acknowledged authorities in their schools, even though they are not the authors. But it is not likely that tradition should have made a mistake in the opposite direction, that e.g. it should designate Pāraskara as author when Kātyāyana himself was the author.

\(^1\) In the domain of the Atharva-veda literature alone we find this relation reversed; here the Srauta-sūtra (the Vaitāna-sūtra) presupposes the Grihya-sūtra (the Kauṣika-sūtra). Cf. Prof. Garbe’s preface to his edition of the Vaitāna-sūtra, p. vii. This relation is not extraordinary, considering the secondary character of the Vaitāna-sūtra.

\(^2\) Uktāni vaitānīkāni, grīhyaṁ vakahyāmaḥ.

We shall not be able to trust so implicitly to tradition where it puts down the same author for the Gṛihya-sūtra as for the corresponding Srauta-sūtra; the possibility that such data are false is so large that we have to treat them as doubtful so long as we have not discovered certain proofs of their correctness. At present, so far as I can see, we are just as little justified in considering that such a proof has been made as we are able to prove the opposite state of things. It is easy to find the many agreements in contents and expression which exist, for instance, between the Srauta-sūtra and Gṛihya-sūtra of Sāṇkhāyana, or between the Srauta-sūtra and the Gṛihya-sūtra of Ārvalāyana. But these agreements cannot be considered as sufficient proof that in each case the Gṛihya-sūtra and the Srauta-sūtra are by the same author. Even if the author of the Gṛihya-sūtra was not Ārvalāyana or Sāṇkhāyana in person, still he must have been at all events perfectly familiar with the works of those teachers, and must have intended to fit his work to theirs as closely as possible, so that agreements of this kind can in no way astonish us. On the other hand, if the Srauta-sūtras and Gṛihya-sūtras are read together, it is easy to discover small irregularities in the exposition, repetitions and such like, which might seem to indicate different authors. But the irregularities of this kind which have been detected up to the present are scarcely of such

2 For this reason I cannot accept the reasoning through which Prof. Bühler (Sacred Books of the East, vol. ii, p. xiv) attempts to prove the identity of the author of the Srauta-sūtra and of the Dharma-sūtra of the Āpastambhya school. Bühler seems to assume that the repetition of the same Sūtra, and of the same irregular grammatical form in the Srauta-sūtra and in the Dharma-sūtra, must either be purely accidental, or, if this is impossible, that it proves the identity of the authors. But there remains a third possible explanation, that the two texts are by different authors, one of whom knows and imitates the style of the other.
a character as not to be easily ascribable to mistakes and carelessness such as even a careful author may be guilty of in the course of a large work. It seems to me then that until the discovery of further circumstances throwing light on the question of the identity of the authors of the Śrautas and of the Grihya, it would be premature if we were to venture on a decision of this question in one direction or the other.

Prof. Bühler’s investigations have made perfectly clear the relation in which the Grihya-sūtras and the Dharmasūtras stand to each other in those cases, where we have texts of both kinds by the same school. In the case of the Grihya-sūtra and the Dharma-sūtra of the Āpastamba he has proved that both texts were the work of the same author according to a common plan, so that the Grihya-sūtra is as short and terse as possible, because Āpastamba had reserved for the Dharma-sūtra a portion of the subject-matter generally treated of in the Grihya-sūtras. Besides there are references in each of the two texts to the other which strengthen the proof of their being written by the same author. In the Sūtra collection of Hiranyakeshin the state of things is different. Here, as Prof. Bühler has also shown, we find numerous discrepancies between the Grihya and the Dharma-sūtra, which are owing to the fact, that while this teacher took as Dharma-sūtra that of Āpastamba with some unessential changes, he composed a Grihya-sūtra of his own. Of the two Sūtras of Baudhāyana, the same distinguished scholar, to whom we owe the remarks we have just mentioned, has treated in the Sacred Books of the East, vol. xiv, p. xxxi.

I believe that every reader who compares the two kinds of texts will notice that the frame within which the exposition of the Dharma-sūtras is inclosed, is an essentially broader one than in the case of the Grihya-sūtras. We have here, I think, the same phenomenon that may also be observed, for instance, in the domain of the Buddhist Vinaya literature, where the exposition of the life of the community was at first given only in connection with the explanation of the list of sins (Pātimokkha) which was promulgated every half month at the meetings of the spiritual brethren. It was not till later that a more comprehensive exposition, touching all the sides of the life of the community was attempted, an exposition which, on the one hand, no longer limited itself to the points discussed in the Pātimokkha, and which, on the other hand, necessarily had much in common with what was laid down in the Pātimokkha. The relation of the Grihya-sūtras and Dharma-sūtras seems to me to be of a similar nature. The Grihya-sūtras begin to treat of the events of the daily life of the household, but they do not yet undertake to exhaust the great mass of this subject-matter; on the contrary they confine themselves principally to the ritual or sacrificial side of household life, as is natural owing to their connection with the older ritualistic literature. Then the Dharma-sūtras take an important step further; their purpose is to describe the whole of the rights and customs which prevail in private, civic, and public life. They naturally among other things touch upon the ceremonies treated in the Grihya-sūtras, but they generally merely mention them and discuss the questions of law and custom which are connected with them, without undertaking to go into the technical ordinances as to the way in which these ceremonies are to be performed.

1 Cf. my remarks in the introduction to the Śāṅkhāyana-Gṛihya, vol. xxix, pp. 5, 6.

Only in a few cases do portions treated of in the domain of the Dharma-sūtras happen to coincide with portions treated of in the Grihya-sūtras. Thus especially, apart from a few objects of less importance, the detailed rules for the behaviour of the Snātaka and the rules for the interruptions of the Veda study (anadhyāya) are generally treated in an exactly similar way in the texts of the one and those of the other category.

We have spoken above of the metrical peculiarities of the Mantras quoted in the Gṛihya-sūtras, the metre of which clearly proves what is indubitable from other reasons, that most, if not all, of these verses were composed at a perceptibly older period than the descriptions of the sacred acts in the midst of which they are inserted. A second kind of verses which are quoted in the Gṛihya-sūtras must be carefully distinguished from these. It is doubtful whether there are any to be found among them which the authors of the Sūtras have themselves composed; but they were composed at a period decidedly more recent than those Mantras, and they therefore exhibit metrical peculiarities which are essentially different. The verses I mean are Slokas of ritual contents, which are quoted to confirm or to complete what is stated in the prose, and which are introduced by such expressions as tād āpy āhūḥ ‘here they say also,’ or tād āpi slokāḥ ‘here there are also Slokas,’ and other similar phrases.

We called attention above (p. xix) to the fact that a verse of this kind occurs in one of the Gṛihya chapters of the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, in a metre corresponding to the peculiarities of the older literary style. On the other hand, the verses appearing in the Gṛihya-sūtras differ only in a few cases from the standard of the later Sloka prosody, as we have it, e.g. in the Mahābhārata and in the laws of Manu. In the Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländ. Gesellschaft, vol. xxxvii, p. 67, I have given tables for the verses in question out of the Sāṅkhāyana-Gṛihya, and these tables show that the characteristic ending of the first

1 We do not mean to deny that among these verses too a few of especially modern appearance are to be found; e.g. this is true of the verses which Dr. Von Bradke has quoted from the Mānasva-Gṛihya II, 14, 34 (Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländ. Gesellschaft, vol. xxxvi, p. 429).

2 Let me here refer to the fact that one of these verses (Āśvalāyana-Gṛihya IV, 7, 10) concludes with the words, ‘thus said Saunaka.’

3 Āśvalāyana-Gṛihya I, 3, 10 designates such a verse as yagñagāthā.
Sloka Pāda for the later period \( \text{०} - \text{०} - \text{०} \), which, for instance, in the Nalopākhyāna of the Mahābhārata covers precisely five-sixths of all the cases, occurs in Śāṅkhāyana in thirty cases out of thirty-nine, that is in about three quarters of the cases\(^1\); Śāṅkhāyana has still twice the ending \( \text{०} - \text{०} - \text{०} \) which is the rule in the Rig-veda, but which is forbidden by the later prosody: prahutaḥ pitrīkarmanā, uktvā mantram sprised āpah.\(^2\) It may be observed that a similar treatment of the Sloka metre appears also in the Rig-veda Prātisākhya of Saunaka. Here too the modern form of the ending of the first pāda dominates, although sometimes the old iambic form is preserved, e.g. II, 5 antakpadam vivrit-tayaḥ, III, 6 anudāttodaye punah.

It seems evident that we have in this Sloka form of the Sūtra period, the last preparatory stage which the development of this metre had to traverse, before it arrived at the shape which it assumes in epic poetry; and it is to be hoped that more exhaustive observations on this point (account being especially taken of the numerous verses quoted in the Dharma-sūtras) will throw an important light on the chronology of the literature of this period lying between the Vedas and the post-Vedic age.

We add to these remarks on the Slokas quoted in the Gṛihya-sūtras, that we come upon a number of passages in the midst of the prose of the Sūtras, which without being in any way externally designated as verses, have an unmistakable metrical character, being evidently verses which the authors of the Sūtras found ready made, and which they used for their own aphorisms, either without changing them at all, or with such slight changes that the original form remained clearly recognisable. Thus we read in Āśvalāyana (Gṛihya I, 6, 8), as a definition of the Rākshasa marriage: hatvā bhittvā kaś sirshāni rudatīṁ rudadbhyo

\(^1\) The few verses which are found in Gobhila preserve the same metrical standard as those quoted in Śāṅkhāyana; it follows that in Gobhila IV, 7, 23, avvatāhād agnibhāyam brūyāt, we cannot change brūyāt in ka, as Prof. Knauer proposes. The supernumerary syllable of the first foot is unobjectionable, but the form \( \text{०} - \text{०} - \) of the second foot should not be touched.

\(^2\) Both passages are to be found in Śāṅkhāyana-Gṛihya I, 10.
haret: the approximation of these words to the Sloka metre cannot escape attention, and it is only necessary to make Rudadbhyakh and Rudatim change places in order to obtain a regular Sloka hemistich. In Gobhila the Sūtras I, 2, 21–27 represent three hemistichs, which with one exception (na ka sopānakah kvaṅkit) exactly conform to the laws of the Sloka metre. II, 4, 2 gives also a hemistich by slightly changing the order:

Mahāvṛkshān smāsānam ka nadiś ka vishamāni ka.\(^1\)

Somewhat more remote from the original verses is the wording of the Sūtras I, 6, 8, 9 na pravasann upavaseṣa ity āhuḥ, patnyā vratāṁ bhavatīti; we have the metrical order in one of the Slokas quoted by Sāṅkhâyana (Grīhya II, 17): nopavāsaḥ pravāse syāt patnī dhārayate vratam.

The verses which are thus either expressly quoted, or at any rate made use of by the authors of the Grīhya-sūtras, do not seem to be taken from connected metrical works any more than the yagñagāthās quoted in the Brāhmaṇas; on the contrary in a later period of literature, when texts similar to Manu's Code were composed, they evidently furnished these texts with some of their materials.\(^2\)

Leaving out of consideration the Khādīra-Grihya, which is evidently a recast of the Gobhiliya-Grihya, and the Sūtra of Hiranyakesin, which is, at least in part, based on that of Āpastamba\(^3\), we are not in regard to the other Grīhya texts in a condition to prove that one of them borrowed from the other. It often happens that single Sūtras or whole rows of Sūtras agree so exactly in different texts that this agreement cannot be ascribed to chance; but this does not—so far at least—enable us to tell which text is to be looked upon as the source of the other, or whether they have a common source which has been lost.

\(^1\) The text has: nadiś ka vishamāni ka mahāvṛkshān smāsānam ka.

\(^2\) Cf. Indische Studien, XV, 11. We do not mean to imply anything as to the metrical portions of other Sūtra texts than the Grīhya-sūtras. As regards some verses quoted in the Bandhāyana-Dharma-sūtra, Prof. Bühler (Sacred Books of the East, vol. xiv, p. xlii) has shown that they are actually borrowed from a metrical treatise on the Sacred Law.

I will content myself with mentioning two such cases of agreement, in the one of which we can at least prove that a certain Sûtra cannot originally spring from one of the texts in which we find it, while in the other case we are able by means of a possibly not too uncertain conjecture to reconstruct the opening Sûtras of a lost Grihya-sûtra.

The description of the vrîshotsarga (i.e. of the setting a bull at liberty) agrees almost word for word in the Sûtras of Sânkhâyana (III, 11), Pâraskara (III, 9), and in the Kâthaka-Grihya. In Sânkhâyana we read:

§ 15: nabhyasthe-numantrayate mayobhûr ity anuvâkâ-seshena.

('When the bull is in the midst of the cows, he recites over them the texts "mayobhûh, &c.;" down to the end of the Anuvâka.')

On the other hand in Pâraskara we have:

§ 7: nabhyastham abhimantrayate mayobhûr ity anuvâkâ-seshena.

('When the bull is in the midst of the cows, he recites over it the texts "mayobhûh, &c.;" down to the end of the Anuvâka.')

The quotation mayobhûh is clear, if we refer it to the Rig-veda. Hymn X, 169, which stands about in the middle of an Anuvâka, begins with this word. On the other hand in the Vâgasaneyi Samhitâ there is no Mantra beginning with Mayobhûh; we find this word in the middle of the Mantra XVIII, 45, and there follow verses whose use at the vrîshotsarga would seem in part extremely strange. There can thus be no doubt that Pâraskara here borrowed from a Sûtra text belonging to the Rig-veda, a Pratika, which, when referred to the Vâgasaneyi Samhitâ, results in nonsense.

The other passage which I wish to discuss here is Pâra-

1 In the Taittirîya Samhitâ (VII, 4, 17) mayobhûh is the beginning of an Anuvâka; the expression anuvâkâseshena would have no meaning if referred to this text.
skara I, 4, 1–5. Pândaskara, being just on the point of describing the marriage ritual, prefixes a few sentences, the position of which here it is not very easy to understand. A general division of all Pákyagñás—general remarks on the nature of the place for sacrificing: this looks very strange between a discussion of the Arghya and marriage ceremonies. Now these same sentences are found almost word for word and with the same passing on to the marriage ritual in Sánkháyana also (Grhíhya I, 5, 1–5). Here, as in other cases, we have the borrowing word for word of such portions of text from an older text, and, closely related to this phenomenon, the fact that the sentences in question are awkwardly woven into the context of the Grhíhya where we read them, and are poorly connected with the surrounding parts. Unless we are much deceived, we have here a fragment from an older source inserted without connection and without change. It would seem that this fragment was the beginning of the original work; for the style and contents of these Sútras are peculiarly appropriate for the beginning. Thus, if this conjecture is right, that old lost Grhíhya began with the main division of all the Pákyagñás into four classes, and then proceeded at once to the marriage ritual. Later, when the texts which we have, came into existence, the feeling evidently arose, that in this way an important part of the matter had been overlooked. The supplementary matter was then inserted before the old beginning, which then naturally, as is to be seen in our texts, joins on rather strangely and abruptly to these newly-added portions.
GRHYA-SÛTRA OF

GOBHLA.
INTRODUCTION

GRHYA-SUTRA OF GOBHILA.

The Grihya-sutra of Gobhila differs from those of Sānkhyāyana, Åśvalāyana, Pāraskara, Hiranyakesin in one essential point: while these texts presuppose only the same Vedic Samhitās on which also the corresponding Srautasūtras are based, viz. the Rig-veda-Samhitā, the Vāgasaneyi-Samhitā, and the Taittirīya-Samhitā; the Sūtra of Gobhila, on the other hand, presupposes, beside the Samhitā of the Sāma-veda, another collection of Mantras which evidently was composed expressly with the purpose of being used at Grihya ceremonies: this collection is preserved to us under the title of the Mantra-Brahmana, and it has been edited at Calcutta (1873), with a commentary and Bengali translation by Satyavrata Sāmasramin.

Prof. Knauer of Kiew, to whom all students of the Grihya literature are highly indebted for his very accurate edition and translation of Gobhila, has been the first to

1 The term ‘Samhitā of the Sāma-veda’ ought to be understood here in its narrower sense as denoting the so-called first book of the Samhitā, the Āśānda-ārāka or collection of Yoni verses (see on the relation between this collection and the second book my remarks in the Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, vol. xxxviii, pp. 464 seq.). Prof. Knauer in his list of the verses quoted by Gobhila (p. 29 of his translation of the Gobhillya-Grihya) states that Sāma-veda II, 1138 (= I, 276) and 1139 is quoted in Gobhila III, 9, 6, but an accurate analysis of the words of Gobhila shows that the verse II, 1139 is not referred to, so that only the verse II, 1138 remains, which occurs also in the first book of the Samhitā. The ‘dvīka’ of which Gobhila speaks in that Sūtra is not a dvīka, but, as the commentators rightly understand it (see Knauer’s edition of the text, p. xii), it is a dyad of Sāmans or melodies, the two Kāvasha Sāmans which are based on the text I, 276, and are given in the great Sāma-veda edition of Satyavrata Sāmasramin, vol. i, pp. 566, 567.

examine into the relation in which the two texts, the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa and the Gobhiliya-sūtra, stand to each other. He has very kindly enabled me to make use, before they were published, of the results of his investigations, which he has laid down in the introduction to his translation of Gobhila. While I wish, therefore, to acknowledge the obligation under which Prof. Knauer has thus laid me, I must try, on the other side, to state my own opinion as to the problem in question, which in some points differs from, or is even opposed to, the theory by which Prof. Knauer has tried to solve it.

To begin with that side of the question regarding which there can scarcely be any doubt: it is certain, I believe, that Gobhila supposes the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa to be known to the students of his Sūtra. The reasons which show this are obvious enough. By far the greater part of the Mantras of which Gobhila quotes the first words, are not found in the Sāma-veda nor, for the most part, in any other Vedic Samhitā, except in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa, in which they stand in exactly the same order in which they are referred to by Gobhila. The descriptions of the Grihya sacrifices by Gobhila would have been meaningless and useless, and the sacrificer who had to perform his domestic ceremonies according to the ritual of Gobhila, would have been unable to do so, unless he had known those Mantras as contained in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa. And not only the Mantras, but also the order in which the Mantras stood, for Sūtras such as, for instance, Gobh. II, 1, 10 ('With the two following verses he should wash,' &c.), would have no meaning except for one who had studied the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa which alone could show which 'the two following verses' were.

There are, consequently, two possibilities: either the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa existed before the Gobhiliya-sūtra, or the two works have been composed together and on one common plan. It is the first of these alternatives which Prof. Knauer maintains; I wish, on the other hand, to call the attention of Vedic scholars to some facts which seem to me to render the second more probable.

1 Cf. Knauer's Introduction, pp. 24, 31 seq.

A great part of the Mantras which have to be recited, according to Gobhila, at the performance of the Grhyya ceremonies, are not given in the Mantra-Brâhmaṇa, but they are either found in the Sâma-veda-Samhitâ and then their Pratikas are quoted by Gobhila, or they are cited by Gobhila in extenso. Thus for the ceremonies described in the first Prapâthaka of Gobhila, such as the morning and evening offerings and the sacrifices of the full and new moon, the Mantra-Brâhmaṇa gives, with one single exception, no Mantras at all ¹; but those Mantras, most of which consist only of a few words, are given by Gobhila only. It is scarcely to be believed that in a Samhitâ which had to contain the Mantras required for the performance of the Grhyya sacrifices, the Mantras belonging to the two daily and the two fortnightly sacrifices, which occupy one of the first places among all Grhyya ceremonies and are treated of accordingly in all Grhyya-sūtras, should have been omitted, unless that Samhitâ was intended to stand in relation to another text by which that deficiency was supplied: and the Gobhiliya-sūtra exactly supplies it. Prof.
Knauer thinks that those Mantras were omitted because they had already found their place in the Srauta ritual; but we must not forget that in the Srauta ritual of the Sâma-vedins neither the Agnihotra nor the Darsapūrṇamâsa sacrifices, which are performed without the assistance of priests of the Udgâtri class, are treated of. Moreover the one Mantra to which we have already alluded ², the single one which corresponds in the Mantra-Brâhmaṇa to the first book of Gobhila, seems to me quite sufficient to show that it was not the intention of the compiler of that text to disregard that group of sacrifices; he gave that Mantra only, because the other Mantras, consisting of but a few words, were given in extenso in the Gobhila text.
The Mantra of which we speak, belongs to the description of the paryukshana of the sacrificial fire. The sacrificer pours out water to the south, the west, and the north of the fire, with the Mantras, ‘Adite-numanyasva,’ ‘Anumate-numanyasva,’ ‘Sarasvaty anumanyasva’; then he sprinkles water round the fire once or three times with a longer Mantra, ‘Deva Savitaḥ prasuva yagñam prasuva yagñapatiṃ bhagāya. Divyo gandharvaḥ ketapūḥ ketam naḥ punātu. Vākaspatir vākam naḥ svadatu.’ This last one is the Mantra given in its entirety in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa, while Gobhila has only the first words of it. To assume here that the author of the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa knew only of that one Mantra, and that at the time of Gobhila the custom of the Śāma-vedins had undergone a change, so that they used four Mantras instead of the one, would be, in my opinion, an artificial and not very probable way of explaining the facts; a much more natural supposition would be, I believe, that the Sūtra and the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa describe one and the same form of the ceremony, so that the Brāhmaṇa, by omitting the short Mantras, which were given in the Sūtra in their entirety, implicitly refers to the Sūtra, and the Sūtra, on the other hand, by quoting only the first words of the longer Mantra, refers to the Brāhmaṇa in which the full text of that Mantra was given.

Among the numerous ceremonies described by Gobhila, which could furnish the occasion for similar remarks, we select only two: the rites performed in the evening of the wedding-day, and the sacrifice on the full-moon day of Ṭrāyayuga. The bridegroom, having carried away his bride from her home, takes her to the house of a Brāhmaṇa, and when the stars have appeared, he makes six oblations with the six verses lekhāsandhiḥ paḵṣhmasu (Mantra-Br. I, 3, 1-6): these are given in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa, and Gobhila has only the Pratika. Then follow two short Mantras: the bride, to whom the polar-star has been shown, addresses that star with the words: dhruvam asi dhruvāham patikule bhūyāsam amushyāsāv iti;

1 Gobh. I, 3, 4.
2 Gobh. II, 3, 17 seq.
3 Gobh. III, 8.
and when she sees the star Arundhati, she says, ruddhāham asmi. As the full wording of these Mantras is given by Gobhila, they are omitted in the Brāhmaṇa. Finally the bridegroom recites over the bride the Rīk dhruvā dynasty dhruvā prithivi, &c.; this we find in the M.-B. (I, 3, 7), the Pratika only being quoted by Gobhila. If one were to suppose here that in the two texts two different stages in the development of this ceremony are represented, so that only the Mantras lekhāsandhiṣṭu and dhruvā dynasty would belong to the more ancient form of it, while the Mantras dhruvam asi and ruddhāham asmi would have been introduced at a later time, it may perhaps not be possible to disprove, in the strictest sense of the word, such an opinion. But I think the data we have given point to another solution of the problem which, if not the only admissible, is yet the most probable and natural one. Gobhila gave the full wording of the shorter Mantras with which the description of the ceremony could be interwoven without becoming obscure or disproportionate; the longer Mantras would have interrupted, rather tediously and inconveniently, the coherency of his ritual statements; so he separated them from the rest of his work and made a separate Samhitā of them. It is true that there are some exceptions to the rule that all long Mantras are given in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa and all short Mantras only in the Sūtra: on the one hand, there are some Mantras of considerable extent that are given by Gobhila and omitted in the Brāhmaṇa, thus, for instance, the Mantra yady asi saumī used at a preparatory ceremony that belongs to the Pumsavāna¹. On the other hand, a number of short Mantras which Gobhila gives in extenso, are found nevertheless also in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa: such is the case, for instance, with many of the Mantras belonging to the worship of the Fathers, Gobhila IV, 2, 3, Mantra-Br. II, 3.

¹ Gobh. II, 6, 7. It is possible, though we have no positive evidence for this conjecture, that such statements regarding preparatory or auxiliary ceremonies may here and there have been added to the Sūtra collection in a later time. The Khādīra-Grihya (II, 2, 20) has instead of that long Mantra only a few words which in the Gobhilīya-sūtra stand at the end of it.
It appears then, that allowance must be made for a certain inconsistency or carelessness in the distribution of the material between the two texts: and such an assumption will easily be allowed by any one who does not entertain very exaggerated ideas as to the care and reflection which presided over the composition of the Sūtra texts.

I will add only a few words concerning a second Grihya ceremony, which calls for the same sort of comment as the rites which have just been discussed. For the offering on the day of the full moon, Gobhila prescribes (III, 8, 2) first the verse ā no mitrāvarūṇā, second the verse mā nas to ke. The Mantra-Brāhmaṇa (II, 1, 8) has the second of these verses only, not the first: conversely, the first verse alone, and not the second, is to be found in the Samhitā of the Sāma-veda (I, 220). We could hardly assume, as I think, that the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa presupposed another form of the rite differing from Gobhila’s; we should be much more inclined to consider the leaving out of that matter, which was contained in other texts of the Sāma-veda, as a proof that the compiler of the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa assumed that those texts were known 1.

And this brings me to one of Prof. Knauer’s conjectures concerning the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa which I have not yet touched. According to tradition we consider the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa as belonging to the Sāma-veda; in the Calcutta edition it is designated as the ‘Sāma-vedasya Mantra-Brāhmaṇam.’ Prof. Knauer thinks that it is doubtful whether the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa belonged to the Sāma-veda originally. He conjectures 2 that it existed already in the period during which the separate schools were as yet in the process of sifting, when there were as yet no Sāma-vedists in the later and stricter sense of the term. For out of 249 Mantras of the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa there are only four which are found in the Sāma-veda, as Prof. Knauer has shown, while a much greater number of these Mantras occur in the other Vedic Samhitās. I should be inclined to conclude the other way; just because the author of the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa presupposed a knowledge of the Samhitā of the Sāma-veda, but not of the other Vedas—or in other words because he destined his work for Sāma-vedins, he did not need to repeat what was in the Sāma-veda, but was compelled to incorporate in his compilation the Mantras out of the Rig-veda or of the Yagur-veda. Moreover, I would draw the same conclusions from the Mantras cited by Gobhila which are absent in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa, as I did from the Mantras which occur in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa, but are not to be found in the Sāma-veda. Those Mantras are all to be found in the Sāma-veda with the exception of those which Gobhila has in extenso, and which therefore could be omitted in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa. If we examine the thirteen Mantras collected by Prof. Knauer (p. 29), we find that in the case of nine of them the passage of the Sāma-veda (always of the first Ārākṣa of the Sāma-veda) where they are to be found is quoted by Prof. Knauer.

1 Any one who holds the view that the ritualistic formulas, which are not contained in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa, represent later extensions of the ceremonies in question, will do well to notice how in any one of the offerings of the Srauta ritual which we possess, both in the old description of the Samhitā and Brāhmaṇa texts, and in the more recent description of the Sūtra texts, Mantras have been added in more recent times to the former ones. I think that it would be difficult to draw from such observations any argument of analogy calculated to support Dr. Knauer’s opinion as to the relation of the Mantras in Gobhila and in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa.

2 Introduction to his translation, p. 23.

1 Besides the reasons given below in opposition to this conjecture, I may be permitted to point out that this hypothesis is contrary to the whole chronology of the Grhyya literature which we endeavoured to arrive at in the general introduction. It is a priori extremely improbable that there was a Grhyya Samhitā at a time when there was as yet no Sāma-veda.

2 Viz. (according to Prof. Knauer’s alphabetical list of the Mantras of the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa) iman stomam arhate, M.-B. II, 4, 2 = Sv. I, 66; II, 414; tat savitur vareṣayam, M.-B. I, 6, 29 = Sv. II, 812; bharāmedhham, M.-B. II, 4, 3 = Sv. II, 415; sakema tvā, M.-B. II, 4, 4 = Sv. II, 416.

3 Notice that of the four exceptional cases which we put together in the previous note, three cases are Mantras which are found only in the second Ārākṣa of the Sāma-veda, not in the first (cf. above, p. 3, note 1). The fourth verse (M.-B. II, 4, 2) is to be found in the first Ārākṣa, it is true, but it stands closely related to two verses which are not to be found in that Ārākṣa (M.-B. II, 4, 3, 4). This explains why it was put into the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa, as well as those two verses.
The four other cases are:

rikam sāma yagāmahe, Gobh. III, 2, 48.
tak kakshur devahitam, III, 8, 5.
sam anyā yanti, III, 9, 7.
pragāpataye, IV, 7, 36.

Of these Mantras the first is contained in the Sāma-veda (I, 369) just as the nine first-mentioned ones; the second is quoted by Gobhila in extenso; the third is to be found in the Āraṇyaka division of the Sāma-veda I (vol. ii, p. 292, ed. Bibl. Ind.); in the fourth finally the text is corrupt; it is intended for the verse out of the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa Pragāpate na tvad etāny anyak. Thus the four apparent exceptions all vanish, and we have in the Mantras which are absent in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa a new proof that this text belongs to the literature of the Sāma-veda.¹

Thus, according to my view, we may describe the origin of the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa as follows. The Sāma-veda contained in its Samhitā a much smaller number of Mantras applicable to the Grīhya rites than either the Rig-veda or the Yajur-veda; the peculiar character of the Sāman texts, intended for musical recitations at the most important sacrificial offerings, was quite remote from the character of formulas suitable for the celebration of a wedding, for the birth of a child, for the consecration of fields and flocks. Hence it is that, to a much greater extent than Āṣvvalāyana or Pāraskara, Gobhila mentions Mantras for which a reference to the Samhitā was not sufficient; and this led to the compiling of a separate Samhitā of such Grīhya-mantras, which presupposes the Grīhya-sūtra, just as the latter presupposes this Samhitā. The almost perfect agreement of the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa with Gobhila furnishes a valuable warrant for the good preservation of the two texts; of small discrepancies I have noted only two: Mantra-Brâhmaṇa I, 6, 15, the formula āgaṇtrā samaganaṁahi is given for the ceremony of the Upanayana, while Gobhila does not prescribe this Mantra for this ceremony, although other Grihya texts do; and secondly, the Mantra-Brâhmaṇa II, 5, 1–7 does not consist of six verses as Gobh. IV, 6, 5–6 allows us to assume, but of seven verses.

In concluding this introduction notice is to be drawn to the fact that the text of Gobhila has preserved for us the traces of a division differing from the one into four Prapâthakas which is handed down by tradition: in a number of places certain Sūtras or the last words of certain Sūtras are set down twice, a well-known way of indicating the close of a chapter. This repetition, besides occurring at the end of the first, third, and fourth Prapâthaka (not at the end of the second), is to be found in the following places which become more frequent towards the close of the work: I, 4, 31; III, 6, 15; IV, 1, 22; 4, 34; 5, 34; 6, 16.
GRHYA-SUTRA OF GOBHILA.

Prapathaka I, Kandika 1.

1. Now henceforth we shall explain the domestic sacrifices.
2. He should perform (the ceremonies) wearing the sacrificial cord on his left shoulder and having sipped water.
3. During the northern course of the sun, at the time of the increasing moon, on an auspicious day, before noon: this he should know as the (proper) time (for performing the ceremonies).
4. And as the prescription (is stated with regard to the time of the single ceremonies).
5. All (ceremonies) are accompanied by the Anvaharya (Sraddha).

1, 1-4. Comp. Khadira-Grihya i, i, 2. 5. 7.
5. I cannot give this translation of the words 'sarvany evan-vaharyavanti' without expressing my doubts as to whether the commentator, whom I have followed, is right. He says: 'anu paskad ahriyate yasmat prakritam karma iti, anu paskad ahriyate yat prastutat (prakritat?) karmena iti kahvaharyam nandimukhvaridham dakshinah lokyate.' It is evident that the first explanation of anvaharya as a ceremony after which the chief sacrifice follows, is inadmissible. Below, IV, 4, 3, 4, Gobhila himself defines the Anvaharya Sraddha as a monthly ceremony (comp. Manu III, 123; Max Muller, India, p. 240); it is, consequently, different from a Sraddha accompanying each Grihya sacrifice. The Sloka which the commentary quotes from a 'grhyantara' seems to me not to remove the doubt; I think rather that it contains a speculation based on this very passage of Gobhila, taken in the sense in
6. At the end (of each ceremony) he should feed worthy (Brâhmanas) according to his ability.

7. A student, after he has studied the Veda, when going to put the last piece of wood (on the fire),—

8. Or to seize a wife's hand (i.e. to marry her),—

9. Should fetch water from a hidden place, should sweep a place which is inclined towards north-east, or which is level, and should besmear it (with cow-dung). Beginning from the centre of it he should draw a line from west to east, (another line) from south to north which touches that line at its western end, and three lines from west to east (touching the northwards-turned line at three different points) in its midst (i.e. at neither of its ends). He then should besprinkle (those lines with water).

10. In this way the Lakshana (i.e. the preparation of the place for the sacred fire) is performed everywhere.

11. With the words 'Bhûr, bhuvah, svah,' they carry the fire forward (to that place) so that they have it in front of them.

12. Or after the householder has died, the chief which the commentator takes it, and on the Sûtras IV, 4, 3. 4. Thus I rather believe that we ought to understand anvâhârya as a mess of food like that offered after the darsapûrṇamâsau sacrifices to the officiating priests (Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmondsofper, 133), and I propose to translate: All (sacrifices) are followed by (the offering of) the Anvâhârya food (to the priest).

7. The text goes on to treat of the setting up of the domestic fire. Khâdîra-Grîhya I, 3, 1.

12. I have followed in the translation of parameshthikaranam the
(of the family) should do it (i.e. he should set up the sacred fire).

13. In this way, on the coincidence of an (auspicious) Tithi and an (auspicious) Nakshatra, (or of such a Nakshatra) and a Parvan—

14. On the full-moon day or on the new-moon day: then he should celebrate the setting up of his (sacred domestic) fire.

15. He should get fire from a Vaisya’s house or from a frying-pan, and should set it up (as his sacred fire);

16. Or (he should fetch it) from the house of one who offers many sacrifices, be it a Brâhmaṇa, or a Râganya, or a Vaisya.

17. Or he may kindle another fire by attrition and may set it up.

18. That is pure, but it does not bring prosperity.

19. He may do what he likes (of the things stated as admissible in the last Sūtras).

20. When he puts (at the end of his studentship) the last piece of wood (on the fire), or when he sacrifices when going to seize the hand of a wife, that fire he should keep.

21. That becomes his (sacred) domestic fire.

22. Thereby his morning oblation has been offered.

way indicated by the Grihya-samgraha I, 77, and by Sāṅkhâyana (I, 1, 5): prete vâ grihapatau svayam gyâyân. I think the paramesh/hit is the same person as the gyâyân. The commentary gives a different explanation: paramesh/hit agnir ity ââkshate, tasya paramesh/hino gneh karanaṃ yathoktena vidhinâ svâkaranaṃ.

20, 21. Khâdîra-Grihya I, 5, 1. 2. Comp. also above, Sûtras 7 and 8.

22. I.e. in the first of the two cases mentioned in Sûtra 20, the
23. Beginning from that time the sacrificing (of regular morning and evening oblations) in the domestic fire is prescribed, so that he begins with an evening oblation.

24. Before the time has come for setting the fire in a blaze, he should fetch in the evening and in the morning from a hidden place the water with which the different acts (such as sipping water) are performed.

25. Or (he should fetch water only) in the evening.

26. Or he should draw it out of a water-pot or of a barrel.

27. Before sunset he should set the fire in a blaze, and sacrifice the evening oblation after sunset.

28. In the morning he should set the fire in a blaze before sunrise, and should sacrifice the morning oblation before sunrise or after it.

KĀNDIKĀ 2.

1. He takes as his ṛgñopavīta (i.e. sacrificial cord) a string, or a garment, or simply a rope of Kusa grass.

Putting of fuel on the fire, and in the second case, the oblations of fried grain, &c., prescribed for the wedding, are considered as the sacrificer’s morning oblation in his newly-established Gṛhya fire, so that the regular oblations have to begin with the śāyamāhuṭi.

2, 1–4. Rules regarding the Upavīta. Khāḍira-Gṛhya I, 1, 4–6. Compare the detailed description of the nine threads of which the Upavīta-string should consist, in the Gṛhya-samgraha II, 48 seqq. A string was evidently considered as the regular and preferable form of the Upavīta; with regard to the second kind of Upavīta mentioned in Śūtra 1, the commentary says, ‘A garment (is used),
2. Raising his right arm, putting the head into (the upavîta), he suspends (the cord) over his left shoulder, so that it hangs down on his right side: thus he becomes yagñopavîtin.

3. Raising his left arm, putting the head into (the upavîta), he suspends it over his right shoulder, so that it hangs down on his left side: thus he becomes prâktînâvîtin.

4. Prâktînâvîtin, however, he is only at sacrifices offered to the Manes.

5. Having gone in a northern direction from the fire, having washed his hands and feet, and having seated himself, he should sip water three times and wipe off (the water) twice.

6. Having besprinkled his feet (with water) let him besprinkle his head.

7. Let him touch the organs of his senses with water:

8. The two eyes, the nose, the two ears.

9. Whatever (limb of his body) requires his consideration (whether it is pure or not), that he should touch with water (i.e. with a wet hand).

10. Here they say:

11. Let him not touch (himself with water, or sip water) while walking,

12. Nor standing,

13. Nor laughing,

14. Nor looking about,

15. Nor without bending down, if the Upavîta has been lost, for instance, in a forest, and if it is impossible to get a string. A similar remark is given with reference to the third kind of Upavîta, the rope of Kusa grass.

5–32. Rules regarding the âkamana and upasparsana. Khâdira-Grîhya I, 1, 7–10; Manu II, 60 seqq.
16. Nor (throwing up the water) with his fingers,
17. Nor except with the (proper) Tîrtha,
18. Nor uttering a sound,
19. Nor without looking (at the water),
20. Nor with his shoulders put back,
21. Nor wearing a part of his under garment as if it were an upper garment,
22. Nor with warm water,
23. Nor with foamy water,
24. And in no case wearing sandals,
25. (Not) with a turban on his head (?),
26. (Not with his garment) tied round his neck,
27. And not stretching out his feet,
28. When he has finally touched (water) again, he becomes pure.
29. Let him, however, sip only water that reaches his heart.
30. For if he does otherwise, he remains impure.
31. Now the cases in which he has to touch (water) a second time.

17. As to the Tîrthas (or parts of the hand) sacred to the different deities or beings, comp. Vasishtha III, 64 seqq., &c. See also Manu II, 58.
20. According to the commentary he has to hold his hands between his knees. Comp. Sàñkhya-Grihya I, 10, 8. Thus the shoulders are brought forward.
21–27. These Sûtras form three regular Sloka hemistichs.
Only at the end of the second hemistich there is a metrical irregularity (sopânatkâh kvaâkit standing at the end of the verse).
25. Kâsaktikâh, which the commentary explains as a compound of ka, 'the head,' and âsaktikâ=âveshikâ.
29. In other texts (for instance, Manu II, 62; Vasishtha III, 31 seqq.) it is stated that a Brâhmaña should sip water that reaches his heart, a Kshatriya water reaching his throat, a Vaisya water that wets his palate; a Sûdra should only touch water with his lips.
32. Having slept, or eaten, or sneezed, or taken a bath, or drunk something, or changed (his garments), or walked on the high road, or gone to a cemetery, he should sip water and then sip water again.

Kāndikā 3.

1. Having put wood on the (sacred) fire, having swept (the ground) round it, he should, bending his right knee, pour out to the south of the fire his joined hands full of water with (the words), 'Aditi! Give thy consent!'

2. To the west with (the words), 'Anumati! Give thy consent!'

3. To the north with (the words), 'Sarasvati! Give thy consent!'

4. With (the words), 'God Savitri! Give thy impulse!' (Mantra-Brāhmaṇa I, 1, 1) he should sprinkle (water) round the fire once or thrice so as to keep his right side turned towards it—

5. Interchanging the points at which he begins and ends the (sprinkling of water), and sprinkling so as to encompass what he is going to offer (with the streams of water).

6. Let him then make oblations of the sacrificial food, be it prepared or raw, over the fire.

32. This Śūtra again forms a Sloka, though a slightly irregular Sloka.
3. Rules regarding the daily morning and evening sacrifice.
6. The sacrificial food is either kṛita (prepared) or akrīta (unprepared). A mess of boiled rice, for instance, is kṛita, rice grains are akrīta.
7. If it is raw, he should sacrifice after having washed it and having let the water drop off.

8. If it consists in curds or milk or rice gruel, (he should sacrifice it) with a brazen bowl, or with the pot in which the oblations of boiled rice are prepared, or also with the (sacrificial spoon called) Sruva;

9. In the evening the first (oblation) with (the formula), 'To Agni Sváhâ!' the second silently, in the middle and in the north-eastern part (of the fire);

10. In the morning the first (oblation) with (the formula), 'To Sûrya Sváhâ!' the second again silently, again in the middle and in the north-eastern part (of the fire).

11. Having put a piece of wood (on the fire), and having again sprinkled (water) round it, he should pour out again his joined hands full of water in the same way (as prescribed in the Sûtras 1–3); in the Mantras he says, 'Thou hast given thy consent' (instead of 'Give thy consent').

12. Having circumambulated the fire so as to turn his right side towards it, having poured out the remains of water, and filled the vessel again, and put it (in its proper place), (he may do) whatever his business is.

9. The first oblation is made in the middle, the second, sacred to Pragâpati (Sânkhâyana I, 3, 15, &c.), in the north-eastern part of the sacred fire. The tenth Sûtra of course is to be understood in the same way.

12. The water is that mentioned chap. 1, 24. With regard to
13. In that way, from that time (in which he has begun to offer the two daily sacrifices) he should sacrifice, or should have sacrificed, over the (sacred) domestic fire, till the end of his life.

14. Here now they say:

15. 'If they like, his wife may offer the morning and evening oblations over the domestic fire. For his wife is (as it were) his house, and that fire is the domestic fire.'

16. When the morning meal or the evening meal is ready, he should make (his wife) say, 'It is ready!'—

17. In an unbroken voice (?), having made himself pure,

18. He replies in a loud voice, 'Om!' Then in yathārtham the commentary says, 'yathārtham karmāpavargavihitam Vāmadevya-yānādikam prātarāhutipadvādvihitam brahma-yagñam vā kuryād iti vākyayeshah.' Similarly in the note on II, 4, 11 it is said, 'yathārtham iti karmanāḥ parisamāptir uāyate;' II, 8, 17: 'yathārtham tantrasamāpanam kuryāt,' &c. In my translation I have adopted the opinion of Professor Weber (Indische Studien, V, 375), according to whom yathārtham simply means, '(he should behave) as required by circumstances;' '(he should do) what happens to be his business.'

13. The last words are a gīvitāvabhrīthāt, which literally means 'till the Avabhrīthā bath of his life.' The Avabhrīthā bath is the bath taken at the end of certain sacrifices, so that the Avabhrīthā of life signifies death.

16–18. Khādira-Gṛhyā, l. l. 18, 19. In my translation of Sūtra 17 I have adopted, though not quite without doubt, the conjecture of Professor Roth given in Professor Knauer's note, p. 137. Professor Roth writes ritebhāṅgayā váśa or ritebhāhayā váśa: he says simply 'om,' and not 'ō-o-ō-ō-om.' According to the commentary Sūtra 17 would refer to the wife, not to the husband.

18. The MSS. give mākhya and mākṣhā. We ought to read, tan mā kṣhayity upāmsu. Comp. Āpastamba II, 2, 3, 11. a low voice: 'To that (food) I bring adoration. May it not fail!'

KÂNDIKÂ 4.

1. He then should silently offer the Balis.
2. Let him speak only what refers to the due preparation of the food. With guests he may converse, if he likes.
3. He then should take some portion of food which is fit for sacrifice, should pour over it some liquid fit for sacrifice (such as ghee, milk, or curds), and should sacrifice it silently in the fire with his hand.
4. The first oblation is sacred to Pragâpatî, the second to (Agni) Svishtakrit.
5. He then should offer the Balis, inside or outside (the Agnyagâra), having well cleansed the ground.
6. Let him pour out water once, and put down Balis in four places, and finally sprinkle once (water on the four Balis).
7. Or let him for each Bali which he puts down, sprinkle (water) before and afterwards.
8. What he puts down first, that is the Bali belonging to the Earth. What in the second place, to Vâyu. What in the third place, to the Visve devâs. What in the fourth place, to Pragâpatî.
9. Then he should offer other Balis (near) the water-pot, the middle (post, and) the door: the first Bali is sacred to the Waters, the second to the Herbs and Trees, the third to the Ether.

9. According to the commentary the first of these three Balis has
10. Then he should offer another Bali in the bed or in the privy. That Bali belongs either to Kâma or to Manyu.

11. Then (another Bali) on the heap of sweepings; that (belongs) to the hosts of Rakshas.

12. The remnants of the Balis he should sprinkle with water, and should pour them out towards the south from right to left; they belong to the Fathers.

13. Let him sacrifice in the fire sitting.

14. Let him make the oblation to the Fathers sitting; the other (Balis he may offer) as it happens.

15. He should, however, offer those Balis himself as long as he stays at home.

16. Or another person who must be a Brâhmana (should offer them for him).

17. Both the husband and his wife (should offer them):

18. This is the rule for householders.

19. The wife in the evening, the man in the morning: thus (it is stated).

20. He should offer such Balis of all food whatever, be it prepared for the Fathers, or for auspicious to be offered near the water-pot, the second near the middle door of the house, the third (comp. Gautama V, 16) in the air. With the genitives the word samîpe is supplied. It is difficult to understand why the author, if his intention had been to state three places in which the Balis had to be offered, should have mentioned only two. Thus I believe that the right explanation is that of Professor Knauer, who takes madhyama in the sense of the middle post of the house (comp. III, 3, 31).

11. The commentary explains avasalavi here, as is frequently the case, by pitritfrthena. I agree with the opinion pronounced in the Petersburg Dictionary, in rejecting this explanation.

purposes (for instance, for being offered to Brāhmaṇas), or for (ordinary) purposes.

21. Only in the case of a sacrifice (this rule) ceases.

22. If rice and barley are prepared for one and the same meal, he should, having offered (Balis) of the one or the other (kind of food), consider his duty as fulfilled.

23. If the food is cooked at different times for one meal, he should perform this Bali ceremony only once.

24. If food is prepared at different places for one family, he should perform this Bali ceremony only from (the food which is prepared in) the kitchen belonging to the householder.

25. However (of the persons belonging to the family) he whose food becomes ready before (that of the householder), (that person) should offer the prescribed portion in the fire, and give to a Brāhmaṇa his share (of the food), and then should eat himself.

26. He whose (food becomes ready) after (that of the householder), should only eat.

27. Here they say also:

28. 'At the end of that offering of Balis let him pronounce a wish. Then it will be fulfilled to him.'

29. He himself, however, should offer the Āsasya Bali, from the barley(-harvest) till the rice(-harvest), and from the rice(-harvest) till the barley(-harvest). This is called the Āsasya Bali.

22. Kāla I take, as the commentator does, for bhogananakāla.
23. Here again kāla occurs in the same sense. Comp. Khādira-Gṛhya I, 5, 34.
29. Khādira-Gṛhya I, 5, 37. The barley-harvest is in the hot season, the rice-harvest in autumn (see Zimmer, Altindisches Leben, 243). The sacrificer offers barley from the barley-harvest till the rice-harvest; and rice from the rice-harvest till the barley-harvest.
30. Thus he obtains long life.

31. When a donation has been made, he should offer a Bali of chaff, of the scum of boiled rice, and of water. This is sacred to Rudra. This is sacred to Rudra.

KÂNDIKÂ 5.

1. Now at the times of the new moon and of the full moon (the following ceremonies are performed).

2. Let him fast on that full-moon day (when the full moon rises) at the meeting (of day and night).

3. The following day, according to some (teachers).

4. And on that day on which the moon is not seen, (he should fast, considering it) as the new-moon day.

5. The ends of the half-months are the time for fasting, the beginnings for sacrifice.

6. With the sacrificial food of the new-moon

This Bali is called å-sasya, because it is offered until (å) the next crop (sasya) is ripe. As to the regulation that the sacrificer has to offer it himself, compare above, Sûtras 15-19.

31. Khâdîra-Grihya I, 5, 30. The repetition of the last words makes it probable that this Sûtra was at one time considered the end of the first book. Comp. Introduction, p. 11.

5. Description of the sacrifices of the full and new moon. Paradigm of the regular Sthâlipâka offering. The first twelve Sûtras of this chapter have been translated by Professor Weber, Ueber den Vedakalender namens Jyotisham, pp. 50 seq.

2. See the note below at Sûtra 10.

3. With these two Sûtras, 'sandhyâm paurnamásîm upavaset; uttarâm ity eke,' a passage should be compared which is identically found in the Aitareya (VII, 11), and in the Kaushitaka Brâhma (III, 1): pûrvâm paurnamásîm upavased iti Pâñgyam, uttarâm iti Kaushitakam.

6. The month is reckoned here, as is usually done, as beginning with the fortnight of the increasing moon.
sacrifice he celebrates the first half (of the month), with that of the full-moon sacrifice the second.

7. Full-moon is the greatest distance of sun and moon; new-moon is their nearest approach.

8. That day on which the moon is not seen, that he should take as the day of new-moon.

9. Sometimes he may also while (the moon) is (still) visible (accept it as the day of new-moon); for (already then the moon) has made its way.

10. The time of full-moon is reckoned in three ways: (when the full moon rises at) the meeting (of day and night), or when it rises after sunset, or when it stands high (in the sky at sunset).

11. Now on what day it becomes full—

12. The doctrine on this point has to be studied

7. Here begins a new exposition of the question of full and new moon which stands independently by the side of the former sections, and which Gobhila has not taken much care to weld together with them. Comp. Sūtra 10 with Sūtras 2 and 3, and Sūtra 8 with Sūtra 4.

10. The first of the three times is that mentioned in Sūtra 2. It seems to me not very safe to interpret sandhyā in that modern sense, in which sandhi is used, for instance, in the verse quoted by Mādhava, Weber, Jyotisā 51, so that it designates the meeting-point of the bright and of the dark fortnight (‘āvartane yadā sandhiḥ par-vapratipadō bhavet,’ &c.). If sandhyā were that, we should expect that the same word would occupy a similar position in the defin-tion of amāvasyā. I prefer, therefore, with the commentary, to understand sandhyā in its ancient sense, as the time which divides day from night. Thus sandhyā paunamāśi, the full-moon day, on which the moon rises at the meeting of day and night, stands in opposition to uttarā paunamāśi (Sūtra 2), or to astamitodītā (scil. paunamāśi, Sūtra 10), exactly in the same way as in the Brāhmaṇa passages quoted above (note on § 3) pūrvā paunamāśi is opposed to uttarā paunamāśi. The second and third cases are those of the full moon rising (shortly) after sunset, and of the moon becoming full when standing high in the sky.

separately. One should study it, or should ascertain (the exact time of) the Parvan from those who know it.

13. Now on the day which is the fast-day, on that day, in the forenoon, having offered his morning oblation, he besmears that surface on which the fire is placed, on all sides with cow-dung.

14. He then gets the pieces of wood ready (which are to be put on the fire)—of Khadira or of Palâsa wood.

15. If Khadira or Palâsa wood cannot be obtained, it may be wood—as far as it serves the purpose—as of any tree, with the exception of Vibhidaka, Tilvaka, Badhaka, Niva, Nimba, Rāgavriksha, Salmali, Aralu, Dadhittha, Kovidâra, Sleshmâtaka wood.

16. The Barhis consists of Kusa grass cut off at the points at which the blades diverge from the main stalk.

17. (The blades should be) cut off near the roots at (the ceremonies directed to) the Fathers.

18. If that (i.e. Kusa grass) cannot be obtained, (he may take) any kind of grass, with the exception of Sûka grass, of Saccharum reed, of such grass as is apt to break, of Balbaga grass, of Mutava, of Amphidonax reed, of Suntha.

19. (He should get ready the following things, viz.) Āgya, rice or barley to be cooked for the sacrifice, the pot in which the oblation of cooked rice (or barley) is prepared, the pot-ladle, the Sruva, the water fetched from a hidden place—

20. And the other things which we shall mention in the course of (our exposition of) the ritual.

19. As to anuguptā āpâh, see above, chap. 1, 9.
21. On that day he should not go away (from his house on a journey, &c.);

22. Even from a distant place he should return to his house.

23. (On that day) he may buy goods from others, but not sell (such goods).

24. Let him not speak much.

25. Let him strive to speak the truth.

26. In the afternoon husband and wife, after having bathed, should eat fast-day food which is pleasant to them. It should contain butter (and should be prepared) in the due way.

KÂNDIKÂ 6.

1. Thus has spoken Mânatantavya: 'Unoffered indeed becomes the offering of a man who does not eat fast-day food.

2. 'He becomes powerless. Hunger will attack him. He does not gain favour among people. His offspring will be perverse.

3. 'But he who eats fast-day food, becomes powerful. Hunger will not attack him. He gains

26. Khândra-Grhyâ II, r, 4, 6. The commentary explains kusalenâ: it should be easy to digest. Comp. below, II, r, 2: (dârân kurvîta) lakshaprarastân kusalenâ.

6, r. The teacher's name is spelt elsewhere Mânunatantavya, which seems to be the more correct spelling. The Khândra-Grhyâ (II, r, 5) has Mânadantavya. Dr. Knauer has called attention to several other blunders of the MSS., which are unusually frequent just in this passage. For I have no doubt that in spite of the unanimous agreement of the MSS., we are to change mânushyâ-hutir into mânushasâyâhutir, and I think it very probable, to say the least, that in Sûtra 4 kâmayetaupavasathikam should be corrected into kâmayeyâtâm aupavasathikam, though here the singular could possibly be defended by very faithful believers in the authority of the MSS. favour among people. His offspring will be still more blessed.

4. 'Therefore (husband and wife) should eat fast-day food which is pleasant to them.'

5. Let them sleep that night on the ground.

6. They should spend that night so as to alternate their sleep with waking, entertaining themselves with tales or with other discourse.

7. But they should avoid doing anything unholy (such as cohabiting together).

8. It is said, that when on a journey, he should not fast.

9. For (say they, in that case) the observance has to be kept by his wife.

10. Let him do (herein) what he likes.

11. In the same way also one who has set up the (Srauta) fires should fast—

12. And (he should observe) what is enjoined by the sacred tradition.

13. Now in the forenoon, after (the sacrificer) has offered his morning oblation, and has walked round the fire on its front side, and strewn to the south of the fire eastward-pointed Darbha grass—

14. (The Brahman) stations himself to the east of that (grass), facing the west, and with the thumb and the fourth finger of his left hand he takes one grass blade from the Brahman's seat and throws it away to the south-west, in the intermediate direction (between south and west), with (the words), 'Away has been thrown the dispeller of wealth.'

4. Or, which is pleasant to him? See the note on § 1.

14. The ceremonies stated in this Sūtra have to be performed by the Brahman. This is stated in the commentary, and the com-
15. Having touched water, he then sits down on the Brahman’s seat, with (the words), ‘I sit down on the seat of wealth.’

16. Facing the fire he sits silently, raising his joined hands, till the end of the ceremony.

17. Let him speak (only) what refers to the due performance of the sacrifice.

18. Let him not speak what is unworthy of the sacrifice.

19. If he has spoken what is unworthy of the sacrifice, let him murmur a verse, or a Yagus, sacred to Vishnu.

20. Or let him only say, ‘Adoration to Vishnu!’

21. If one wishes, however, to do himself the work both of the Hotri and of the Brahman, he should in the same way place on the Brahman’s seat a parasol, or an outer garment, or a water-pot, or a parison of parallel texts leaves no doubt as to the correctness of this view. Thus Hiranyakeshin says (I, 1): etasmin kâle brahmâ yajñopavítam krîtvâpa âkamyaparenâgnim dakshinâtikramya bhramasadanât trinam nirasya, &c. Comp. also the corresponding passages of the Srauta ritual given by Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmondsopfer, p. 17. I do not think it probable, however, that we should read brahmâsanât, so that it would be distinctly expressed by the text that the Brahman is the subject (comp. Dr. Knauer’s Introduction, p. viii). For we read in this same Sûtra brahmâsanât trinam abhisamgrihya; in Sûtra 15, brahmâsana upavisati; in Sûtra 21, brahmâsane nidhâya: of these passages it is in the second made probable by the sense, and it is certain in the third, that brahmâsana is to be understood as a compound equal to brahmasadana. Thus it would, in my opinion, be unnatural not to explain it in the same way also in the first passage. Parâvasu is opposed to Vasu (Sûtra 15) in the same way as some texts, for instance Âpastamba, oppose Parâgvasu to Arvâgvasu.

21. ‘In the same way’ refers to the ceremonies stated in Sûtras bolster of Darbha grass, and should return in the same way (in which he has gone to the Brahman's seat), and then should perform the other (duties).

KÂNDIKÂ 7.

1. He then washes the mortar, the pestle, and the winnowing basket, strews to the west of the fire eastward-pointed Darbha grass, and puts (the mortar, &c.) on (that grass).

2. He then pours out, with a brazen vessel or with the pot in which the oblations of cooked rice are prepared, the grain destined for sacrifice, rice or barley—

3. Once pronouncing the name of the deity (to whom the offering will be made): 'Agreeable to such and such (a deity) I pour thee out;' twice (it is done) silently.

4. Then to the west, with his face turned eastward, he begins to husk the grain, with his right hand lying over the left.

5. After the grain has three times been winnowed, he should wash it thrice (if it is destined) for the gods, they say, twice, if for men, once, if for the Fathers.

6. Having put a (Darbha) purifier (into the pot in which the oblation is to be prepared), he should pour the grain (into it).

7. He should cook the mess of sacrificial food so that it is well cooked, stirring it up (with the pot-ladle) from left to right.

8. When it has been cooked, he should sprinkle (Âgya) on it, should take it from the fire towards the north, and should again sprinkle (Âgya) on it.

9. Having put wood on the fire, he should strew Kusa grass round it on all sides, to the east, to the south, to the north, to the west—

10. On all sides in three layers or in five layers—

11. Thick, so that always an uneven number (of blades) are put together.

12. (He should strew) eastward-pointed grass, covering the roots with the points.

13. Or he should strew it to the west (of the fire), and should draw (some of the grass which he has strewn) from the south end and (some) from the north end, in an easterly direction.

14. He should (arrange the grass so as to) lay the points of the southern blades uppermost.

15. This rule for strewing (grass) round (the fire is valid) for all (ceremonies) at which oblations are made.

16. Some lay also branches of Sami wood or of Parna wood round (the fire).

11. This seems to me the most probable translation of ayuga masamhatam, on which expression Dr. Knauer's note on pp. viii seq. of his Introduction should be compared. Comp. Hillebrandt, pp. 64 seq.

13-14. This is the same way of strewing the grass which is described in the Mânava-Grîhya I, 10, 5; Khâdira-Grîhya I, 2, 9.

17. To the north (of the fire) a Sruva full of water (is placed): this is the Pranata water;
18. If there is (such water). Or it may be dispensed with, say some (teachers).
19. Having put the mess of cooked food on the Barhis, and put wood (on the fire), he prepares the Âgya.
20. (He may take) ghee, or oil made from Tila seeds, or curds, or milk, or rice gruel.
21. From that same Barhis (he takes two Darbha blades and) makes purifiers (of them), of the length of one span.
22. Putting an herb between (them and the instrument with which he cuts them), he cuts them off, not with his nail, with (the words), 'Purifiers are ye, sacred to Vishnu.'
23. He then wipes them with water, with (the words), 'By Vishnu's mind ye are purified.'
24. Having purified (the Âgya by pouring it into the Âgya pot, over which he has laid a Darbha purifier), he purifies it (in the pot) with the two northward-pointed purifiers (in the following way):
25. Holding them with his two thumbs and fourth fingers, he purifies (the Âgya) three times, from west to east, once with the Yagus: 'May the god Savitri purify thee with this uninjured purifier, with the rays of the good sun;' twice silently.

20. All the substances which are stated in this Sûtra can be considered as Âgya. Grihya-samgraha I, 106. 107.
26. He then should sprinkle them with water and should throw them into the fire.

27. Then, having put that Āgya on the fire, he should take it from (the fire) towards the north.

28. This is the way to prepare the Āgya.

KÂNDIKĀ 8.

1. To the east (is placed) the Āgya, to the west the mess of cooked food.

2. Having sprinkled (water) round (the fire) and poured Āgya on the mess of cooked food, he begins to sacrifice simply with the pot-ladle, picking out portions of the sacrificial food (without 'underspreading' and pouring Āgya over the Havis).

3. If he intends, however, to sacrifice so as to 'underspread' (the Havis with Āgya) and to pour (Āgya) over it, let him sacrifice first the two Āgya portions (in the following way):

4. He should take four portions of Āgya—five portions (are taken) by the Bhrigus—and should sacrifice from west to east, on the northern side with (the formula), 'To Agni Svāhā!' on the southern side with (the words), 'To Soma Svāhā!'

5. He then cuts off (two or three Avadānas) from the Havis, having 'spread under' (Āgya).

6. (Two Avadānas) from the middle and from the east side, if he (belongs to the families who) make

8. He anoints the places from which he has cut them off (with Âgya) in order that the strength (of the Havis) may not be lost.

9. He should sacrifice over the middle of the fire with (the words), ‘To Agni Svâhå!’—

10. Once or thrice, in that same way.

11. Now for the Svishṭakrit (oblation), after having ‘spread under’ (Âgya), he cuts off once a very big (Avadâna) from the eastern part of the northern part (of the Havis). Twice he should sprinkle (Âgya) on it.

12. But if he (belongs to the families who) make five Avadânas, he should ‘spread under’ twice, and cut off (the Avadâna), and sprinkle (Âgya) on it twice.

13. He does not anoint the place from which he has cut off, in order that the strength (of the Havis) may be lost.

14. With the words, ‘To Agni Svishṭakrit the Abhîghârama (Sûtra 7) are reckoned as two Avadânas, so that they form together with the two or three portions cut off from the Havis, four or five Avadânas respectively. On the difference of the families regarding the number of Avadânas, comp. Weber, Indische Studien, X, 95.

17. If different sacrifices are performed together, there is only one sweeping (of the ground) round (the fire) (chap. 3, 1), one (putting off) fuel (on the fire) (chap. 7, 19), one Barhis, one sprinkling (of water) round (the fire) (chap. 8, 2), one Āgya, and one offering of the two Āgyabhāgas (chap. 8, 3).

18. Having cut off (the Avadānas) for all (the single sacrifices), he sacrifices the Svishtakrīt oblation only once.

19. After he has sacrificed, he should throw that pot-ladle (which he has used in the preceding ceremonies) into the fire.

20. Or having washed it, he should take with it (the rest of the sacrificial food), and should eat that.

given by Hillebrandt, l.l. 119, note 3. The Khādīra-Gṛīhya has prāgudīṣṭyām.

19. According to the commentary, etad would belong to sau-viśaḥakrītām (Śūtra 18): 'After he has sacrificed that, he should throw the pot-ladle into the fire.' The comparison of Baudhāyana I, 17, 23, atraitan mekhṣaṁ āhavanīye nupraharati (Hillebrandt, p. 119, note 3), shows that the commentary is wrong, and that etad belongs to mekhṣaṁ.
21. The Sruva he should not throw into the fire, say some (teachers).

22. By one who has not set up the sacred fires, the mess of cooked food should be offered to Agni at the festivals both of the full and of the new moon.

23. To Agni, or to Agni and Soma, by one who has set them up, at the full-moon (sacrifice);

24. To Indra, or to Indra and Agni, or to Mahendra, at the new-moon (sacrifice).

25. Or also one who has set up the sacred fires, should offer it to Agni at the festivals both of the full and of the new moon.

26. Having put a piece of wood (on the fire), and having afterwards sprinkled (water) round (the fire), he performs the Yagñavâstu ceremony (in the following way):

27. From that same Barhis he should take a handful of Kusa grass, and should dip it thrice into the Âgya or into the Havis, the points, the middle, and the roots, with (the words), 'May the birds come, licking what has been anointed.'

28. He then should besprinkle that (handful of grass) with water, and should throw it into the fire with (the verse), 'Thou who art the lord of cattle, Rudra, who walkest with the lines (of cattle), the manly one: do no harm to our cattle; let this be offered to thee! Svâhå!'

29. This (ceremony) they call Yagñavâstu.

KÂNDIKÂ 9.

1. He then should take away the remnants of the Havis in a northern direction, should take them out (of the vessel in which they are), and should give them to the Brahman.

2. He should try to satiate him.

3. They say indeed with regard to sacrifice: ‘Through the Brâhmaṇa’s being satiated (with sacrificial food) I become satiated myself.’

4. Then (he should give to the Brahman) what other food has just become ready.

5. Then he should try to gain the favour of Brâhmaṇas by (gifts of) food.

6. A full vessel constitutes the fee for the sacrifice; that he should give to the Brahman.

7. A brazen vessel or a wooden cup which has been filled with food, with prepared food or with raw food, or even only with fruits: this they call a full vessel.

8. The Brahman is the only officiating priest at the Pâkayagaṇās.

9. (The sacrificer) himself is Hotri.

10. A full vessel (see Sūtra 7) is the lowest sacrificial fee at a Pâkayagaṇa.

11. The highest is unlimited.

12. Thus Sudās Paigavana, after having offered the sacrifice of a mess of cooked food to Indra and Agni, gave one hundred thousand (cows as the sacrificial fee).

13. Now if he should not be able to get for the morning or for the evening oblation, or for the sacrifices of the full or of the new moon at his (sacred) domestic fire, any substance fit for sacrifice or a person who could sacrifice (instead of himself, if he is prevented): what ought he to do?

14. Until the evening oblation the (time for the) morning oblation is not elapsed, nor the (time for the) evening oblation until the morning oblation. Until the new moon the (time for the) sacrifice of the full moon is not elapsed, nor the (time for the) sacrifice of the new moon until the full moon.

15. During that interval he should try to obtain sacrificial food or to find a sacrificer.

16. Or (if he does not succeed in this) he should cook fruits or leaves of trees or herbs which are sacrificially pure, and should sacrifice them.

17. Or he should at least sacrifice water; thus has said Pākayagnā, son of Iḍā. For (even if he offers only water) the sacrifice has been performed.

18. And there is an expiation for one who has not sacrificed.

16 seqq. Khādira-Grhīya II, 2, 10 seqq. In this teacher Pākayagnā, son of Iḍā, whose opinion on the performance of certain Pākayagnās is here stated, we have of course to see a fictitious sage of the same kind with the well-known Rishi Pragātha, to whom the authorship of a number of Śūktas in the Pragātha book (Rigveda, Mandala VIII) is ascribed.

18, 19. By the repetition of iti these Sūtras seem to be characterised as continuing the statement of Pākayagnā’s opinion; comp. Dr. Knauer’s Introduction, p. xvii. As to Sūtra 18, comp. Sānkhyāyana-Grhīya I, 3, 9.
19. And, (says Pākayagṛṇa,) a Brāhmaṇa should not omit to keep his vow.

20. Here they say also:

21. He should keep (his vow) during that time in which he does not sacrifice, by abstaining from food.

22. When he then has obtained (the necessary substances for sacrificing), he should make up for the (omitted) oblations.

23. For thus also his vow has been duly kept.

24. These rules (which have been given with regard to the sacrifices of the full and new moon) are valid for the Havis oblations which will be stated hereafter.

25. After the end of the Mantra follows the word Svāhā.

26. At Āgya oblations he should only prepare that Āgya (chap. 7, 28) and should sacrifice it, picking out portions of it. (He should) not (sacrifice) the two Āgya portions nor the Svishtakṛit.

27. At Āgya oblations he should, if no special rule is given, sacrifice with the Mahāvyāhrītis before and after (the chief ceremonies).

22. 'He should count the omitted (oblations), should pour the corresponding number of oblations into his vessel, and should sacrifice them in the due way all at once with one Mantra. In the same way also the other oblations (belonging to other gods).’ Karmapradīpa.

24. Is Havis here used as opposed to Āgya (Sūtra 26), in the same way in which Kātyāyana says (Sraut. I, 9, 1. 20): 'vṛiḥfn yavān vā havishi; ubhayata āgyam havishāḥ?' Comp. below, III, 8, 10; Ārvalāyana-Gṛihya I, 10, 26.

the word āgyāhutishu in the beginning of Sūtra 26, and it would have been superfluous if he had repeated it in connection with the words nāgyabhāgau na svishakrīt. In the corresponding Sūtras of the Khādīra the case was different, and there the words nāgyabhāgau na svishakrīt inevitably required the addition of a word like āgyāhutishu, by which to show which class of sacrifices it was which required no Āgyabhas and no Svishakrīt. The following word in the Khādīra text, however, anādese, should be referred, against tradition, to Sūtra 13, as is shown by the comparison of Sāṅkhāyanā-Grīhya I, 12, 13.

28. At the wedding, oblations are made first with the three single Mahāvyāhrīs, afterwards with the Mahāvyāhrīs together; see below, II, 1, 25, 26. PRAPÂTHAKA II, KÂNDIKÂ 1.

1. Under a propitious Nakshatra let him take a wife—

2. Who should possess the auspicious characteristics in due way.

3. If he can find no such (woman, he should take) earth-clods—

4. From an altar, a furrow, a pool, a cow-stable, a place where four roads meet, a gambling-place, a place where corpses are burnt, and from sterile soil;

5. A ninth (earth-clod) mixed of all.

6. (These he should make) equal (and should) make marks at them.

7. Taking them in his hand he should offer them to the girl, and (reciting the formula): 'Right alone is the first; right nobody oversteps; on right this earth is founded. May N.N. become this universe!' —he should pronounce her name and should say: 'Take one of these.'

8. If she takes one of the first four (clods), he should marry her,

1, 1–4. Description of the wedding. Comp. Indische Studien, V, 288, 305 seq.; 312 seq.; 368 seq.

2. In translating kusâlena I have been guided by the comparison of I, 5, 26 (comp. Böhtlingk-Roth, s.v. kusâla). The commentary understands the Sûtra in a different way. He should take a woman who possesses auspicious characteristics commended by one versed (kusâla) in the characteristics of women. If he can find no such person who is able to judge, he should, &c. (Sûtra 3).

9. And according to some (teachers) also, if (she takes) the mixed one.

10. After she has been washed with Kltaka, barley and beans, a friend should besprinkle her three times at her head, so that her whole body becomes wet, with Surâ of first quality, with (the formula), ‘Kâma! I know thy name. Intoxication thou art by name,’ &c. (Mantra-Brâhmaṇa I, 1, 2). (In the passage of the formula), ‘Bring hither N.N.,’ he should pronounce the husband’s name. (The Mantras should have) the word Svâhâ at their end. With the two following verses he should wash her private parts.

11. That has to be done by (female) relatives (of the bride).

12. At the wedding wood has been put on the fire to the east of the house, on a surface besmeared (with cow-dung).

13. Then one of the people who assist at the wedding, fills a cup with ‘firm’ water, and having walked with the water-pot round the fire on its front side, silent, wrapped in his robe, he stations himself to the south (of the fire), facing the north.

14. Another person with a goad (walks in the same way and stations himself in the same place).

10. ‘With Kltaka,’ &c., means, with water into which Kltaka, &c., has been thrown; comp. Grihya-samgraha II, 15. ‘Surâ of first quality’ is Surâ prepared from molasses; see Grihya-samgraha II, 16. Comp., however, also Grihya-samgraha II, 41.

15. They place roasted grain mixed with Samti leaves, to the amount of four handfuls, in a winnowing basket behind the fire,

16. And an upper mill-stone.

17. Now (the girl) whose hand he is going to seize, has been washed, (her whole body) including her head.

18. The husband should put on her a (new) garment which has not yet been washed, with the verse, 'They who spun' (Mantra-Brâhmaṇa I, i, 5), and with (the verse), 'Put on her, dress her' (l. i. 6).

19. Leading forward (from the house to the sacred fire, the bride) who is wrapped in her robe and wears the sacrificial cord over her left shoulder, he should murmur (the verse), 'Soma gave her to the Gandharva' (MB. I, i, 7).

20. While she, to the west of the fire, pushes forward with her foot a rush-mat or something else of that kind, veiled (with clothes), he should make her say: 'May the way which my husband goes, be open to me.'

21. If she does not murmur (these words out of shame, &c.), he should murmur (them, saying), 'To her' (instead of 'To me').

22. She should make the end of the rush-mat (Sutra 20) reach the end of the Barhis.

23. On the east end of the rush-mat she sits down to the right of the bridegroom.

17–19. Khâdira-Grihya I, 3, 6. Yagñopavîtinîm in Sûtra 19 means, according to the commentary, that she wears her outer garment arranged like the sacrificial cord, over her left shoulder; for women are not allowed to wear the sacrificial cord itself.

24. While she touches his right shoulder with her right hand, he sacrifices six oblations of Āgya with (the verse), 'May Agni go as the first,' and the following (verses) (MB. I, 1, 9–14)—

25. And (three oblations) with the Mahāvyāhṛītis, one by one;

26. A fourth with (the four Mahāvyāhṛītis) together.

KĀNDIKĀ 2.

1. After the sacrifice they both arise.

2. The husband passes behind her back, stations himself to the south, with his face turned to the north, and seizes the woman's joined hands.

3. (Standing) to the east (of the girl) her mother or her brother, having taken the roasted grain, should make the bride tread on the stone with the tip of her right foot.

4. The bridegroom murmurs: 'Tread on this stone' (MB. I, 2, 1).

5. Her brother filling once his joined hands with roasted grain, pours it into the bride’s joined hands.

6. After (Āgya) has been spread under and poured over (the fried grain), she sacrifices that in the fire without opening her joined hands, with (the verse which the bridegroom [?] recites), 'This woman says' (MB. I, 2, 2).

7. (The verses), 'The god Aryaman,' and, 'Pū-shan’ (l. l. 3. 4) (are repeated) at the two following (oblations of fried grain).

8. After that sacrifice the husband, passing (behind her back), returns in the same way, and leads her round the fire so that their right sides are turned towards it, or a Brähmana versed in the Mantras (does the same), with (the verse), ‘The maid from the fathers’ (MB. I, 2, 5).

9. After she has thus been lead round, she stands as before (Sūtras 1. 2), and treads (on the stone) as before (Sūtra 3), and he murmurs the (Mantra) as before (Sūtra 4), and (her brother) pours (the fried grain into her hands) as before (Sūtra 5), and she sacrifices as before (Sūtra 6).

10. In the same way three times.

11. After (she) has poured the remnants (of the fried grain) into the fire, they make (her) step forward in a north-easterly direction with (the formula), ‘For sap with one step’ (MB. I, 2, 6. 7).

12. She should put forward her right foot (first) and should follow with the left.

13. (The bridegroom) should say (to her), ‘Do not put the left (foot) before the right.’

14. The lookers-on he should address with (the verse), ‘Auspicious ornaments wears this woman’ (l. l. 8).

15. To the west of the fire the water-carrier follows (their way) and besprinkles the bridegroom on his forehead, and also the other one (i.e. the bride),

8. As to the words ‘in the same way,’ see the second Sūtra of this chapter.

16. After she has been (thus) besprinkled, he puts up her joined hands with his left hand, seize with his right hand her right hand with the thumb, her hand being turned with the palm upwards, and murmurs these six verses referring to the seizing of (a girl’s) hand, ‘I seize thy hand’ (MB. I, 2, 10–15).

17. When (these verses) are finished, they carry her away—

1. To a convenient house of a Brâhmana, which is situated in a north-easterly direction.

2. There wood has been put on the (nuptial) fire.

3. To the west of the fire a red bull’s hide has been spread out, with the neck to the east and with the hair outside.

4. On that they make the woman, who has to keep silence, sit down.

5. And (there) she remains sitting until the stars appear.

6. When (somebody) has said that a star has appeared, (the husband) sacrifices six oblations of Ágya with the (six verses) commencing with (the verse), ‘In the junctions of the lines’ (l. l. 1, 3, 1–6).

7. The remnants of each oblation he should pour out over the bride’s head.

8. After the sacrifice they arise, go out (of the house), and he shows her the ‘firm star’ (i.e. the polar-star).

9. (Repeating the formula): 'Firm art thou. May I, N. N., become firm in the house of N. N., my husband'—she should pronounce her husband's and her own name.

10. And (he shows her besides the star) Arundhati.

11. (She says): 'I (N. N.) am held fast,' &c., as above (Sūtra 9).

12. He then addresses her with the verse, 'Firm is the sky' (MB. I, 3, 7).

13. After she has been addressed (thus), she respectfully calls her Guru by his Gotra name.

14. Thus she breaks her silence.

15. From that time through a period of three nights they should both avoid eating saline or pungent food, and should sleep together on the ground without having conjugal intercourse.

16. Here, they say, an Argha reception (should be offered to the young husband).

17. Some say (that this reception should be offered) when (the bridegroom and his companions) have arrived (at the house of the bride's father).

19. Or he should prepare on the following day a mess of cooked food, of which they eat together.

20. The deities to whom it belongs, are, Agni, Pragāpati, the Visve devās, and Anumati.

21. Having taken that food out (of the vessel in which it is), and having spread it out, he should touch one part of it with his hand, with (the verses), 'With the tie of food, with the jewel' (MB. I, 3, 8-10).

22. After he has eaten, and has given the rest to the wife, (they may do) what they like.

23. A cow is the sacrificial fee.

KĀNDIKĀ 4.

1. When she mounts the chariot, let him murmur the verse, 'Adorned with Kimsuka flowers, of Salmali wood' (MB. I, 3, 11).

2. On the way he should address crossways, rivers and unevennesses (of the soil), big trees, and burial grounds, with (the verse), 'May no waylayers meet us' (ibid. 12).

3. If the axle breaks, or something that is bound gets loose, or if the chariot is overturned, or if some other accident happens, they should put wood on the fire which they carry with themselves, should make oblations (of Ágya) with the Vyáhrvis, should procure a new piece (instead of that which has been damaged), and should besmear it with the remnants of the Ágya (that has been offered), with (the verse), 'He who without binding' (Sáma-veda I, 244).

4. Having sung the Vámadevya, he should mount (again).

5. When they have arrived, the Vámadevya (is sung).

6. When (the bride) has reached the house, Bráhmaṇa women of good character, whose husbands and sons are living, make her descend (from the chariot), and make her sit down on a bull's hide with (the verse which the husband recites), 'Here, ye cows, bring forth calves' (MB. I, 3, 13).

7. They should place a boy in her lap.

8. Into the joined hands of that (boy) they should throw lotus-roots (?),

9. Or fruits.

10. After she has made that boy rise, she sacrifices the eight 'firm' Ágya oblations with (the formula), 'Here is steadiness' (MB. I, 3, 14).

11. When she has finished, she puts a piece of wood (on the fire) and respectfully salutes the Gurus, according to seniority, with their Gotra names. Then they may do what they like.

KÅNDIKÅ 5.

1. Now (follow) the ceremonies of the fourth day.

2. Having put wood on the fire, he four times sacrifices expiatory Ågya oblations with (the formula), ‘Agni! Thou art expiation’ (MB. I, 4, 1)—

3. (And with the same formula), putting instead of Agni, Vâyu, Kåndra, and Sûrya;

4. A fifth oblation (with the names of the four gods) together, changing (in the Mantra the singular) into the plural.

5. The remnants of each oblation he should pour into a water-pot.

6. With that (Ågya) they besmear her body, including her hair and nails, remove (that water and Ågya by rubbing her), and wash her.

7. After three nights have passed, they should cohabit, according to some (teachers).

8. When she has had her monthly illness and the blood has ceased to flow, that is the time for cohabiting.

1. The beginning of the third month of pregnancy is the time for the Pumṣavana (i.e. the ceremony to secure the birth of a son).

2. In the morning, after she has been washed, sitting on northward-pointed Darbha grass, (all over her body) including her head, she sits down to the west of the fire on northward-pointed Darbha grass, facing the east.

3. Her husband, standing behind her, should grasp down with his right hand over her right shoulder, and should touch the uncovered place of her navel with the verse, ‘The two men, Mitra and Varuṇa’ (MB. I, 4, 8).

4. Then they may do what they like.

5. Then afterwards (the following ceremony should be performed).

6. In a north-easterly direction, having bought for three times seven barley corns or beans a Nyagrodha shoot which has fruits on both sides, which is not dry and not touched by worms, he should set that up.

7. (He buys it with the Mantras):

7. The first Mantra consists of seven sections; with each of
'If thou belongest to Soma, I buy thee for the king Soma.
'If thou belongest to Varuna, I buy thee for the king Varuna.
'If thou belongest to the Vasus, I buy thee for the Vasus.
'If thou belongest to the Rudras, I buy thee for the Rudras.
'If thou belongest to the Adityas, I buy thee for the Adityas.
'If thou belongest to the Maruts, I buy thee for the Maruts.
'If thou belongest to the Visve devás, I buy thee for the Visve devás.'

8. He should set it up with (the Mantra), 'Ye herbs, being well-minded, bestow strength on this (shoot); for it will do its work.' Then he should put grass around it, should take it, and place it in the open air.

9. Having washed a nether mill-stone, a student or a (wife) addicted (to her husband), a person who is a Brāhmaṇa by birth (only and not by learning), or a girl, pounds (that Nyagrodha shoot) without moving backward (the stone with which she pounds it).

KÂNDIKÂ 7.

1. Now (follows) the Śīmantakarana (or parting of the hair), in her first pregnancy.—

2. In the fourth, or sixth, or eighth month (of her pregnancy).

3. In the morning, after she has been washed, sitting on northward-pointed Darbha grass, (all over her body), including her head, she sits down to the west of the fire on northward-pointed Darbha grass, facing the east.

4. Her husband, standing behind her, ties (to her neck) an Udumbara branch with an even number of unripe fruits on it, with (the verse), 'Rich in sap is this tree' (MB. I, 5, 1).

5. He then parts her hair upwards (i.e. beginning from the front), the first time with Darbha blades, with (the word), 'Bhāh!' the second time with (the word), 'Bhuvah!' the third time with (the word), 'Svaḥ!'—

6. Then with (a splint of) Vīratara (wood) with this verse, 'With which Aditi's' (ibid. 2);

10. Let him say to her, 'What dost thou see?' and make her answer, 'Offspring!'
11. That (food) she should eat herself.
12. Brâhmaṇa women should sit by her side, pronouncing auspicious words (such as), 'A mother of valiant sons! A mother of living sons! A living husband's wife!'
13. Now (follows) the sacrifice for the woman in labour.
14. When the child is appearing, he strews (Darbha grass) round the fire and sacrifices two Âgyâ oblations with this verse, 'She who athwart' (MB. I, 5, 6), and with (the verse), 'Vipaskit has taken away' (ibid. 7).
15. 'A male he will be born, N. N. by name'—(in this passage of the last verse) he pronounces a name.
16. What that (name is), is kept secret.
17. When they announce to him that a son has been born, he should say, 'Delay still cutting off the navel-string and giving him the breast.'

20. In the same way the production of intelligence (is performed). He should give to eat (to the child) clarified butter.

21. Or he takes it with gold (i.e. with a golden spoon) and sacrifices it on the face of the boy with this verse, 'May Mitra and Varuna bestow intelligence on thee' (MB. I, 5, 9), and with (the verse), 'The lord of the seat, the wonderful' (Sáma-veda I, 171).

22. Let him say, 'Cut off the navel-string,' and, 'Give the breast (to the child).'

23. From that time let him not touch (his wife) until ten nights have passed.

KÅNDIKÅ 8.

1. On the third (Tithi) of the third bright fortnight after his birth, in the morning the father has the child washed, including his head, and after sunset, when the evening-red has disappeared, he worships (the moon), holding up his joined hands.

2. Then the mother, having dressed the son in a clean garment, hands him, from south to north, with his face turned to the north, to the father.

4. He then murmurs (the three verses), ‘Thy heart, O thou whose hair is well parted’ (MB. I, 5, 10-12), and after he has, with the words (standing at the end of verse 12), ‘That this son may not come to harm (and thus be torn) from his mother’—

5. Handed him, from south to north, to his mother, they may do what they like.

6. Then in the following bright fortnights (at the time) stated above (Sūtra 1), the father, filling his joined hands with water and turning his face towards the moon, worships it—

7. Letting (the water) flow (out of his joined hands) once with the Yagus, ‘What in the moon’ (MB. I, 5, 13), and twice silently. Then they may do what they like.

8. When ten nights have elapsed after (the child's) birth, or a hundred nights, or one year, the Nāmādheyarakaṇa (or giving a name to the child, is performed).

9. He who is going to perform (that ceremony—the father or a representative of the father), sits down to the west of the fire on northward-pointed Darbha grass, facing the east.

10. Then the mother, having dressed the son in a clean garment, hands him, from south to north, with his face turned to the north, to the performer (of the ceremony).

to the north (of him), on northward-pointed Darbha grass.

(of the child's birth), to the Nakshatra (of the child's birth), and to the (presiding) deity (of that Tithi and of that Nakshatra).

13. He then murmurs the Mantra, 'Who art thou? What person art thou?' (MB. I, 5, 14, 15), touching the sense-organs at (the boy's) head.

14. In (the passage of the Mantra), 'Enter upon

20. Having sacrificed to the deity (of the Tithi and of the Nakshatra respectively), he should sacrifice to the Tithi and to the Nakshatra.

21. When (the father) returns from a journey, or when (the son) begins to know, ‘This is my father,’ or when (the son) has been initiated, (the father) should grasp with his two hands his son round the head, and should murmur, ‘From limb by limb thou art produced’ (MB. I, 5, 16-18).

22. With (the formula), ‘With the cattle’s himkāra I kiss thee’ (I.1.19) he should kiss him. Then he may do what he likes.

KĀNDIKĀ 9.

1. Now follows the tonsure of the child's head, in the third year.

2. To the east of the house on a surface besmeared (with cow-dung) wood has been put on the fire.

3. There the following things have been placed:

4. To the south (of the fire) twenty-one Darbha blades, a brass vessel with hot water, a razor of Udumbara wood or a mirror, and a barber with a razor in his hand;

5. To the north, bull's dung and a mess of boiled rice with sesameum seeds which may be more or less cooked.

6. Let them fill vessels separately with rice and barley, with sesameum seeds and beans, and let them place (those vessels) to the east (of the fire).

7. The boiled rice with sesameum seeds (Sūtra 5) and all seeds (mentioned in Sūtra 6) are given to the barber.

8. Then the mother, having dressed the son in a clean garment, sits down to the west of the fire on northward-pointed Darbha grass, facing the east.

2. Comp. above, II, 1, 13.

5. Comp. above, chap. 7, 9; Gṛhya-samgraha II, 39.

6. I believe that four vessels were filled, one with rice, one with barley, one with sesameum seeds, and one with beans. The Dvandva compounds vṛihīyavais and tilamāshhais cannot justify the conclusion that one vessel was filled with rice and barley mixed, and another with sesameum seeds and beans, for the plural pātrāṇi shows that there were more than two vessels. Āṣvalāyana I, 17, 2, says, vṛihīyavamāṣhatilānām prīthak pūrṇararāvāṇī.
9. To the west (of her), facing the east, the person stations himself who is going to perform that (ceremony).

10. He then murmurs, fixing his thoughts on Savitri, looking at the barber, (the Mantra), ‘Hither has come Savitri with his razor’ (MB. I, 6, 1).

11. And fixing his thoughts on Vāyu, looking at the brass vessel with warm water, (he murmurs the Mantra), ‘With warm water, O Vāyu, come hither’ (ibid. 2).

12. Drawing water (out of that vessel) with his right hand he moistens the patch of hair on the right side (of the boy’s head) with (the Mantra), ‘May the waters moisten thee for life’ (ibid. 3).

13. With (the Mantra), ‘Vishnu’s tusk art thou’ (ibid. 4) he looks at the razor of Udumbara wood or at the mirror.

14. With (the Mantra), ‘Herb! Protect him!’ (ibid. 5) he puts seven Darbha blades, with their points turned towards (the boy’s) head, into the patch of hair on the right side of his head.

15. Pressing them down with his left hand, and seizing with his right hand the razor of Udumbara wood or the mirror, he touches with it (the Darbha blades), with the (Mantra), ‘Axe! Do no harm to him!’ (ibid. 6).

16. With (the Mantra), ‘With which Pūshan has shaven Brähhaspati’s head’ (ibid. 7), he moves forward (that razor or the mirror) three times towards the east without cutting (the hair); once with the Yagus, twice silently.

I have translated the Mantra according to the reading of Āvalāyana (Grhyta I, 17, 6) and Pāraskara (II, 1, 6): uṣmnena Vāya udakenēhi. Gobhila has udakenaidhi.
17. Then (the barber) with the razor of metal cuts the hair and throws (the cut off hair ends) on the bull’s dung.

18. In the same way (after the same rites have been performed), he cuts the patch of hair on the back-side;

19. And that on the left side.

20. He should repeat (when going to cut the hair on the back-side, and then again on the left side, the rites stated above), beginning from the moistening of the hair (Sūtra 12).

21. Grasping with his two hands (the boy) round his head he should murmur (the verse), ‘The three-fold age of Gamadagni’ (MB. I, 6, 8).

22. In the same way (the rites are performed) for a girl,

23. (But) silently.

24. The sacrifice, however, (is performed) with the Mantra.

25. Walking away from the fire in a northerly direction they have the arrangement of (the boy’s) hair made according to the custom of his Gotra and of his family.

26. They throw the hair on the bull’s dung (mentioned above), take it to the forest, and bury it.

27. Some throw them on a bunch (of grass or the like).

20. Thus on the back-side seven Darbha blades are put into the hair, and on the left side seven. This makes, together with the seven blades put into the hair on the right side (Sūtra 14), twenty-one, the number stated in Sūtra 4.

24. In the description of the Kūdākaraṇa given in this chapter no sacrifice is mentioned. See, however, I, 9, 28.

28. Then they may do what they like.
29. A cow constitutes the sacrificial fee.

8. There are four kinds of garments indicated, though only persons of three castes are concerned. The explanation of this apparent incongruence follows from Sûtra 12.

10. Tâmbala is stated to be a synonym for sana (hemp).

13. As the garments indicated in Sûtra 8 belong, in the order in which they are stated, to persons of the three castes respectively, thus also of the skins (Sûtra 9), of the girdles (Sûtra 10), and of the staffs (Sûtra 11); the first is that belonging to a Brâhmaṇa, the second, to a Kshatriya, and the third, to a Vaisya.

21. He causes (the student) to say, 'I have come hither to studentship' (ibid. 16).

22. In (the words), 'What is thy name' (ibid. 17), he asks after his name.

23. The teacher chooses for him a name which he is to use at respectful salutations,

24. (A name) derived from (the name of) a deity or a Nakshatra,

25. Or also of his Gotra, according to some (teachers).

26. Having let the water run out of his joined hands (over the student’s hands), the teacher with his right hand seizes (the student’s) right hand together with the thumb, with (the formula), ‘By the impulse of the god Savitri, with the arms of the two Asvins, with Pûshan’s hands I seize thy hand, N. N.!’ (ibid. 18).

22, 23. It is evident that the words tasyāhāryah belong to Sūtra 23, and not to Sūtra 22, to which the traditional division of the Sūtras assigns them. The corresponding section of the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa runs thus: 'What is thy name?'—'My name is N. N.!' It is not clear whether the student, being questioned by the teacher, had to indicate his ordinary name, and then to receive from the teacher his 'abhivādanīya nāmadheya,' or whether he had to pronounce, on the teacher's question, directly the abhvādanīya name chosen for him by the teacher. The commentary and the corresponding passage of the Khādira-Gṛihya (II, 4, 12) are in favour of the second alternative.

27. He then makes him turn round from left to right with (the formula), ‘Move in the sun’s course after him, N. N.!’ (ibid. 19).

28. Grasping down with his right hand over his right shoulder he should touch his uncovered navel with (the formula), ‘Thou art the knot of all breath’ (ibid. 20).

29. Raising himself (from the position implied in Sûtra 28, he should touch) the place near the navel with (the formula), ‘Ahura’ (ibid. 21).

30. Raising himself (still more, he should touch) the place of the heart with (the formula), ‘Krisana’ (ibid. 22).

31. Having touched from behind with his right hand (the student’s) right shoulder with (the formula), ‘I give thee in charge to Pragâpati, N. N.!’ (ibid. 23)—

32. And with his left (hand) the left (shoulder) with (the formula), ‘I give thee in charge to the god Savitri, N. N.!’ (ibid. 24)—

33. He then directs him (to observe the duties of Brahmaçarya, by the formula), ‘A student art thou, N. N.!’ (ibid. 25).

34. ‘Put on fuel. Eat water. Do the service. Do not sleep in the day-time’ (ibid. 26).

36. The student to the west, bending his right knee, turning his face towards the teacher, also on northward-pointed Darbha grass.

37. (The teacher) then ties round (the student) thrice from left to right the girdle made of Mūṅga grass and causes him to repeat (the verse), 'Protecting us from evil word' (ibid. 27), and (the verse), 'The protectress of right' (ibid. 28).

38. Then (the student) respectfully sits down near (the teacher) with (the words), 'Recite, sir! May the reverend one recite the Sāvitṛ to me.'

39. He then recites (the Sāvitṛ, ibid. 29) to him, Pāda by Pāda, hemistich by hemistich, and the whole verse,

40. And the Mahāvyāhṛītis one by one, with the word Om at the end (ibid. 30).

41. And handing over to him the staff, which should be made of (the wood of) a tree, he causes him to repeat (the formula), 'O glorious one, make me glorious' (ibid. 31).

42. Then (the student) goes to beg food,

43. First of his mother, and of two other women friends, or of as many as there are in the neighbourhood.

44. He announces the alms (received) to his teacher.

45. The rest of the day he stands silently.

46. After sunset he puts a piece of wood on the fire with (the Mantra), 'To Agni I have brought a piece of wood' (ibid. 32).

47. Through a period of three nights he avoids eating pungent or saline food.
48. At the end of that (period) a mess of boiled rice-grains (is offered) to Savitri.

49. Then he may do what he likes.

50. A cow constitutes the sacrificial fee.

End of the Second Prapâthaka.

49, 50. Dr. Knauer very pertinently calls attention to the fact that these Sûtras are not repeated, as is the rule with regard to the concluding words of an Adhyâya or Prapâthaka. Comp. chap. 8, 25 note.
Prapâthaka III, Kândikā 1.

1. Now (follows) the Godâna ceremony (or cutting of the beard), in the sixteenth year.

2. The cutting of the hair (and the beard) has been explained by the (description of the) Kûdâkarana (II, 9).

1, 1. After the description of the regular Upanayana here follow, in chaps. 1 and 2, statements regarding the special Vratas which the Vedic student has to undergo, or rather which he may undergo, in the time of his studentship. Comp. the corresponding statements on the Vratas of the Rigvedins, Sânkhyâya-Grîhya II, 11 and 12. By the followers of the Sâma-veda the ceremony of the Godâna, or cutting of the beard (comp. Sânkhyâya I, 28, 19; Pâraskara II, 1, 7 seq.; Ârvalâyana I, 18), was put into connection with their system of Vratas; the undergoing of the Godâna-vrata enabled the student to study the Pûrvârika of the Sâma-veda. In the commentary on Gobhila III, 1, 28 we find the following statements with regard to this Vrata as well as to the other Vratas mentioned in Sûtra 28: ‘The Upanayana-vrata has been declared to refer to the study of the Sâvitri (comp. Bloomfield’s notes on Grîhya-samgraha II, 42, 43); the Godâna-vrata, to the study of the collections of verses sacred to the gods Agni, Indra, and Soma Pavamâna (this is the Pûrvârika of the Sâma-veda); the Vrâtiika-vrata, to the study of the Âranyaka, with the exclusion of the Sukriya sections; the Âditya-vrata, to the study of the Sukriya sections; the Aupanishada-vrata, to the study of the Upanishad-Brâhma; the Gyaishâsaâmika-vrata, to the study of the Âgyadohas.’ The Vratas were connected with a repetition of the Upanayana ceremony (Sûtras 10 seq.) in the way stated in my note on Sânkhyâya II, 12, 1.—Khâdira-Grîhya II, 5, 1 seq.

2. Comp. Sânkhyâya I, 28, 19, ‘The Godânakarman is identical with the Kûdâkarman.’ Pâraskara II, 1, 7, ‘At the KesâANTA ceremony he says, “Hair and beard” (instead of “hair,” as at the Kûdâkarana).’
3. The student has his hair (and beard) cut himself.
4. He has all the hair of his body shaven.
5. The sacrificial fee given by a Brâhmana consists of an ox and a cow,
6. That given by a Kshatriya, of a pair of horses,
7. That given by a Vaisya, of a pair of sheep.
8. Or a cow (is given by persons) of all (castes).
9. A goat (is given) to the person who catches up the hair.
10. The Upanayana (connected with the Godânavrata and the other Vratas) has been declared by the Upanayana (treated of above, II, 10).
11. (The use of) a garment, however, which has not yet been washed, is not required (here),
12. Nor the adornment.
13. (One should) not initiate one who does not intend to keep the vow through one year.
14. Handing over to him (i.e. to the student) a staff, which should be made of (the wood of) a tree, he directs him (to observe the duties connected with his vow, in the following words):
15. 'Obey thy teacher, except in sinful conduct.
16. 'Avoid anger and falsehood,
17. 'Sexual intercourse,
18. 'Sleeping on high (bedsteads),
19. 'Performances of singing, dancing, &c., the use of perfumes and of collyrium,

3. At the Kûḍâkarama the child sits in the mother's lap and others perform the rites for him.
10. See the note on Sûtra 1.
11. Comp. above, II, 10, 7.
20. 'Bathing,
21. 'Combing the head, cleansing the teeth, washing the feet,
22. 'Shaving,
23. 'Eating honey and flesh,
24. 'Mounting a chariot yoked with cattle,
25. 'Wearing shoes in the village,
26. 'Svayam-indriya-mohanam.'
27. Wearing the girdle, going the rounds for alms, carrying a staff, putting fuel (on the fire), touching water, reverentially saluting (the teacher) in the morning: these are his standing duties.
28. The Godâna-vrata, the Vrâtiâ-vrata, the Âditya-vrata, the Apanishada-vrata, the Gyaish-thasâmika-vrata (last) one year (each).
29. Touching water in the evening and in the morning (is prescribed) for these (Vratas).
30. The Âditya-vrata, however, some do not undergo.
31. They who undergo it, wear one garment.
32. They allow nothing to be between (themselves and) the sun, except trees and (the roofs of) houses.
33. They do not descend into water deeper than knee-deep, except on the injunction of their teacher.

28. The meaning of these expressions has been explained in the note on Sûtra 1.
30. According to the commentary some study the Sukriyas as a part of the Âramyaka; these do not undergo the Âditya-vrata. Others, for instance the Kauthumas, separate the Sukriyas from the Âramyaka and keep a special vow, the Âditya-vrata, by which they are enabled to study those texts.
KĀNDIKĀ 2.

1. For the Mahānāmṇī verses (the Vrata is to be kept) twelve years,
2. (Or) nine, six, three (years).
3. These are the various possibilities.
4. Or also one year, according to some (teachers).
5. (In this case), however, the observances are enhanced.
6. (Keeping the Vrata through one year is allowed only) if (the student's) ancestors have learnt the Mahānāmṇī verses.
7. There is also a Brāhmaṇa of the Rauruki (Sākhā, in which it is said):
8. 'The mothers forsooth say to their sons, when they suckle them:
9. '“Become men, my little sons, who endeavour to accomplish the Sakvart-vrata!”'
10. During (the Vrata preparatory to the study of) these (i.e. the Mahānāmṇī verses), touching water at the time of each Savana (is prescribed).
11. Let him not eat in the morning before he has touched water.
12. In the evening, after he has touched water, he should not eat, before he has put the piece of wood on the fire.

2, 1. Regarding the Mahānāmṇī or Sakvart verses and the observances connected with their study, comp. Sānkhāyana II, 12 (see especially the note on II, 12, 13) and the sixth Adhyāya of that text. Khādīra-Grihya II, 5, 22 seq.
10. The rules as to 'touching water' have been given above, I, 2, 5 seq. The three Savanas or Soma-pressings of which the Soma sacrifice consists, are the prātaḥ-savana, the mādhyandina-savana, and the trīṭīya-savana, i.e. the morning Savana, the midday Savana, and the third or evening Savana.
12. Comp. above, II, 10, 46; III, 1, 27.
13. He should wear dark clothes.
14. He should eat dark food.
15. Let him be devoted to his teacher.
16. Let him make way for nobody.
17. He should be addicted to austerities.
18. He should stand in day-time.
19. He should sit at night.
20. And when it is raining, he should not retire to a covered place.
21. He should say to (the god) when he sends rain, 'The Sakvartis are water.'
22. When (the god) sends lightning, he should say to him, 'Such forsooth is the nature of the Sakvartis.'
23. When (the god) thunders, he should say to him, 'The great voice of the great (cow)!'
24. Let him not cross a river without touching water.
25. Let him not ascend a ship.
26. If his life is in danger, however, he may ascend (a ship), after having touched water.
27. In the same way (he should touch water) having disembarked.
28. For in water the virtue of the Mahânâmântis is contained.
29. If he practises these duties, (the god) Parganya will send rain according to his wish.
30. The rules about dark (clothes), standing, sitting, (making) way, and (dark) food may be considered as optional.
31. After he has kept his vow through one third (of the prescribed time, the teacher) should sing to him the (first) Stotriya verse (of the Mahânâmântis).

32. In the same way the two other Stotriya verses (after two-thirds of the time and at the end of the whole time).

33. Or all (the three verses) at the end of the whole (time).

34. He should sing them to (the student) who has fasted and shuts his eyes.

35. Having filled a brass vessel with water, having thrown into it all sorts of herbs, and dipped (the student's) hands into it, the teacher should veil (the student's eyes) from left to right with a (new) garment that has not yet been washed.

36. Or he should sing (the Mahânâmântis to him) immediately after he has veiled (his eyes).

37. With veiled eyes, keeping silence, he should abstain from food through a period of three nights, or through one day and one night.

38. Or he should stand in the forest till sunset (and spend the night in the village).

39. On the next morning he should put wood on the fire in the forest, should sacrifice with the Mahâvyâhrîtis, and should cause the student to look at (the following objects, viz.)

40. Fire, Âgya, the sun, a Brahman, a bull, food, water, curds,

41. With (the words), 'The sky have I beheld! Light have I beheld!'

36. I.e. the fasting prescribed in Sûtras 34 and 37 may, if they like, follow after the teaching of the sacred song, instead of preceding it.
37. Sânkhâyana-Grîhya II, 12, 6 seq.
42. In that way all (the objects stated in Sūtra 40) three times.

43. After the ceremony for averting evil has been performed, the student respectfully salutes the teacher.

44. Thus he has to break the silence (enjoined upon him).

45. A bull, a brass vessel, a garment, an optional gift (of a cow): this is the sacrificial fee.

46. The first time he may choose (either a bull or a brass vessel).

47. Let him provide his teacher with clothes, according to some (teachers).

48. A mess of cooked food, sacred to Indra, (is prepared). Let him sacrifice of that (food) with this verse, 'To the Rīk, to the Sāman we sacrifice' (Sāma-veda I, 369), or (with the verse), 'The lord of the seat, the wonderful' (ibid. I, 171), or with both (verses).

49. This (he should do) at (all) the Anupravākṣaṇiya ceremonies.

43. Comp. above, I, 9, 29; Sānkhâyana VI, 3, 11 seq.

45, 46. The student is to give a fee to his teacher three times, after he has been taught each of the three Stotriya verses (Sūtras 31, 32). To these three occasions the four objects stated in Sūtra 45 correspond, so that the first time either the first or the second of those objects, the bull or the brass vessel, may be chosen; the second time he gives a garment, the third time a vara (or optional gift). Comp. the similar correspondence of four objects and three cases to which these objects refer, II, 10, 8, 12.

48. This is the Anupravākṣaṇiya ceremony (or ceremony to be performed after the study of a Vedic text has been finished) belonging to the Mahānāmnīs; comp. Khādira-Grhyā I, 5, 34; Ārvalāyana-Grhyā I, 22, 12; Sānkhâyana II, 8, 1 note.

49. Perhaps sarvatra ('everywhere') belongs to Sūtra 49, so that we should have to translate: This (should be done) everywhere at
50. The Mantra has to be altered everywhere (so that he has to say), 'I have kept (the vow),' 'I have been able,' 'Thereby I have prospered,' 'I have undergone.'

51. The fee to be given after the study of the Parvans is, a goat for the Agni-Parvan, a ram for the Indra-Parvan, a cow for the Pavamâna-Parvan.

52. After (the student) has returned (from the forest), he should entertain his teacher and his retinue with food,

53. And his fellow-students who have come together.

54. The way to sing the Gyeshtkasâmans has been explained by (the statements given with regard to) the Mahânâmnt-(vrata).

55. Here the following standing duties are to be observed:

56. He should not have intercourse with a Sûdrâ woman.

57. He should not eat bird's flesh.

58. He should avoid (constantly living on) the same grain, and in the same place, and wearing one garment.

59. He should perform the rite of 'touching water' with water drawn out (of a pond, &c.).

50. Instead of 'I will keep the vow,' he says, 'I have kept the vow,' &c.; II, 10, 16.

51. The Parvans are the three great sections, sacred to Agni, Indra, and Soma Pavâmana, into which the first Sâmavedârûkika is divided.

55. According to the commentary he has to keep these observances through his whole life.

58. Or, wearing always the same garment?
60. From (the time of) his being directed (to observe the duties of his Vrata) he should not eat from an earthen vessel,

61. Nor drink (from such a vessel),

62. (Or rather) from (the time of) his being taught (the Gyeshikalasams, after the whole preparatory time, or after one third of that time), according to some (teachers).

KANDIKÅ 3.

Hiranyakeshin says: śravanāpaksha oshadhīshu gātāsu hastena paur- namāsyām vâdhâyopâkarma.—It seems impossible to me to adopt an explanation of this Sûtra, which gives to praushthkapadī another meaning than that based on the constant use of these feminines derived from the names of Nakshatras, i.e. the day of the full moon which falls under such or such a Nakshatra. Hastena, therefore, necessarily refers to another day besides the Praushthkapadī, on which the Upåkarana may be celebrated. Perhaps we may conjecture, praushthkapadīm hastena vopå- karanam.

7. They partake of curds with (the verse), 'I have praised Dadhikrāvan' (Sāma-veda I, 358).

5. The Khandas book is the first Sāmavedārκika in which the verses are arranged according to their metre.

6. It is not quite clear from the text, in what connection the rites described in Sūtras 6–8 stand with those treated of in the preceding Sūtras. The expression yathārtham used in Sūtra 5 ('yathār-tham iti karmadh parismātipr uūyatə,' Comm.; comp. above, I, 3, 12 note) clearly indicates the close of the ceremony; on the other hand the comparison of Pāraskara II, 10, 15 seq., Sāṅkhā-yana IV, 5, 10 seq., Ārtvalāyana III, 5, 10, seems to show that the acts stated in Sūtras 6–8 form part of the ceremony described before.

8. I do not try to translate this very obscure Sūtra according to the commentary, in which khāndika is explained as ‘the number (of pupils).’ Perhaps the word is a misspelling for kāndikā or the like, and means sections of the texts. Comp. Khādīra-Grihya

13. Some perform the Upâkarana on the full-moon day of Srâvana and wait (with studying) the time (from that day) till the day sacred to Savitrî (Sûtra 9).

14. On the full-moon day of Taisha they leave off (studying the Veda).

15. They should go out of the village in an easterly or northerly direction, should go to water which reaches higher than to their secret parts, should touch water (in the way prescribed above, I, 2), and should satiate the metres, the Rishis, and teachers (by libations of water).

16. After this second Upâkarana, until the (chief) Upâkarana (has been performed) again for the Vedic texts, an interruption of the study (of the Veda takes place), if clouds rise.

12. Regarding the Tarpana ceremony comp. Sâîkhâyana IV, 9, 1 note. From the word 'and' the commentator concludes that the libations are offered not only to the Âkâryas, but also to the Rishis, &c. (Sûtra 15).

It deserves to be noticed that Manu (IV, 96) prescribes the performing of the Utsarga either under the Nakshatra Pushya (i.e. Tishya), or on the first day of the bright fortnight of Mâgha, which is considered as coinciding, at least approximately, with the beginning of the northerly course of the sun.

Prof. Weber has devoted to the rites connected with the kîtya agni a very detailed paper, Indische Studien, XIII, 217 seq. That kîtya does not mean here anything different from kîtya agni is shown by the Mânava-Grihya I, 3: yadi... akshi vâ spandet karno vâ krośed agnim vâ kîtyam árohet smasânam vâ gakkhed yûpam vopaspriset, &c.

5. And who is not a Sapinda relation of his mother.
6. The best, however, is a ‘naked’ girl.
7. Now the bath (which is taken at the end of studentship, will be described).
8. To the north or the east of the teacher’s house there is an enclosure.
9. There the teacher sits down, facing the north, on eastward-pointed Darbha grass;

4, 1 seq. The description given in this chapter of the Samāvartana, or of the ceremony performed at the end of studentship, is opened with a few sentences referring to another section of the Gṛhya ritual, namely, to marriage. It seems to me that these first Sūtras of this chapter once formed, in a text from which Gobhila has taken them, the introduction to an exposition of the wedding ceremonies, and that Gobhila was induced to transfer them to the description of the Samāvartana, by their opening words, ‘A student, after he has studied the Veda, &c.’ With Sūtras 1–3, comp. Khādîra-Gṛhya I, 3, 1.

3. I prefer to supply, (with the permission) of his parents, and not, of his teacher. Hiranyakesin says, samāvṛitta ākāryakulāt mātāpitaraṁ bibhriyāt, tābhyaṁ anugñātaṁ bharyāṁ upayabhāhet.

5. Regarding the term Sapinda, see, for instance, Gautama XIV, 13 (S. B. E. II, 247): ‘Sapinda-relationship ceases with the fifth or the seventh (ancestor).’ Comp. Manu V, 60.

6. According to the Gṛhya-samgraha (II, 17, 18), a ‘naked’ girl is one who has not yet the monthly period, or whose breast is not yet developed. Comp. Vasishtha XVII, 70; Gautama XVIII, 23.

7 seqq. Comp. Khādîra-Gṛhya III, 1, 1 seqq.
10. Facing the east the student on northward-pointed Darbha grass.

11. The teacher should besprinkle (him) with lukewarm, scented water, which has been boiled with all kinds of herbs.

12. But as if he (i.e. the student, should do so) himself—

13. (In such a way) he is alluded to in the Mantras; (therefore the besprinkling should be done rather by the student, and not by the teacher [?]).

14. With (the verse), ‘The fires which dwell in the waters’ (MB. I, 7, 1)—(the student [?]) pours his joined hands full of water (on the ground).

15. And again with (the formula), ‘What is dreadful in the waters, what is cruel in the waters, what is turbulent in the waters’ (ibid. 2).

16. With (the formula), ‘The shining one I take here’ (ibid. 3)—he besprinkles himself.

17. And again with (the formula), ‘For the sake of glory, of splendour’ (ibid. 4).

18. And again with (the verse), ‘By which you made the wife (pregnant ?’) (ibid. 5).

19. A fourth time silently.

20. He then should rise and should worship the sun with the Mantra, ‘Rising with (the Maruts) who bear shining spears’ (ibid. 6–9), &c.

21. Optionally he may use the single sections of

13. In the Mantras prescribed for the besprinkling of the student (Mantra-Brāhmaṇa I, 7, 1 seq.) there occur passages such as, for instance, ‘Therewith I, N. N., besprinkle myself.’

21. He may use the first section of the Mantra, which contains the word prātār, in the morning, &c.
the Mantra separately (in the morning, at noon, and in the evening) as indicated in the text.

22. He should add (the formula), 'The eye art thou' (ibid. 9) after (each of the three sections of the Mantra, 6–8).

23. With the verse, 'Loosen the highest fetter, O Varuna' (ibid. 10), he takes off the girdle.

24. After he has entertained the Brāhmaṇas with food and has eaten himself, he should have his hair, his beard, the hair of his body, and his nails cut, so as to leave the lock of hair (as required by the custom of his family).

25. Having bathed and adorned himself, and having put on two garments (an under-garment and an upper-garment) which have not yet been washed, he should put a garland (on his head) with (the formula), 'Luck art thou; take delight in me' (ibid. 11).

26. The two shoes (he puts on) with (the formula), 'Leaders are you; lead me' (ibid. 12).

27. With (the formula), 'The Gandharva art thou' (ibid. 13), he takes a bamboo staff.

28. He approaches the teacher together with the assembly (of his pupils) and looks at the assembly of his teacher's (pupils) with (the words), 'Like an eye-ball may I be dear to you' (ibid. 14).

29. Sitting down near (the teacher) he touches the sense-organs at his head with (the verse), 'The she-ichneumon, covered by the lips' (ibid. 15).

30. Here the teacher should honour him with the Argha ceremony.

31. (The student then) should approach a chariot yoked with oxen, and should touch its two side-pieces or the two arms of the chariot-pole with (the verse), 'O tree, may thy limbs be strong' (ibid. 16).

32. With (the last words of that verse), 'May he who stands on thee, win what can be won'—he mounts it.

33. Having driven (some distance) in an easterly or northerly direction, he turns round from left to right and comes back (to his teacher).

34. When he has come back, the Argha ceremony should be performed (for him by his teacher), say the Kauhallyas.

KÂNDIKÂ 5.

1. From that time he shall assume a dignified demeanour: this is in short the rule (for his behaviour).

2. Here the teachers enumerate the following (regulations).

3. Nâgâatalomnyopahâsam ikkhet.

4. Nor (should he wish for sport) with a girl who is the only child of her mother,

5. Nor with a woman during her courses,

6. Nor with one who descends from the same Rîshis.

7. Let him not eat food which has been brought by another door (than the usual),

8. Or which has been cooked twice,

9. Or which has stood over night—

10. Except such as is prepared of vegetables, flesh, barley, or flour.

34. Instead of its being performed at the time stated in Sûtra 30. 5, 1 seq. Rules of conduct for the Snâtaka; comp. Khâdira-Grihya III, 1, 33 seq.
11. Let him not run while it is raining.
12. Let him not take himself his shoes in his hands (when putting them on or pulling them off).
13. Let him not look into a well.
15. He should not wear a scentless wreath,
16. If it is not a wreath of gold.
17. (He should not wear a wreath) of which the expression mālā (garland) has been used.
18. He should cause the people to call it srag (wreath). (Then he may wear it.)
19. He should avoid using the word bhadra ('blessed') without a reason.
20. He should say (instead of it), mandra ('lovely').
21. There are three (kinds of) Snātakas:
22. A Vidyāsnātaka (or a Snātaka by knowledge), a Vratasnātaka (or a Snātaka by the completion of his vow), and a Vidyāvratasnātaka (i.e. Snātaka by both).
23. Of these the last ranks foremost; the two others are equal (to each other).
24. (A Snātaka) should not put on a wet garment.
25. He should not wear one garment.
26. He should not praise any person (excessively).
27. He should not speak of what he has not seen, as if he had seen it, 21, 22. These Śūtras are identical with Pāraskara II, 5, 32.

25. Comp. above, chap. 2, 58.
28. Nor of what he has not heard, as if he had heard it.
29. He should give up everything that forms an impediment for his Veda-recitation.
30. He should endeavour to keep himself (pure from every defilement) like a pot of oil.
31. He should not climb a tree.
32. He should not go toward evening to another village,
33. Nor alone,
34. Nor together with Vṛishalas (or Sūdras).
35. He should not enter the village by a by-path.
36. And he should not walk without a companion.
37. These are the observances for those who have performed the Samāvartana,
38. And what (besides) is prescribed by Sīśṭas.

KĀNDIKĀ 6.

1. When his cows are driven out, he should repeat (the verse), 'May (Bhava), the all-valiant one, (and Indra protect) these (cows) for me' (MB. I, 8, 1).
2. When they have come back, (he should repeat the verse), 'These which are rich in sweet' (ibid. 2).

33. That the Snātaka is not allowed to go alone to another village, follows from Śūtra 36; thus Śūtra 33 is superfluous. The commentator of course tries to defend Gobhila, but I think he has not succeeded. Probably Gobhila has taken the two Śūtras from different texts on which his own composition seems to be based.
38. Baudhāyana I, 1, 6 (S. B. E. XIV, 144): 'Those are called Sīśṭas who, in accordance with the sacred law, have studied the Veda together with its appendages, know how to draw inferences from that, and are able to adduce proofs perceptible by the senses from the revealed texts.'
6, 1 seq. Different ceremonies connected with cattle-keeping. Comp. Khādira-Gṛihya III, 1, 45 seq.
3. If he is desirous of thriving (in his cattle), he should lick with his tongue the forehead of the first-born calf, before it is licked by its mother, and should gulp with (the formula), 'Thou art the phlegm of the cows' (ibid. 3).

4. If he is desirous of thriving (in his cattle), he should, when the cows have calved, at night put wood on the fire in the cow-stable and should sacrifice churned curds with drops of ghee, with (the verse), 'Seizer, seize' (ibid. 4).

5. If he is desirous of thriving (in his cattle), he makes, when the cows have calved, with a sword of Udumbara wood, marks on a male and on a female calf, first on the male, then on the female, with (the Mantra), 'The world art thou, thousandfold' (ibid. 5. 6),

6. And after he has done so, he should recite (over the two calves the Mantra), 'With metal, with the butcher's knife' (ibid. 7).

7. When the rope (to which the calves are bound) is spread out, and (again) when the calves have been bound to it, he should recite over it (the verse), 'This rope, the mother of the cows' (ibid. 8).

8. Here now the following (rites) have to be performed day by day, (viz.)

9. (The rites at) the driving out (of the cows), at the coming back (of the cows), and at the setting into motion of the rope (with the calves).

10. At the cow-sacrifice (i.e. the sacrifice by which a thriving condition for the cows is obtained), boiled rice-grains with milk (are offered).

9. See Sūtras 1. 2. 7.
11. Let him sacrifice to Agni, Pûshan, Indra, and Īśvara.

12. To the bull honour is done (by adorning it, by lavish food, &c.).

13. By the cow-sacrifice also the horse-sacrifice (i.e. the sacrifice by which thriving horses are obtained) has been explained.

14. Of deities Yama and Varuna are added here (to the deities stated above) (Sûtra 11).

15. (After the cow-sacrifice) the cows are besprinkled with scented water; the cows are besprinkled with scented water.

KÂNDIKÂ 7.

1. Now (follows) the Sravanâ ceremony.

2. It has to be performed on the full-moon day (of the month Srâvana).

3. Having besmeared (a surface) to the east of the house (with cow-dung), they carry forward (to that place) fire taken from the (sacred) domestic fire.

4. He besmears four spots to the four sides (of the fire),

5. Towards the (four) directions,

6. (To the extent) of more than one prakrama (i.e. step).

7. He puts a dish on the fire and fries (in that dish) one handful of barley-grains, without burning them.

8. To the west of the fire he places a mortar so that it stands firmly, and husks (the grains), separating (the husked and the unhusked grains?).

9. After he has carefully ground them to flour, and has thrown (that) into a wooden cup (kamasa), and covered it with a winnowing-basket, he puts it up (in the house).

10. Between (the besmeared surface) towards the south, and that towards the east (there should be) a passage.

11. After sunset he takes the wooden cup, (the spoon called) Darvi, and the winnowing-basket, and goes to (the fire) which has been carried forward (Sûtra 3).

12. He throws the flour into the winnowing-basket and fills the wooden cup with water.

13. He takes once a quantity of flour with the Darvi spoon, pours out water on the besmeared place to the east (of the fire), and offers (there) a Bali with (the words), ‘O king of Serpents, dwelling towards the east, this is thy Bali!’ (MB. II, 1, 1).

14. He pours the rest of the water over (that Bali, taking care) that it does not carry away the Bali.

8. As to avahanti, comp. above, I, 7, 4; Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmondsofper, p. 30.

11. According to the commentary atiprasîta means the fire which has been carried forward (Sûtra 3). Another explanation is then added, which is based on a quotation from a ‘tantrântara.’ ‘After he has established a fire, he should carry forward one fire-brand taken from that fire, in a south-eastern direction, with the Mantra ye rûpâni pratimuḥkamânapah &c.; that fire is the atiprasîta fire.’
15. Turning round from right to left, he besprinkles the wooden cup and the Darvi spoon, warms them, and (repeats the offering of a Bali) in the same way towards the south, towards the west, and towards the north, as the Mantra (MB. II, 1, 1. 2) runs, without turning away (between the single Bali-offerings).

16. After he has thrown the remnants (of flour) out of the basket into the fire, he goes to that fire which has not been carried forward.

17. To the west of that fire he touches the earth with his two hands turned downwards, and murmurs the Mantra, ‘Adoration to the Earth’s’—(MB. II, 1, 3).

18. In the evening boiled rice-grains with milk (are prepared).

19. Of that (milk-rice) he should make oblations with (the formulas), ‘To Sravana, to Vishnu, to Agni, to Pragâpati, to the Visve devâs Svâhâ!’

20. The rest (should be performed) according to the Sthâlpâka rite.

21. To the north of the fire he places a bunch of Darbha grass with roots, and murmurs the Mantra, ‘Soma the king’ (ibid. 4), and, ‘The agreement which you have made’ (ibid. 5).

15. Literally, ‘turning round, following his left arm.’ Comp. Sāñkhâyana II, 3, 2. The Mantra runs thus, ‘O king of Serpents, dwelling towards the south (the west, the north), this is thy Bali!’

17. Comp. below, IV, 5, 3.

20. Grhya-samgraha I, 114: ‘Where the technical expression is used, “The rest according to the rite of the Sthâlpâkas,” he should, after he has sacrificed the two Âgyabhâgas, pour (Âgya) into the Sruk and cut off (the Avadânas with the Sruk).’ Comp. Gobhila I, 8, 3 seq.
22. On the following day he has flour of fried barley-grains prepared, and in a new pot, covering (it with another pot), he puts it up (in his house).

23. (Of that flour) he should silently offer Balis day by day in the evening, before the sacrifice, until the Āgrahāyaṇī day.

KĀNDIKĀ 8.

1. On the full-moon day of (the month) Āsvayuga, at the Prishāṭaka ceremony, a mess of boiled rice-grains with milk, sacred to Rudra, (is prepared).

2. Of that (milk-rice) let him sacrifice, the first oblation with (the verse), ‘To us, O Mitra and Varuna’ (Sāma-veda I, 220), the second with (the verse), ‘Not in our offspring’ (Rig-veda I, 114, 8),

3. And (eight Āgya oblations) with the ‘cow’s names’ (i.e. with the formulas), ‘The lovely one art thou,’ &c., with each (name) separately.

4. The rest (should be performed) according to the Sthālpāka rite.

5. Having carried the Prishāṭaka around the fire, turning his right side towards (the fire), and having caused the Brāhmaṇas to look at it (i.e. at the Prishāṭaka), he should look at it himself with (the verse food and has eaten himself, (the sacrificer and his family) should tie (to their arms, necks, &c.) amulets made of lac together with all sorts of herbs, for the sake of prosperity.

7. In the evening he should feed the cows with the Prīshātaka, and should let the calves join them.

8. Thus (the cows) will thrive.

9. At the sacrifice of the first fruits a mess of boiled rice-grains with milk, sacred to Indra and Agni, (is prepared).

10. Having sacrificed first a Havis offering of that (milk-rice), he sacrifices over that (oblation) four Āgya oblations with (the verses), ‘To him who bears a hundred weapons,’ &c. (MB. II, i, 9–12).

11. The rest (should be performed) according to the Sthālāpāka rite.

12. The rest of the remnants of the sacrificial food he should give to eat to all (persons present) who have received the initiation (Upanayana).

13. Having ‘spread under’ water once, he should cut off two portions of the boiled rice-grains, of Bhrigū.

15. And over (these portions) water (is poured).

18. Silently a fourth time.
19. After he has cut off a greater portion,
20. They may, if they like, chew that.
21. Having sipped water, they should touch their mouths, their heads, and their limbs from above downwards, with (the verse), 'This art thou' (ibid. 14).
22. In the same way (sacrifices of the first fruits are performed) of Syâmâka (panicum frumentaceum) and of barley.
23. (At the sacrifice) of Syâmâka (the Mantra with which the food is partaken of [comp. Sûtra 16], is), 'May Agni eat as the first' (ibid. 15).

4. In the morning, after he has sacrificed the (regular) morning oblation, he should have the following (plants and branches of trees) fetched, viz. Darbha grass, a Samt (branch), Vitrina grass, a (Badarī branch) with fruits, Apāmārga, and Sirīsha. He then should silently throw (a portion) of flour of fried barley into the fire, should cause the Brāhmaṇas to pronounce auspicious wishes, and should circumambulate the house, turning his right side towards it, starting from the room for the (sacred) fire, striking the smoke (of the sacred fire) with those objects (i. e. with the plants and branches mentioned above).

5. He should throw away those objects, after he has made use of them.

6. On solid stones he places a water-barrel with the two (Sāmans belonging to the verse), 'Vāstoffpati' (Sāma-veda I, 275) and with (that) Rik (itself).

8. In the evening boiled rice-grains with milk (are prepared).

23. Having touched water, they may do whatever they like.

KÂNDIKÂ 10.

1. The Ashtakâ (is a festival) sacred to the night.

2. It procures prosperity.

3. It is sacred to Agni, or to the Manes, or to Pragâpati, or to the Seasons, or to the Visve devâs—thus the deity (to which the Ashtakâ is sacred), is investigated (by different teachers).

4. There are four Ashtakâs in (the four months of) the winter;

5. These all he should endeavour to celebrate with (offerings of) meat;

6. Thus says Kautsa.

7. (There are only) three Ashtakâs (in the winter), says Audgâhamâni,

8. And so say (also) Gautama and Vârkakhândi.

9. The eighth day of the dark fortnight after the Ágrahâyant is called Apûpâshťakâ (i.e. Ashtakâ of the cakes).

10. Having prepared grains in the way prescribed

4, 7. As to the difference of opinion regarding the number of Ashṭakâs, comp. Weber, Naxatra, second article, p. 337. Gobhila himself follows the opinion of Audgâhamâni, for he mentions only three Ashṭakâs in the winter season, the first following after the Ágrahâyant full moon (chap. 10, 9), the second after the Taishî (10, 18), and the third after the Mâghî (IV, 4, 17).

10. See above, I, 7, 2 seq.

11. And (besides he prepares) eight cakes, without turning them over in the dish (in which he bakes them);

12. (Each) in one dish;

13. Without Mantras, according to Audgáhamâni;

14. Of the size of the (cakes) sacred to Tryambaka.

15. After he has baked them, he should pour (Âgya) on them, should take them from the fire towards the north, and should pour (Âgya) on them again.

16. In the way prescribed for Sthāltpākas he cuts off (the prescribed portions) from the mess of boiled grains and from the cakes, and sacrifices with (the words), 'To the Ashtakâ Svâhâ!'

17. The rest (should be performed) according to the Sthāltpâka rite.

18. (At the second Ashtakâ, on) the eighth day after the full-moon day of Taisha, a cow (is sacrificed).

19. Shortly before the time of junction (of day and night, i.e. before the morning twilight) he should place that (cow) to the east of the fire, and when (that time) has come, he should sacrifice (Âgya) with

20. And after having sacrificed, he should recite over (the cow the verse), ‘May thy mother give leave to thee’ (ibid. 6).

21. Let him sprinkle (the cow) with water in which barley is, with (the words), ‘Agreeable to the Ashtakā I sprinkle thee.’

22. Let him carry a fire-brand round it with (the verse), ‘The lord of goods, the sage (goes) round’ (Sāma-veda I, 30).

23. Let him give it water to drink.

24. The remainder of what it has drunk he should pour out under (the feet of) the beast with (the formula), ‘Away from the gods the Havis has been taken’ (MB. II, 2, 7).

25. They then walk in a northerly direction (from the fire) and kill (the cow),

26. The head of which is turned to the east, the feet to the north, if the rite is sacred to the gods,

27. The head to the south, the feet to the west, if the rite is sacred to the Manes.

28. After it has been killed, he should sacrifice (Āgya) with (the verse), ‘If the beast has lowed’ (ibid. 8).

29. And (the sacrificer's) wife should get water and should wash all the apertures of the cow's body.

30. They lay two purifiers (i.e. grass-blades) on (the cow's body) near its navel, cut it up in the direction of its hairs, and draw the omentum out.

31. He should spit it on two pieces of wood, on one (simple) branch and on another forked branch, should besprinkle it (with water), and should roast it.
32. When it has ceased to drop, he should say, 'Hew the (cow) to pieces—
33. 'So that the blood does not stain the ground to the east of the fire.'
34. After he has roasted (the omentum), he should pour (Âgya) on it, should take it from the fire towards the north, and should pour (Âgya) on it again.
35. After he has cut off (the prescribed portions from) the omentum in the way prescribed for Sthâlpâkas, or in the way prescribed for the Svishtakrit (oblation), he sacrifices with (the words), 'To the Ashtakâ Svâhâ!'
36. The rest (should be performed) according to the Sthâlpâka rite. The rest according to the Sthâlpâka rite.

End of the Third Prapâthaka.

32. In the text we ought to read visasata, as Dr. Knauer has observed.
35. The regulations concerning the Avadânas are given for Sthâlpâkas, I, 8, 5 seq., and for the Svishtakrit oblation, I, 8, 11 seq.
Prapâthaka IV, Kândikâ 1.

1. He throws the two spits into the fire;
2. That which consists of one (simple) branch, towards the east, the other one towards the west.
3. They cut off the Avadâna portions from all its limbs,
4. With the exception of the left thigh and the lungs.
5. The left thigh he should keep for the Anvash-takya ceremony.
6. On the same fire he cooks one mess of rice-grains and one of meat, stirring up the one and the other separately, from left to right, with two pot-ladles.
7. After he has cooked them, he should pour (Âgya) on them, should take them from the fire towards the north, and should pour (Âgya) on them again.
8. Having poured the juice (of the Avadânas) into a brazen vessel,

Avadânas in the way prescribed for Sthâllpâkas, (and puts those portions) into (another) brazen vessel;

11. And (the portion) for the Svishṭakṛīt oblation separately.

12. Taking of the mess of boiled rice-grains (Sûtra 6) a portion of the size of a Bilva fruit, he should mix that, together with the Avadânas (Sûtra 10), with the juice (Sûtra 8).

13. Taking a fourfold portion of Âgya he should sacrifice it with the first of the eight Rûkas, 'Entering into fire, the fire' (MB. II, 2, 9–16).

14. Of the mixture (Sûtra 12) he cuts off the third part and sacrifices it with the second and third (verse).

15. He places the word Svâhâ after the second (of those verses, i.e. after the third verse of the whole Mantra).

16. In the same way he sacrifices the other two-thirds (of that mixture, the one) with the fourth and fifth (verse), and (the other) with the sixth and seventh (verse).

17. Having cut off the rest, he should sacrifice the oblation to (Agni) Svishṭakṛīt with the eighth (verse).

18. Even if he be very deficient in wealth, he should celebrate (the Ashtakâ) with (the sacrifice of) an animal.

19. Or he should sacrifice a Sthâllpâka.

20. Or he should offer food to a cow.

KÂNDIKĀ 2.

1. On the following day the Anvashṭākya (ceremony is performed),

2. Or on the day which follows after that.

3. To the south-east (of the house), in the intermediate direction (between south and east), they partition off (a place with mats or the like).

4. The long-side (of that place should lie) in the same (direction).

5. They should perform (the ceremonies) turning their faces towards the same (direction).

6. (It should measure) at least four prakramas (i.e. steps).

7. (It should have) its entrance from the west.

8. In the northern part of that enclosure they make the Lakshana and carry the fire (to that place).

9. To the west of the fire he places a mortar so that it stands firmly, and husks, holding his left hand uppermost, one handful of rice-grains which he has seized with one grasp.

8. ‘They make the Lakshana’ means, they prepare the ground on which the fire shall be established, by drawing the five lines. See above, I, 1, 9. 10; Gṛhya-samgraha I, 47 seq.
10. When (the rice) has been husked,
11. He should once carefully remove the husks.
12. And then he should cut off a lump of flesh from that thigh and should cut it in small pieces on a new slaughtering-bench,
13. (With the intention) that the Pindas (or lumps of food offered to the Manes) should be thoroughly mixed up with flesh.
14. On the same fire he cooks one mess of rice-grains and one of meat, stirring up the one and the other separately, from right to left, with the two pot-ladles.
15. After he has cooked them, he should pour (Âgya) on them, should take them from the fire towards the south, and should not pour (Âgya) on them again.
16. In the southern part of the enclosure (Sûtras 3 seq.) he should have three pits dug, so that the eastern (pit is dug) first,
17. One span in length, four inches in breadth and in depth.
18. Having made the Lakshana to the east of the eastern pit, they carry the fire (to that place).
19. Having carried the fire round the pits on their west side, he should put it down on the Lakshana.

25. Inclined towards the south.
26. And he should put a mat on it.
27. To that (layer of grass) they fetch for him (the following sacrificial implements), one by one, from right to left:
28. The two pots in which sacrificial food has been cooked (Sûtra 14), the two pot-ladles (Sûtra 14), one brazen vessel, one Darvî (spoon), and water.
29. (The sacrificer's) wife places a stone on the Barhis and pounds (on that stone the fragrant substance called) Sthagara.
30. And on the same (stone) she grinds some collyrium, and anoints therewith three Darbha blades, including the interstices (between the single blades?).
31. He should also get some oil made from sesamum seeds,
32. And a piece of linen tape.
33. After he has invited an odd number of blameless Brâhmanas, whose faces should be turned towards the north, to sit down on a pure spot,
34. And has given them Darbha grass (in order that they may sit down thereon),
35. He gives them (pure) water and afterwards sesame-water, pronouncing his father's name, 'N. N.! To thee this sesame-water, and to those who follow thee here, and to those whom thou followest. To thee Svadhâ!'
36. After he has touched water, (he does) the same for the other two.
37. In the same way (he gives them) perfumes.
38. The words in which he addresses (the Brâhmaṇas) when going to sacrifice, are, 'I shall offer it into the fire.'
39. After they have replied, 'Offer it,' he should cut off (the prescribed portions) from the two messes of cooked food (Sûtra 14), (and should put those portions) into the brazen vessel. He then should sacrifice, picking out (portions of the Havis) with the pot-ladle, the first (oblation) with (the words), 'Svâhâ to Soma Pitrīmat,' the second with (the words), 'Svâhâ to Agni Kavyavâhana' (MB. 5. He then should place pātra vessels of water near the pits.

6. Seizing, again with his left hand, (the first) vessel, he should pour it out from right to left on the Darbha grass in the eastern pit, pronouncing his father’s name, ‘N. N.! Wash thyself, and (may) those who follow thee here, and those whom thou followest, (wash themselves). To thee Svadhâ!’

26. Seizing, again with his left hand, the vessel of water (Sûtra 5), he should sprinkle (water) round the Pinda-s from right to left, with (the verse), ‘Bringing sap’ (MB. II, 3, 13).

27. The middle Pinda (offered to the grandfather) the wife (of the sacrificer) should eat, if she is desirous of a son, with (the verse), ‘Give fruit to the womb, O Fathers’ (MB. II, 3, 14).

26. I am not sure about the translation of the words golakânâm madhyamaparñenâ. The ordinary meaning of golaka is ‘ball,’ see, for instance, Sâñkhâyana-Grihya IV, 19, 4. The commentary says, golakânâm palâsânâm madhyamaparñenâ madhyama-makkhadena.

33. Of that he should make an offering with (the verse), 'The Ekāshṭakā, performing austerities' (MB. II, 3, 19).

Kāndikā 5.

1. At (the sacrifices) for the obtainment of special wishes, which will be henceforth described,

2. And, according to some (teachers), also at (the sacrifices) described above (the following rites should be performed).

3. He should touch the earth, to the west of the fire, with his two hands turned downwards, with (the verse), 'We partake of the earth's' (MB. II, 4, 1).

32–34. Khādira-Gṛhya III, 5, 40. I understand that this sacrifice stands in connection with the rural festivals which are treated of in the preceding Sūtras. In the commentary, from the Mantra the conclusion is drawn that the ceremony in question belongs to the day of the Ekāshṭakā. But the Ekāshṭakā is the Ashākā of the dark fortnight of Māgha (see S. B. E. XXIX, 102), and the description of the rites belonging to that day has already been given above, Sūtras 17–21. It very frequently occurs in the Gṛhya ritual that Mantras are used at sacrifices standing in no connection with those for which they have originally been composed.

5, 1 seq. Comp. Khādira-Gṛhya I, 2, 6 seq.
4. In the night-time (he pronounces that Mantra so that it ends with the word) ‘goods’ (vasu), in the day-time (so that it ends) with ‘wealth’ (dhanam).

5. With the three verses, ‘This praise’ (MB. II, 4, 2–4) he should wipe along (with his hands) around (the fire).

6. Before sacrifices the Virûpâksha formula (MB. II, 4, 6) (should be recited).

7. And at (ceremonies) which are connected with special wishes, the Prapada formula (MB. II, 4, 5)—(in the following way):

8. He should murmur (the Prapada formula), ‘Austerities and splendour,’ should perform one suppression of breath, and should, fixing his thoughts on the object (of his wish), emit his breath, when beginning the Virûpâksha formula.

9. When undertaking ceremonies for the obtainment of special wishes, let him fast during three (days and) nights,

10. Or (let him omit) three meals.

6–8. Khâdira-Grîhya I, 2, 23; Grîhya-samgraha I, 96. It is stated that the recitation of the Virûpâksha and Prapada formulas and also the parisamâhana (Sûtra 5) should be omitted at the so-called Kshiprâomas, i.e. at sacrifices performed without the assistance of a yâg vàvid. See Bloomfield’s notes on Grîhya-samgraha I, 92. 96. Regarding the way in which a prânâyâma (‘suppression of breath’) is performed, comp. Vasishtha XXV, 13 (S. B. E. XIV, p. 126).

10. There are two meals a day. The words of this Sûtra, ‘Or three meals,’ are explained in the commentary in the following way. He should, if he does not entirely abstain from food through three days, take only three meals during that time, i.e. he should take one meal a day. The commentator adds that some read abhâktâni instead of bhâktâni (‘or he should omit three meals’), in which case the result would be the same. I prefer the reading
11. At such ceremonies, however, as are repeated regularly, (let him do so only) before their first performance.

12. He should (simply) fast, however, before such ceremonies as are performed on sacrificial days (i.e. on the first day of the fortnight).

13. (At a ceremony) which ought to be performed immediately (after the occurrence by which it has been caused), the consecration follows after (the ceremony itself).

14. Let him recite the Prapada formula (Sūtras 7. 8), sitting in the forest on Darbha grass,

15. Of which the panicles are turned towards the east, if he is desirous of holy lustre,

16. To the north, if desirous of sons and of cattle,

17. To both directions, if desirous of both.

18. One who desires that his stock of cattle may increase, should offer a sacrifice of rice and barley bhaktâni, and propose to supply, not, ‘he should eat,’ but ‘he should omit’ (‘abhoganam,’ Sūtra 9). Possibly the meaning is that three successive meals should be omitted; thus also the compiler of the Khâdira-Grihya seems to have understood this Sūtra.

There it is said: ‘An occurrence which is perceived only when it has happened (sannipatitam eva), and of which the cause by which it is produced is unknown, for instance the appearance of a halo, is called sānnipatika. Such sānnipatika ceremonies are uparishṭādāiksha. The dīkṣā is the preparatory consecration (of the sacrificer), for instance by three days of fasting. A ceremony which has its dīkṣā after itself is called uparishṭādāiksha.’ Similarly the commentary on Khâdira-Gṛhya IV, 1, 3 says, ‘uparishṭāt sānnipatike naimittike karma krītvabhoganam.’

31. With the second (verse) one who desires that his stock of horses and elephants may increase, should sacrifice fried grains, while the sun has a halo.

32. With the third (verse) one who desires that his flocks may increase, (should sacrifice) sesamum seeds, while the moon (has a halo).

33. Having worshipped the sun with the fourth (verse), let him acquire wealth; then he will come back safe and wealthy.

34. Having worshipped the sun with the fifth (verse) let him return to his house. He will safely return home; he will safely return home.

KÂNDIKÂ 6.

1. Let him daily repeat (the formula), 'Bhûh!' (MB. II, 4, 14) in order to avert involuntary death.

2. (He who does so) has nothing to fear from serious diseases or from sorcery.

3. (The ceremony for) driving away misfortune (is as follows).

4. It is performed on the sacrificial day (i. e. on the first day of the fortnight).

5. (Oblations are made with the six verses), 'From the head' (MB. II, 5, 1 seq.), verse by verse.

6. The seventh (verse is), 'She who athwart' (MB. I, 5, 6).

8. (And) the Mahâvyâhritis.
9. The last (verse) is, 'Prâgâpati' (MB. II, 5, 8).
10. With the formula, 'I am glory' (MB. II, 5, 9) one who is desirous of glory should worship the sun in the forenoon, at noon, and in the afternoon,

11. Changing (the words), 'of the forenoon' (into 'of the noon,' and 'of the afternoon,' accordingly).

12. Worshipping (the sun) at the time of the morning twilight and of the evening twilight procures happiness, (both times) with (the formula), 'O sun! the ship' (MB. II, 5, 14), and (after that) in the morning with (the formula), 'When thou risest, O sun, I shall rise with thee' (ibid. 15); in the evening with (the formula), 'When thou goest to rest, O sun, I shall go to rest with thee' (ibid. 16).

13. One who desires to gain a hundred cart-loads (of gold), should keep the vow (of fasting) through one fortnight and should on the first day of a dark fortnight feed the Brâhmans with boiled milk-rice prepared of one Kâmsa of rice.

14. At the evening twilight (of every day of that fortnight), having left the village in a westerly direction, and having put wood on the fire at a place where

10. According to the commentary the formula yâsoham bhamvâmi comprises five sections; thus it would include the sections II, 5, 9-13 of the Mantra-Brâhma. The Mantra quoted next by Gobhila (Sûtra 12) is really MB. II, 5, 14.

13. Comp. chap. 5, 24-27. One Kâmsa is stated to be a measure equal to one Droma. The more usual spelling is kamsa, and this reading is found in the corresponding passage of the Khâdira-Grîhya (IV, 2, 1).

15. (He should repeat those rites) in the same way the two next dark fortnights.

16. During the time between those dark fortnights he should observe chastity till the end (of the rite), till the end (of the rite).

KÂNDIKÂ 7.

1. Let him select the site for building his house—

2. On even ground, which is covered with grass, which cannot be destroyed (by inundations, &c.),

3. On which the waters flow off to the east or to the north,

4. On which plants grow which have no milky juice or thorns, and which are not acrid.

5. The earth should be white, if he is a Brâhmaṇa,

6. Red, if he is a Kshatriya,

7. Black, if he is a Vaisya.

8. (The soil should be) compact, one-coloured, not dry, not salinous, not surrounded by sandy desert, not swampy.

9. (Soil) on which Darbha grass grows, (should be chosen) by one who is desirous of holy lustre,

10. (Soil covered) with big sorts of grass, by one who is desirous of strength,

11. (Soil covered) with tender grass, by one who is desirous of cattle.

7, 1 seq. Comp. Khâdira-Grîhya IV, 2, 6 seq.
12. (The site of the house) should have the form of a brick,
13. Or it should have the form of a round island.
14. Or there should be natural holes (in the ground) in all directions.
15. On such (ground) one who is desirous of fame or strength, should build his house with its door to the east;
16. One who is desirous of children or of cattle, (should build it) with its door to the north;
17. One who is desirous of all (those things), (should build it) with its door to the south.
18. Let him not build it with its door to the west.
19. And a back-door.
20. The house-door.
21. So that (he?) may not be exposed to looks (?).

19–21. I have translated the words of these Sūtras without trying to express any meaning. According to the commentary the meaning is the following: 19. He should not build a house which has its door on the back-side, or which has one front-door and one back-door. 20. The house-door should not face the door of another house. 21. The house-door should be so constructed that the householder cannot be seen by Kāndālas, &c., when he is performing religious acts or when dining in his house. Or, if instead of samloki the reading samloki is accepted, the Sūtra means: the house-door should be so constructed, that valuable objects, &c., which are in the house, cannot be seen by passers-by.—The commentary on Khādīra-Grihya IV, 2, 15 contains the remark: dvāradvayam (var. lectio, dvāram dvāram) parasparam rigu na syād iti kēāit. This seems to me to lead to the right understanding of these Sūtras. I think we ought to read and to divide in this way: (19) anudvāram kā. (20, 21) grihadvāram yathā na samloki syāt. ‘And (let him construct) a back-door, so that it does not face the (chief) house-door.’ The Khādīra MSS. have the readings, asalloki, asandraloke, samloka.
22. 'Let him avoid an Asvattha tree on the east-side (of his house), and a Plaksha on the south-side, a Nyagrodha on the west-side, and on the north-side an Udumbara.

23. 'One should say that an Asvattha brings (to the house) danger from fire; one should say that a Plaksha tree brings early death (to the inhabitants of the house), that a Nyagrodha brings oppression through (hostile) arms, that an Udumbara brings diseases of the eye.

24. 'The Asvattha is sacred to the sun, the Plaksha to Yama, the Nyagrodha is the tree that belongs to Varuna, the Udumbara, to Pragâpati.'

25. He should place those (trees) in another place than their proper one,

26. And should sacrifice to those same deities.

27. Let him put wood on the fire in the middle of the house, and sacrifice a black cow,

28. Or a white goat,

22–24. These are Slokas to which the commentary very appropriately, though not exactly in the sense in which it was originally set down, applies the dictum so frequently found in the Brāhmaṇa texts: na hy ekasmād akṣharād virādhyanti. Dr. Knauer's attempts to restore correct Slokas are perhaps a little hazardous; he inserts in the third verse ka after plaksha, and in the second he changes the first brūyāt into ka, whereby the second foot of the hemistich loses its regular shape O - - -, and receives instead of it the form O - O - O.

25. He should remove an Asvattha tree from the east-side, &c.

26. He should sacrifice to the deities to whom the transplanted trees are sacred.

27 seq. Here begins the description of the vāstusamana, which extends to Śūtra 43. As to the animal sacrifice prescribed in this Śūtra, comp. Dr. Winternitz's essay, Einige Bemerkungen über das Bauopfer bei den Indern (Sitzungsbericht der Anthrop. Gesellschaft in Wien, 19 April, 1887), p. 8.

33. The first (verse, accompanying the first oblation), is, ‘Vâstoshpati!’ (MB. II, 6, 1).
34. (Then follow) the (three) verses of the Vâmadevya,
35. (And the three) Mahâvyâhrîtis.
36. The last (oblation is offered with the formula), ‘To Pragâpati (svâhå).’
37. After he has sacrificed, he should offer ten Balis,
38. In the different directions (of the horizon), from left to right,
39. And in the intermediate points,
40. In due order, without a transposition.
41. (He should offer a Bali) in the east with (the formula), ‘(Adoration) to Indra!’ in the intermediate direction—‘To Vâyu!’ in the south—‘To Yama!’ in the intermediate direction—‘(Svadhå) to the Fathers!’ in the west—‘(Adoration) to Varuna!’ in the intermediate direction—‘To Mahâråga!’ in the north—‘To Soma!’ in the intermediate direction—‘To Mahendra!’ downwards—‘To Vāsuki!’ upwards, in the sky (i.e. throwing the Bali into the air), with (the formula), ‘Adoration to Brahman!’

42. To the east, upwards, and downwards this should be done constantly, day by day.

43. (The whole ceremony is repeated) every year or at the two sacrifices of the first fruits.

KÂNDIKĀ 8.

1. At the Sravanā and Âgrahāyant sacrifices he should leave a remainder of fried grains.

2. Having gone out of the village in an easterly or in a northerly direction, and having put wood on the fire at a place where four roads meet, he should sacrifice (those fried grains) with his joined hands, with the single (verses of the text), ‘Hearken, Râkâ!’ (MB. II, 6, 2–5).

3. Walking eastward (he should), looking upwards, (offer a Bali) to the hosts of divine beings, with (the formula), ‘Be a giver of wealth’ (ibid. 6);

4. (Walking ?) towards the side, (he should offer a Bali) to the hosts of other beings, looking downwards.

5. Returning (to the fire) without looking back, he should, together with the persons belonging to his family, as far as they have been initiated (by the Upanayana), eat the fried grains.

6. (This ceremony) procures happiness.

7. (With the two formulas), 'Obeying the will' and 'Sāṅkha' (MB. II, 6, 7. 8), he should sacrifice two oblations of rice and of barley separately,

8. With reference to a person whose favour he wishes to gain.

9. This is done daily.

10. With the Ekākṣharyā verse (MB. II, 6, 9) two rites (are performed) which are connected with the observance (of fasting) for a fortnight.

11. One who is desirous of long life, should sacrifice (with that verse), in the night of the full moon, one hundred pegs of Khadira wood;

12. Of iron, if he desires that (his enemies) may be killed.

13. Now another ceremony (performed with the same verse).

14. Having gone out of the village in an easterly or in a northerly direction, he should at a place where four roads meet, or on a mountain, set an elevated surface, consisting of the dung of beasts of the forest, on fire, should sweep the coals away, and should make an oblation of butter (on that surface) with his mouth, repeating that Mantra in his mind.

7 seq. Khādira-Grīhya IV, 2, 24 seq.

7. I.e. he should sacrifice one oblation of rice, and one of barley.

8. Literally, to a person, &c. The meaning is, he should pronounce the name of that person. The Sūtra is repeated from IV, 5, 20; thus its expressions do not exactly fit the connection in which it stands here.

10 seq. Khādira-Grīhya IV, 3, 1 seq.
15. If (that oblation of butter) catches fire, twelve villages (will be his).

16. If smoke rises, at least three.

17. They call this ceremony one which is not in vain.

18. One who desires that his means of livelihood may not be exhausted, should sacrifice green cow-dung in the evening and in the morning.

19. Of articles which he has bought, he should, after having fasted three (days and) nights, make an oblation with the formula, 'Here this Visvakarman' (MB. II, 6, 10).

20. Of a garment he should offer some threads (with that formula),

21. Of a cow some hairs (of its tail);

22. In the same way (he should offer some part) of other articles which he has bought.

23. The sacrifice of a full oblation (with the verse, 'A full oblation I sacrifice,' MB. II, 6, 11) should be performed on the sacrificial day (i.e. on the first day of the fortnight),

24. And (on such a day let him sacrifice) with (the formula), 'Indrāmavadāt (?)' (MB. II, 6, 12).

25. One who is desirous of glory, (should offer) the first (oblation); one who is desirous of companions, the second.

18. Khādira-Gṛihya IV, 3, 18. On haritagomayān the commentary has the following note: yaih khalu gomayaih samkule pradeze hariťāni trināni prazastāny upadyante tān kila gomayān haritagomayān ātakshate. te khalv ādrā ihābhiprayante. katham gṛihyate. teshv eva tatprasiddheḥ.

KÂNDIKÂ 9.

1. One who desires to become a ruler among men should fast through a period of eight nights.

2. Then he should provide a Sruva spoon, a cup (for water), and fuel, of Udumbara wood,

3. Should go out of the village in an easterly or in a northerly direction, should put wood on the fire at a place where four roads meet,

4. And should sacrifice Âgya, turning his face towards the sun, with (the formulas), 'Food indeed is the only thing that is pervaded by the metres,' and, 'Bliss indeed' (MB. II, 6, 13. 14);

5. A third (oblation) in the village with (the formula), 'The food's essence is ghee' (ibid. 15).

6. One who is desirous of cattle, (should offer this oblation) in a cow-stable.

7. If (the cow-stable) is damaged by fire (?), (he should offer) a monk's robe.

8. On a dangerous road let him make knots in the skirts of the garments (of himself and of his companions),

9. Approaching those (of the travellers) who wear garments (with skirts).

9, 1 seq. Khâdira-Gṛhya IV, 3, 10 seq.

7. Perhaps we ought to follow the commentary and to translate, 'When (the cow-stable) becomes heated (by the fire on which he is going to sacrifice),' &c. ('gosh/he*agnim upasamādhāyāva homo na kartavyaḥ, kin tv agnim upasamādhāyāpi tāvat pratīkshanīyam yāvad gosh/ham upatapyamānam bhavati'). I have translated īvaram according to the ordinary meaning of the word; in the commentary it is taken as equivalent to lauha{kūn}am (copper filings).
10. (Let him do so with the three formulas, MB. II, 6, 13–15) with the word Svāhā at the end of each.

11. This will bring a prosperous journey (to himself) and to his companions. [Or: (He should do the same with the garments) of his companions. This will bring a prosperous journey.]

12. One who desires to gain a thousand cart-loads (of gold), should sacrifice one thousand oblations of flour of fried grains.

13. One who is desirous of cattle, should sacrifice one thousand oblations of the excrements of a male and a female calf;

14. Of a male and a female sheep, if he is desirous of flocks.

15. One who desires that his means of livelihood may not be exhausted, should sacrifice in the evening and in the morning the fallings-off of rice-grains, with (the formulas), ‘To Hunger Svāhā!’ ‘To Hunger and Thirst Svāhā!’ (MB. II, 6, 16. 17).

16. If somebody has been bitten by a venomous animal, he should murmur (the verse), ‘Do not fear, thou wilt not die’ (MB. II, 6, 18), and should besprinkle him with water.

17. With (the formula), ‘Strong one! Protect’ (MB. II, 6, 19), a Snātaka, when lying down (to sleep), should lay down his bamboo staff near (his bed).

18. This will bring him luck.

19. (The verses), ‘Thy worm is killed by Atri’ (MB. II, 7, 1–4), he should murmur, besprinkling a place where he has a worm with water.

16 seq. Khādīra-Gṛhya IV, 4, 1 seq.
20. If he intends to do this for cattle, he should fetch in the afternoon an earth-clod taken out of a furrow, and should put it down in the open air.

21. In the morning he should strew the dust of it round (the place attacked by worms), and should murmur (the same texts).

KÂNDIKÂ 10.

1. To the north of the place (in which the Arghya reception will be offered to a guest), they should bind a cow (to a post or the like), and should (reverentially) approach it with (the verse), 'Arhanâ putra vâsa' (MB. II, 8, 1).

2. (The guest to whom the Arghya reception is going to be offered) should come forward murmuring, 'Here I tread on this Padyâ Virâg for the sake of the enjoyment of food' (ibid. 2).

3. (He should do so) where they are going to perform the Arghya ceremony for him,

4. Or when they perform it.

5. Let them announce three times (to the guest) separately (each of the following things which are 10, 1 seq. The Arghya reception; Khâdira-Grihya IV, 4, 5 seq.; Grihya-samgraha II, 62–65. The first words of the Mantra quoted in Sûtra 1 are corrupt. The Mantra is evidently an adaptation of the well-known verse addressed to the Āgrahâyâni (Gobhila III, 9, 9; Mantra-Brâhmaṇa II, 2, 1), or to the Ashâkâ (Pâraskara III, 3, 5, 8): prathamâ ha vyuâsa, &c. The first word arhanâ ('duly'), containing an allusion to the occasion of the Arghya ceremony, to which this Mantra is adapted, seems to be quite right; the third word may be, as Dr. Knauer conjectures, uvâsa ('she has dwelt,' or perhaps rather 'she has shone'). For the second word I am not able to suggest a correction.

GRIHYA-SÛTRA OF HIRANYAKESIN.
INTRODUCTORY NOTE

TO THE

GRIHYA-SŪTRA OF HIRANYAKESIN.

After the excellent remarks of Professor Bühler on the position of Hiranyakesin among the Sūtra authors of the Black Yagur-veda (Sacred Books, vol. ii, p. xxiii seq.), I can here content myself with shortly indicating the materials on which my translation of this Grīhya-sūtra, which was unpublished when I began to translate it, is based. For the first half of the work I could avail myself, in the first place, of the text, together with the commentary of Mātridatta, which the late Dr. Schoenberg of Vienna had prepared for publication, and which was based on a number of MSS. collated by him. It is my melancholy duty gratefully to acknowledge here the kindness with which that prematurely deceased young scholar has placed at my disposal the materials he had collected, and the results of his labour which he continued till the last days of his life. For the second half of the Sūtra his death deprived me of this important assistance; here then Professors Kielhorn of Göttingen and Bühler of Vienna have been kind enough to enable me to finish the task of this translation, by lending me two MSS. of the text and two MSS. of Mātridatta’s commentary which they possess.

Finally, Dr. J. Kirste of Vienna very kindly sent me the proof-sheets of his valuable edition before it was published. With the aid of these my translation has been revised.
GRHYA-SÛTRA OF HIRANYAŚEKESIN.

PRASNA I, PATALA 1, SECTION 1.

1. We shall explain the Upanayana (i.e. the initiation of the student).
2. Let him initiate a Brâhmaṇa at the age of seven years,
3. A Râganya, of eleven, a Vaisya, of twelve.
4. A Brâhmaṇa in the spring, a Râganya in the summer, a Vaisya in the autumn.
5. In the time of the increasing moon, under an auspicious constellation, preferably (under a constellation) the name of which is masculine,
6. He should serve food to an even number of Brâhmaṇas and should cause them to say, 'An auspicious day! Hail! Good luck!'
7. (Then he) should have the boy satiated, should

1, 2. The statement commonly given in the Grhya-sûtras and Dharma-sûtras is, that the initiation of a Brâhmaṇa shall take place in his eighth year, though there are differences of opinion whether in the eighth year after conception, or after birth (Âsvalâyana-Grhya I, 19, 1. 2). Mâtridatta states that the rule given here in the Grhya-sûtra refers to the seventh year after birth. In the Dharma-sûtra (comp. Âpastamba I, 1, 18) it is stated that the initiation of a Brâhmaṇa shall take place in the eighth year after his conception. Comp. the remarks of Professor Bühler, S. B. E., vol. ii, p. xxiii.

have his hair shaven, and after (the boy) has bathed and has been decked with ornaments—

8. He should dress him in a (new) garment which has not yet been washed.

9. In a place inclined towards the east, (or) inclined towards the north, (or) inclined towards north-east, or in an even (place), he raises (the surface on which he intends to sacrifice), sprinkles it with water,

10. Kindles fire by attrition, or fetches common (worldly) fire, puts the fire down, and puts wood on the fire.

11. He strews eastward-pointed Darbha grass round the fire;

12. Or (the grass which is strewn) to the west and to the east (of the fire), may be northward-pointed.

13. He (arranges the Darbha blades so as to) lay the southern (blades) uppermost, the northern ones below, if their points are turned (partly) towards the east and (partly) towards the north.

14. Having strewn Darbha grass, to the south of the fire, in the place destined for the Brahman,

15. Having with the two (verses), 'I take (the fire) to myself,' and, 'The fire which (has entered)’—taken possession of the fire,

16. And having, to the north of the fire, spread out Darbha grass, he prepares the (following) objects, according as they are required (for the ceremony which he is going to perform):

17. A stone, a (new) garment which has not yet been washed, a skin (of an antelope, or a spotted deer, &c.), a threefold-twisted girdle of Muṅga grass if he is a Brāhmaṇa (who shall be initiated), a bow-string for a Rāganya, a woollen thread for a Vaisya, a staff of Bilva or of Palāsa wood for a Brāhmaṇa, of Nyagrodha wood for a Rāganya, of Udumbara wood for a Vaisya.

18. He binds together the fuel, twenty-one pieces of wood, or as many as there are oblations to be made.

19. Together with that fuel he ties up the (three) branches of wood which are to be laid round the fire, (which should have the shape of) pegs.

20. (He gets ready, besides, the spoon called) Darvī, a bunch of grass, the Āgya pot, the pot for the Prajīta water, and whatever (else) is required;

21. All (those objects) together, or (one after the other) as it happens.

22. At that time the Brahman suspends the sacrificial cord over his left shoulder, sips water, passes by the fire, on its west side, to the south side, throws away a grass blade from the Brahman's seat, touches water, and sits down with his face turned towards the fire.

24. Having consecrated the Prokshanī water by means of the purifiers as before, having placed the vessels upright, and having untied the fuel, he sprinkles (the sacrificial vessels) three times with the whole (Prokshanī water).

25. Having warmed the Darvī spoon (over the fire), having wiped it, and warmed it again, he puts it down.

26. Having besprinkled (with water) the Darbha grass with which the fuel was tied together, he throws it into the fire.

The word which I have translated by ‘vessels’ is bilavanti, which literally means ‘the things which have brims.’ Probably this expression here has some technical connotation unknown to me. Mātridatta simply says, bilavanti pātrāsi.—‘As before’ means, ‘as stated with regard to the Praṇīta water.’

10. On all sides, so as to keep his right side turned towards (the fire), with (the Mantra), 'God Savitṛ! Give thy impulse!' (Tatt. Samh. I, 7, 7, 1).

11. Having (thus) sprinkled (water) round (the fire), and having anointed the fuel (with Āgya), he puts it on (the fire) with (the Mantra), 'This fuel is thy self, Gātavedas! Thereby thou shalt be inflamed and shalt grow. Inflame us and make us grow; through offspring, cattle, holy lustre, and through the enjoyment of food make us increase. Svāhā!'

12. He then sacrifices with the (spoon called) Darvi (the following oblations):

13. Approaching the Darvi (to the fire) by the northerly junction of the pegs (laid round the fire), and fixing his mind on (the formula), 'To Pragāpati, to Manu svāhā!' (without pronouncing that Mantra), he sacrifices a straight, long, uninterrupted (stream of Āgya), directed towards the south-east.

14. Approaching the Darvi (to the fire) by the southern junction of the pegs (laid round the fire),

11. As to the Mantra, compare Sāṅkhāyana II, 10, 4, &c.

13, 14. The two oblations described in these Sūtras are the so-called Āghāras; see Sūtra 15, and Pāraskara I, 5, 3; Ārvālāyana I, 10, 13. Regarding the northern and the southern junction of the Paridhi woods, see above, Sūtras 3 and 4. According to Mātrakṛṣṭa, the words 'long, uninterrupted' (Sūtra 13) are to be supplied also in Sūtra 14.
15. Having (thus) poured out the two Āghāra oblations, he sacrifices the two Āgyabhāgas,

16. With (the words), ‘To Agni svāhā!’ over the easterly part of the northerly part (of the fire); with (the words), ‘To Soma svāhā!’ over the easterly part of the southerly part (of the fire).

17. Between them he sacrifices the other (oblations).

18. (He makes four oblations with the following Mantras): ‘Thou whom we have set to work, Gātavedas! carry forward (our offerings). Agni! Perceive this work (i.e. the sacrifice), as it is performed (by us). Thou art a healer, a creator of medicine. Through thee may we obtain cows, horses, and men. Svāhā!

‘Thou who liest down athwart, thinking, “It is I who keep (all things) asunder:” to thee who art propitious (to me), I sacrifice this stream of ghee in the fire. Svāhā!

‘To the propitious goddess svāhā!

‘To the accomplishing goddess svāhā!’

3. (Oblations) for which no Mantras are prescribed (are made merely with the words), 'To such and such (a deity) svāhā!'—according to the deity (to whom the oblation is made).

4. He sacrifices with the Vyāhritis, 'Bhūḥ! Bhuvah! Suvaḥ!'—with the single (three Vyāhritis) and with (the three) together.

5. (The Mantras for the two chief oblations are), the (verse), 'Life-giving, Agni!' (Taitt. Brāhmaṇa I, 2, 1, 11), (and),

   'Life-giving, O god, choosing long life, thou whose face is full of ghee, whose back is full of ghee, Agni, drinking ghee, the noble ambrosia that comes from the cow, lead this (boy) to old age, as a father (leads) his son. Svāhā!'

6. (Then follow oblations with the verses),

7. (With the verse), ‘What I have done too much in this sacrifice, or what I have done here deficiently, all that may Agni Svīṣṭakṛt, he who knows it, make well sacrificed and well offered for me. 8. Here some add as subordinate oblations, before the Svīṣṭakṛt, the Gaya, Abhyātāna, and Rāṣṭra-bhrīt (oblATIONS).

13. The Rāshṭrabhrīt (oblations he sacrifices) with (the twelve Mantras), 'The champion of truth, he whose law is truth.' After having quickly repeated (each) section, he sacrifices the first oblation with (the words), 'To him svāhā!' the second (oblation) with (the words), 'To them svāhā!'

14. Having placed a stone near the northerly junction of the pegs (which are laid round the fire), (the teacher)—

Patala 1, Section 4.

1. Makes the boy tread on (that stone) with his right foot, with (the verse), 'Tread on this stone; like a stone be firm. Destroy those who seek to do thee harm; overcome thy enemies.'

12. 'He performs worship with that Mantra, wearing the sacrificial cord over his right shoulder, to the Manes. According to others, he worships Agni. But this would stand in contradiction to the words (of the Mantra).' Mātridatta.

13. Taittirīya Samhitā III, 4, 7. 'To him' (tasmai) is masculine, 'to them' (tābhyaḥ) feminine. The purport of these words will be explained best by a translation of the first section of the Rāshṭrabhrīt formulas: 'The champion of truth, he whose law is truth, Agni is the Gandharva. His Apsaras are the herbs; "sap" is their name. May he protect this power of holiness and this worldly power. May they protect this power of holiness and this worldly power. To him svāhā! To them svāhā!'

4, 1. Comp. Sāṅkhāyana I, 13, 12; Pāraskara I, 7, 1.
2. After (the boy) has taken off his old (garment), (the teacher) makes him put on a (new) garment that has not yet been washed, with (the verses),

'The goddesses who spun, who wove, who spread out, and who drew out the skirts on both sides, may those goddesses clothe thee with long life. Blessed with life put on this garment.

'Dress him; through (this) garment make him reach a hundred (years) of age; extend his life. Brähhaspati has given this garment to king Soma that he may put it on.

'Mayst thou live to old age; put on the garment! Be a protector of the human tribes against imprecation. Live a hundred years, full of vigour; clothe thyself in the increase of wealth.'

3. Having (thus) made (the boy) put on (the new garment, the teacher) recites over him (the verse),

'Thou hast put on this garment for the sake of welfare; thou hast become a protector of thy friends against imprecation. Live a hundred long years; a noble man, blessed with life, mayst thou distribute wealth.'

4. He then winds the girdle three times from left to right round (the boy, so that it covers) his navel. (He does so only) twice, according to some (teachers). (It is done) with (the verse),

2. Pāraskara I, 4, 13. 12; Atharva-veda II, 13, 2. 3 (XIX, 24). Instead of paridātavā u, we ought to read, as the Atharva-veda has, paridhātavā u.

3. Atharva-veda II, 13, 3; XIX, 24, 6.

4. Sāṅkhāyana II, 2, 1; Pāraskara II, 2, 8. The text of the Mantra as given by Hiranyakesin is very corrupt, but the corruptions may be as old as the Hiranyakesi-sūtra itself, or even older.
Here she has come to us who drives away sin, purifying our guard and our protection, bringing us strength by (the power of) inhalation and exhalation, the sister of the gods, this blessed girdle.

5. On the north side of the navel he makes a threefold knot (in the girdle) and draws that to the south side of the navel.

6. He then arranges for him the skin (of an antelope, &c., see Sûtra 7) as an outer garment, with (the Mantras),

'The firm, strong eye of Mitra, glorious splendour, powerful and flaming, a chaste, mobile vesture, this skin put on, a valiant (man), N. N.!

'May Aditi tuck up thy garment, that thou mayst study the Veda, for the sake of insight and belief and of not forgetting what thou hast learnt, for the sake of holiness and of holy lustre!'

7. The skin of a black antelope (is worn) by a Brâhmaṇa, the skin of a spotted deer by a Râganya, the skin of a he-goat by a Vaisya.

8. He then gives him in charge (to the gods), a Brâhmaṇa with (the verse), 'We give this (boy) in charge, O Indra, to Brahman, for the sake of great learning. May he (Brahman ?) lead him to old age, and may he (the boy) long watch over learning.'

6. I propose to correct garishnu into karishnu. See Sâñkhâyana II, 1, 30.

7. Sâñkhâyana II, 1, 2, 4, 5, &c.,

8. In the first hemistic I propose to correct pari dadhmasi into pari dadmâsi. The verse seems to be an adaptation of a Mantra which contained a form of the verb pari-dhâ (comp. Atharva-veda XIX, 24, 2); thus the reading pari ... dadhmasi found in the MSS. may be easily accounted for. The second hemistic is very corrupt, but the Atharva-veda (loc. cit.; yathainam garase nayât) shows at least the general sense.
A Rāgayāna (he gives in charge to the gods) with (the verse), 'We give this boy in charge, O Indra, to Brahman, for the sake of great royalty. May he lead him to old age, and may he long watch over royalty.'

A Vaisya (he gives in charge) with (the verse), 'We give this boy in charge, O Indra, to Brahman, for the sake of great wealth. May he lead him to old age, and may he long watch over wealth.'

9. (The teacher) makes him sit down to the west of the fire, facing the north, and makes him eat the remnants of the sacrificial food, with these (Mantras), 'On thee may wisdom, on thee may offspring' (Taitt. Aranyaka, Āndhra redaction, X, 44),—altering (the text of the Mantras).

10. Some make (the student) eat 'sprinkled butter.'

11. (The teacher) looks at (the student) while he is eating, with the two verses, 'At every pursuit we invoke strong (Indra)' (Taitt. Samh. IV, 1, 2, 1), (and), 'Him, Agni, lead to long life and splendour' (Taitt. Samh. II, 3, 10, 3).

12. Some make (the boy) eat (that food with these two verses).

PRASNA I, PĀṬALA 2, SECTION 5.

1. 'To him who comes (to us), we have come. Drive ye away death! May we walk with him safely; may he walk here in bliss; (may he) walk in bliss until (he returns) to his house'—this (verse the teacher repeats) while (the boy) walks round the fire so as to keep his right side turned towards it.

2. (The teacher) then causes him to say, 'I have come hither to be a student. Initiate me! I will be a student, impelled by the god Savitri.'

3. (The teacher then) asks him:

4. 'What is thy name?'

5. He says, 'N. N!'-what his name is.

6. (The teacher says), 'Happily, god Savitri, may I attain the goal with this N. N.'—here he pronounces (the student's) two names.

7. With (the verse), 'For bliss may the goddesses afford us their protection; may the waters afford drink to us. With bliss and happiness may they overflow us'—both wipe themselves off.

8. Then (the teacher) touches with his right hand (the boy’s) right shoulder, and with his left (hand) his left (shoulder), and draws (the boy’s) right arm towards himself with the Vyâhrîs, the Sâvitri verse, and with (the formula), ‘By the impulse of the god Savitri, with the arms of the two Asvins, with Pûshan’s hands I initiate thee, N. N.!’

9. He then seizes with his right hand (the boy’s) right hand together with the thumb, with (the words), ‘Agni has seized thy hand; Soma has seized thy hand; Savitri has seized thy hand; Sarasvatî has seized thy hand; Pûshan has seized thy hand; Brihaspati has seized thy hand; Mitra has seized thy hand; Varuna has seized thy hand; Tvashtri has seized thy hand; Dhâtri has seized thy hand; Vishnu has seized thy hand; Pragâpati has seized thy hand.’

10. ‘May Savitri protect thee. Mitra art thou by rights; Agni is thy teacher.

‘By the impulse of the god Savitri become Brihaspati’s pupil. Eat water. Put on fuel. Do the service. Do not sleep in the day-time’—thus (the teacher) instructs him.

11. Then (the teacher) gradually moves his right

8. The word which I have translated ‘draws ... towards himself’ is the same which is also used in the sense of ‘he initiates him’ (upanayate). Possibly we should correct the text: dakshinam bâhum anv abhyâtmam upanayate, ‘he turns him towards himself from left to right (literally, following his right arm).’ Comp. Sânkhâyana II, 3, 2.—Regarding the Mantra, comp. Sânkhâyana II, 2, 12, &c.

touches the place of his heart with (the formulas), rejoice with all thy heart; may Brīhaspati join thee to me!

‘To me alone thou shalt adhere. In me thy thoughts shall dwell. Upon me thy veneration shall be bent. When I speak, thou shalt be silent.’

12. With (the words), ‘Thou art the knot of all breath; do not loosen thyself’—(he touches) the place of his navel.

13. After (the teacher) has recited over him (the formula),

‘Bhūḥ! Bhuvah! Suvaḥ! By offspring may I become rich in offspring! By valiant sons, rich in valiant sons! By splendour, rich in splendour! By wealth, rich in wealth! By wisdom, rich in wisdom! By pupils, rich in holy lustre!'

And (again the formulas),

‘Bhūḥ! I place thee in the Rikas, in Agni, on the earth, in voice, in the Brahman, N. N.!

‘Bhuvah! I place thee in the Yagus, in Vāyu, in the air, in breath, in the Brahman, N. N.!

‘Suvaḥ! I place thee in the Sāmans, in Sūrya, in heaven, in the eye, in the Brahman, N. N.!

‘May I be beloved (?) and dear to thee, N. N.!

13. The reading of the last Mantra is doubtful. Ishatas should possibly be ish/as, but the genitive analasya, or, as some of the MSS. have, analasya (read, analasasya ?), points rather to a genitive like ikkhatas. If we write ikkhatas and analasasya, the translation would be: ‘May I be dear to thee, who loves me, N. N.! May I be dear to thee, who art zealous, N. N.!’ Comp.
Sānkhyāyana II, 3, 3.
May I be dear to thee, the fire (?), N. N.! Let us dwell here! Let us dwell in breath and life! Dwell in breath and life, N. N.!'—

14. He then seizes with his right hand (the boy's) right hand together with the thumb, with the five sections, 'Agni is long-lived.'

Patala 2, Section 7.

1. He then causes (the student) to put on the fire seven pieces of fresh Palāsa wood, with unbroken tops, of one span's length, which have been anointed with ghee.

2. One (of these pieces of wood he puts on the fire) with (the Mantra), 'To Agni I have brought a piece of wood, to the great Gātavedas. As thou art inflamed, Agni, through that piece of wood, thus inflame me through wisdom, insight, offspring, cattle, holy lustre, and through the enjoyment of food. Svāhā!'—

3. (Then he puts on the fire) two (pieces of wood with the same Mantra, using the dual instead of the

5. He then sprinkles (water) round (the fire) as above.

6. 'Thou hast given thy consent;' 'Thou hast given thy impulse'—thus he changes the end of each Mantra.

7. He then worships the (following) deities (with the following Mantras),

8. Agni with (the words), 'Agni, lord of the vow, I shall keep the vow;'

9. Vāyu with (the words), 'Vāyu, lord of the vow, (&c.)';

15. Then he says to him, 'Go out for alms.'

16. Let him beg of his mother first;

17. Then (let him beg) in other houses where they are kindly disposed towards him.

18. He brings (the food which he has received) to his Guru (i.e. to the teacher), and announces it to him by saying, 'These are the alms.'

19. (The teacher accepts it) with the words, 'Good alms they are.'

20. 'May all gods bless thee whose first garment we accept. May after thee, the prosperous one, the well-born, many brothers and friends be born'—with (this verse the teacher) takes (for himself) the former garment (of the student).

May it make its way without damage, dispersing those who infest us;' (and the formula), 'Here is holding, here is keeping asunder; here is enjoyment, here may it enjoy itself:' with (these texts) he ascends the chariot, if he enters (the village) on a chariot.

3. 'A horse art thou, a steed art thou'—with these eleven 'horses' names' (Taitt. Samh. VII, 1, 12) (he mounts) the horse, if (he intends to enter the village) on horseback.

4. With (the formula), 'With Indra's thunderbolt I bestride thee; carry (me); carry the time; carry me forward to bliss. An elephant art thou. The elephant's glory art thou. The elephant's splendour art thou. May I become endowed with the elephant's glory, with the elephant's splendour'—(he mounts) the elephant, if (he intends to proceed to the village) on it.

3. In this Śûtra three 'horses' names' are given as the Pratîkâ of the Yagus quoted, 'Thou art asva, thou art haya, thou art maya.' Mātrakâtta observes that the third of them is not found in the Taittirîya Samhitâ, which gives only ten, and not eleven, horses' names.

2. (The host) then makes to him the announcement, 'The Argha water!'

3. (The guest) accepts it with (the formula), 'Thou camest to me with glory. Unite me with brilliancy, splendour, and milk. Make me beloved by all creatures, the lord of cattle.'

4. 'To the ocean I send you, the imperishable (waters); go back to your source. May I not suffer loss in my offspring. May my sap not be shed'—this (verse the guest) recites over the remainder (of the Argha water), when it is poured out (by the person who had offered it to him).

5. Then he utters to him the announcement, 'The water for sipping!'

6. With (the formula), 'Thou art the first layer for Ambrosia,' he sips water.

May the rebuke of Indra always rebuke you. If you, who worship your own deceit, despise me (?), . . . . may Indra bind you with his bond, and may he drive you back again to me.’

Now some ceremonies connected with special wishes of the person who has performed the Samāvartana and has settled in a house, will be described.’ In my opinion, it would be more correct to consider Sūtra 18 of the preceding section as the last of the aphorisms that regard the Samāvartana. With Sūtra 2 compare Pāraskara III, 7; Āpastamba VIII, 23, 6. It seems impossible to attempt to translate the hopelessly corrupt last lines of the Mantra.

4. A part of this Mantra also is most corrupt. In the first line I propose to write, nivarto vo nyāvīrītat. With the last line comp. Pāraskara III, 7, 3. I think that the text of Pāraskara should be corrected in the following way: pari tvā hvalano hvalan nivartas tvā nyāvīrītat, indraḥ pāśena sitvā tvā mahyam . . . (three syllables) ānayet. The Āpastambīya Mantrapâtha, according to Dr. Winternitz’s copy, gives the following text: anupohvad anuvhayo vivartto
5. Then he enters his house, puts a piece of Sidhraka wood on (the fire), and sacrifices with the 'on-drawing verse,' ‘Back-bringer, bring them back’ (Taitt. Samh. III, 3, 10, 1).

7. One whose wife has a paramour, should grind big centipedes (?) to powder, and should insert (that powder), while his wife is sleeping, into her secret parts, with the Mantra, ‘Indra . . . . from other men than me.’

7. On sthūrā dṛidhā[ḥ] Mātridatta says, sthūrā dṛidhāḥ sthūr-of the very corrupt condition of the text. The reading given by most of the MSS. is, Indrāya yāsyā sepham alikam anyebhyaḥ purushebhyo-nyatra mat. The Āpastambiya Mantrapāṭha reads, indrāyāsyā phaligam anyebhyaḥ purushebhonyatra mat. The meaning very probably is that Indra is invoked to keep away from the woman the sepha of all other men except her husband’s.

‘If thou shootest, as it were, the thought dwelling in thy face, upwards to thy forehead, I loosen the anger of thy heart like the bow-string of an archer.

‘Day, heaven, and earth: we appease thy anger, as the womb of a she-mule (cannot conceive).’

4. Now (follows) the way for obtaining the victory in disputes.

5. He puts wood on the fire at night-time in an inner apartment, performs the rites down to the Vyāhṛiti oblations, and sacrifices small grains mixed with Āgya, with (the verse), ‘Tongueless one, thou who art without a tongue! I drive thee away through my sacrifice, so that I may gain the victory in the dispute, and that N. N. may be defeated by me. Svāhā!’

6. Then in the presence (of his adversary), turned towards him, he murmurs (the verses), ‘I take away the speech from thy mouth, (the speech) that dwells in thy mind, (the speech) from thy heart. Out of every limb I take thy speech. Wheresoever thy speech dwells, thence I take it away.

7. He touches the assembly-hall (in which the contest is going on), and murmurs, 'The golden-armed, blessed (goddess), whose eyes are not faint, who is decked with ornaments, seated in the midst of the gods, has spoken for my good. Svâhâ!'

8. 'For me have the high ones and the low ones, for me has this wide earth, for me have Agni and Indra accomplished my divine aim'—with (this verse) he looks at the assembly, and murmurs (it) turned towards (the assembly).

Prasna I, Patâla 5, Section 16.

1. When he has first seen the new moon, he sips water, and holding (a pot of) water (in his hands) he worships (the moon) with the four (verses), 'Increase' (Taitt. Samh. I, 4, 32), 'May thy milk' (ibid. IV, 2, 7, 4), 'New and new again (the moon) becomes, being born' (ibid. II, 4, 14, 1), 'That Soma which the Ādityas make swell' (ibid. II, 4, 14, 1).

7. Probably we should write agitâksåtf.
8. Måtridatta says, prativedinam abhigapaty eva.
16. This chapter contains different Prayâsittas.
2. When he has yawned, he murmurs, 'May will and insight (dwell) in me.'

3. If the skirt (of his garment) is blown upon him (by the wind), he murmurs, 'A skirt art thou. Thou art not a thunderbolt. Adoration be to thee. Do no harm to me.'

4. He should tear off a thread (from that skirt) and should blow it away with his mouth.

5. If a bird has befouled him with its excrements, he murmurs, 'The birds that timidly fly together with the destroyers, shall pour out on me happy, blissful splendour and vigour.'

Then let him wipe off that (dirt) with something else than his hand, and let him wash himself with water.

6. 'From the sky, from the wide air a drop of water has fallen down on me, bringing luck. With my senses, with my mind I have united myself, protected by the prayer that is brought forth by the righteous ones'this (verse) he should murmur, if a drop of water unexpectedly falls down on him.

7. 'If a fruit has fallen down from the top of a tree, or from the air, it is Vâyu (who has made it fall). Where it has touched our bodies or the garment, (there) may the waters drive away destruction'—this (verse) he should murmur, if a fruit unexpectedly falls down on him.

8. 'Adoration to him who dwells at the cross-roads, whose arrow is the wind, to Rudra! Adoration to Rudra who dwells at the cross-roads!—this (formula) he murmurs when he comes to a cross-road;

9. ‘Adoration to him who dwells among cattle, whose arrow is the wind, to Rudra! Adoration to Rudra who dwells among cattle!’—thus at a dung-heap;

10. ‘Adoration to him who dwells among the serpents, whose arrow is the wind, to Rudra! Adoration to Rudra who dwells among the serpents!’—thus at a place that is frequented by serpents.

11. ‘Adoration to him who dwells in the air, whose arrow is the wind, to Rudra! Adoration to Rudra who dwells in the air!’—this (formula) let him murmur, if overtaken by a tornado.

12. ‘Adoration to him who dwells in the waters, whose arrow is the wind, to Rudra! Adoration to Rudra who dwells in the waters!’—this (formula) he murmurs when plunging into a river which is full of water.

13. ‘Adoration to him who dwells there, whose arrow is the wind, to Rudra! Adoration to Rudra who dwells there!’—this (formula) he murmurs when approaching a beautiful place, a sacrificial site, or a big tree.

touching it, he would bring upon himself (the guilt of) whatever faults have been committed at that sacrifice. If he touches one (sacrificial post), he should say, ‘This is thy wind;’ if two (posts), ‘These are thy two winds;’ if many (posts), ‘These are thy winds.’

17. ‘The voices that are heard after us (?) and around us, the praise that is heard, and the voices of the birds, the deer’s running (?) athwart: that we fear (?) from our enemies’—this (verse) he murmurs when setting out on a road.

18. ‘Like an Udgâtri, O bird, thou singest the Sâman; like a Brahman’s son thou recitest thy hymn, when the Soma is pressed.

‘A blessing on us, O bird; bring us luck and be kind towards us!’—(This Mantra) he murmurs against an inauspicious bird;

19. ‘If thou raisest thy divine voice, entering upon living beings, drive away our enemies by thy voice. O death, lead them to death!’—(thus) against a solitary jackal.

20. Then he throws before the (jackal, as it were), a fire-brand that burns at both ends, towards that region (in which the jackal’s voice is heard), with (the words), ‘Fire! Speak to the fire! Death! Speak to the death!’ Then he touches water,

17. The Mantra is very corrupt. Perhaps anihûtam should be corrected into anihûtam, which is the reading of the Ápastambīya Mantrapāthka. In the last Pāda bhayāmasi is corrupt; the meaning seems to be, ‘that we (avert from ourselves and) turn it to our enemies.’ Probably Dr. Kirste is right in reading bhagāmasi.

21. And worships (the jackal) with the Anuvāka, 'Thou art mighty, thou farriest away' (Taitt. Sam-

5. Now the following expiations for portents are prescribed. A dove sits down on the hearth, or the bees make honey in his house, or a cow (that is not a calf) sucks another cow, or a post puts forth shoots, or an anthill has arisen (in his house): cases like these (require the following expiation):

6. He should bathe in the morning, should put on clean garments, should show patience (with everybody) during the day, and should speak (only) with Brâhmânas. Having put wood on the fire in an inner apartment, and having performed the rites down to the Vyâhriti oblations, he sacrifices with (the verses), ‘This, O Varuna,’ &c. (see above I, 2, 8, 16, down to the end of the Sûtra). Then he serves food to the Brâhmânas and causes them to say, ‘An auspicious day! Hail! Good luck!’

4. With (the formula), ‘I see you full of sap. Full of sap you shall see me’—(he looks at them) when they are gone into the stable, and with (the formula), ‘May I be prosperous through your thousand prospering.’

5. Then having put wood on the fire amid the cows, and having performed the rites down to the Vyâhriti (oblations), he makes oblations of milk with (the verses),

3. The Mantra is very corrupt. I think it ought to be corrected somehow in the following way: samsthâ stha samsthâ vo bhûyâsamañkutâ stha mā mak kyodhvam mâham bhavatibhyas kyoshi. Comp. also Dr. Kirste’s note.

5. In the second verse I propose to change abibhrad into ‘Soma has given her to the Gandharva; the Gandharva has given her to Agni. Agni gives me cattle and children, and thee besides.

‘This am I, that art thou; the heaven I, the earth thou; the Sâman I, the Rik thou. Come! Let us join together. Let us unite our sperm that we may generate a male child, a son, for the sake of the increase of wealth, of blessed offspring, of strength.

‘Bountiful Indra, bless this woman with sons and with a happy lot. Give her ten sons; let her husband be the eleventh.’

3. After he has made her sit down in her proper place (see Sûtra 5 of the preceding section), and has sprinkled Âgya into her joined hands, he twice pours fried grain into them, with (the verse), ‘This grain I pour (into thy hands): may it bring prosperity to me, and may it unite thee (with me). 5. Having made her rise with (the verse which she recites), ‘Up! with life’ (Taitt. Samh. I, 2, 8, 1), and having circumambulated the fire (with her) so that their right sides are turned towards it, with (the verse), ‘May we find our way with thee through all hostile powers, as through streams of water’—he pours fried grain (into her hands, and sacrifices them), as before.

6. Having circumambulated (the fire) a second time, he pours fried grain (into her hands, and sacrifices them), as before.

7. Having circumambulated (the fire) a third time, he sacrifices to (Agni) Svishâkriyā.

8. Here some add as subordinate oblations the Gaya, Abhyâtâna, and Râshtrabhrit (oblations) as above.

9. To the west of the fire he makes her step forward in an easterly or a northerly direction the (seven) ‘steps of Vishnu.’

1. (He makes her step forward, and goes with her himself), with (the Mantras), 'One (step) for sap, may Vishṇu go after thee; two (steps) for juice, may Vishṇu go after thee; three (steps) for vows, may Vishṇu go after thee; four (steps) for comfort, may Vishṇu go after thee; five (steps) for cattle, may Vishṇu go after thee; six (steps) for the prospering of wealth, may Vishṇu go after thee; seven (steps) for the sevenfold Hotrīship, may Vishṇu go after thee.'

2. After the seventh step he makes her abide (in that position) and murmurs, 'With seven steps we have become friends. May I attain to friendship with thee. May I not be separated from thy friendship. Mayst thou not be separated from my friendship.'

3. He then puts his right foot on her right foot, moves his right hand down gradually over her right shoulder, and touches the place of her heart as above,

4. And the place of her navel with (the formula), 'Thou art the knot of all breath; do not loosen thyself.'

5. After he has made her sit down to the west of the fire, so that she faces the east, he stands to the east (of his bride), facing the west, and besprinkles her with water, with the three verses, 'O waters, ye are wholesome' (Taitt. Samh. IV, 1, 5, 1), with the four verses, 'The gold-coloured, clean, purifying waters' (V, 6, 1), and with the Anuvāka, 'The purifier, the heavenly one' (Taitt. Brāhmaṇa I, 4, 8).

1. Then they let her depart (in a vehicle from her father’s house), or they let her be taken away.

2. Having put (the fire into a vessel) they carry that (nuptial) fire behind (the newly-married couple).

3. It should be kept constantly.

4. If it goes out, (a new fire) should be kindled by attrition, or it should be fetched from the house of a Srotiya.

5. Besides, if (the fire) goes out, the wife or the husband should fast.

6. When (the bridegroom with his bride) has come to his house, he says to her, ‘Cross (the threshold) with thy right foot first; do not stand on the threshold.’

7. In the hall, in its easterly part, he puts down the fire and puts wood on it.

8. To the west of the fire he spreads out a red bull’s skin with the neck to the east, with the hair outside.

6. Mātridatta explains adhīrayantī by vāpanti gāyāpatyoh sirasi kshipanti.

22, 4. ‘If the fire on which they had put wood, was a fire produced by attrition, (the new fire) should (also) be kindled by attrition. If it was a common (laulkika) fire that they had fetched, (the new fire) should be fetched from a Srotiya's house. Thereby it is shown that the common fire at the Upanayana ceremony, &c., should be fetched only from a Srotiya's house.’ Mātridatta.

9. On that (skin) they both sit down facing the east or the north, so that the wife sits behind her husband, with (the verse), 'Here may the cows sit down, here the horses, here the men. Here may also Pūshan with a thousand (sacrificial) gifts sit down.'

10. They sit silently until the stars appear.

11. When the stars have appeared, he goes forth from the house (with his wife) in an easterly or northerly direction, and worships the quarters (of the horizon) with (the hemistich), 'Ye goddesses, ye six wide ones' (Taitt. Samh. IV, 7, 14, 2).

12. (He worships) the stars with (the Pāda), 'May we not be deprived of our offspring;'

13. The moon with (the Pāda), 'May we not get into the power of him who hates us, O king Soma!'

14. He worships the seven Rishis (ursa major) with (the verse), 'The seven Rishis who have led to firmness she, Arundhati, who stands first among the six Kṛttikās (pleiads):—may she, the eighth one, who leads the conjunction of the (moon with the) six Kṛttikās, the first (among conjunctions) shine upon us!' Then he worships the polar star with (the formula), 'Firm dwelling, firm origin. The firm one art thou, standing on the side of firmness. May all these things firmly and immovably dwell with me!’

Patala 7, Section 23,

1. (Then follow the Mantras), ‘I know thee as the firm Brahman. May I become firm in this world and in this country.

‘I know thee as the immovable Brahman. May I not be moved away from this world and from this country. May he who hates me, my rival, be moved away from this world and from this country.

‘I know thee as the unshaken Brahman. May I not be shaken off from this world and from this country. May he who hates me, my rival, be shaken off from this world and from this country.

‘I know thee as the unfalling Brahman. May I not fall from this world and from this country. May he who hates me, my rival, fall from this world and from this country.

‘I know thee as the nave of the universe. May I become the nave of this country. I know thee as the centre of the universe. May I become the centre of this country. I know thee as the string that holds the universe. May I become the string that holds this country. I know thee as the pillar

‘As the navel is the centre of the Prānas, thus I am the navel. May hundred-and-onefold evil befall him who hates us and whom we hate; may more than hundred-and-onefold merit fall to my lot!’

2. Having spoken there with a person that he likes, and having returned to the house, he causes her to sacrifice a mess of cooked food.

3. The wife husks (the rice grains of which that Sthālpāka is prepared).

4. She cooks (that Sthālpāka), sprinkles (Āgya) on it, takes it from the fire, sacrifices to Agni, and then sacrifices to Agni Svishāyit.

5. With (the remains of) that (Sthālpāka) he entertains a learned Brāhmaṇa whom he reveres.

6. To that (Brāhmaṇa) he makes a present of a bull.

7. From that time he constantly sacrifices (yagate) on the days of the full and of the new moon a mess of cooked food sacred to Agni.

8. In the evening and in the morning he constantly sacrifices (guhoti) with his hand (and not with the Darvi) the two following oblations of rice or of barley: ‘To Agni Svāhā! To Pragāpati Svāhā!’

9. Some (teachers) state that in the morning the former (of these oblations) should be directed to Śūrya.

10. Through a period of three nights they should eat no saline food, should sleep on the ground, wear ornaments, and should be chaste.

11. In the fourth night, towards morning, he puts wood on the fire, performs the (regular) ceremonies down to the (regular) expiatory oblations, and sacrifices nine expiatory oblations (with the following Mantras):

Patañga 7, Section 24.

1. 'Agni! Expiation! Thou art expiation. I, the Brāhmaṇa, entreat thee, desirous of protection. What is terrible in her, drive that away from here. Svāhā!

   'Vāyu! Expiation! Thou art expiation. I, the Brāhmaṇa, entreat thee, desirous of protection. What is blameful in her, drive that away from here. Svāhā!

   'Sun! Expiation! Thou art expiation. I, the Brāhmaṇa, entreat thee, desirous of protection. What dwells in her that is death-bringing to her husband, drive that away from here. Svāhā!

   'Sun! Expiation! &c.

   'Agni! Expiation! &c.

   'Agni! Expiation! &c.

   'Vāyu! Expiation! &c.

   'Sun! Expiation! &c.'

11. According to the commentary he performs the regular ceremonies down to the oblation offered with the Mantra, 'Thus thou, Agni' (see above, I, 3, 5, and compare Pâraskara I, 2, 8). Mātri-datta says, prāyāścitiparyantam krīvā sa tvam no Agna ity etadantam krīvā nava prāyāścitī tvam . . . vyāhritiparyantam krīvā imam me Varuneti katasro (I, 3, 5) huvaitā guhoti.
2. Having sacrificed (these oblations), he then pours the remainder as an oblation on her head, with (the formulas), 'Bhûh! I sacrifice fortune over thee. Svâhâ! Bhuvaḥ! I sacrifice glory over thee. Svâhâ! Suvaḥ! I sacrifice beauty over thee. Svâhâ! Bhûr bhuvah suvaḥ! I sacrifice brightness over thee. Svâhâ!'

3. There (near the sacrificial fire) he places a water-pot, walks round the fire (and that water-pot) keeping his right side turned towards it, makes (the wife) lie down to the west of the fire, facing east or north, and touches her secret parts, with (the formula), 'We touch thee with the five-forked, auspicious, unhostile (?), thousandfoldly blessed, glorious hand that thou mayst be rich in offspring!'

4. He then cohabits with her with (the formula), 'United is our soul, united our hearts, united our navel, united our skin. I will bind thee with the bond of love; that shall be insoluble.'

5. He then embraces her with (the formula), 'Be devoted to me; be my companion. What dwells in thee that is death-bringing to thy husband, that I make death-bringing to thy paramours. Bring luck to me; be a sharp-cutting (destroyer) to thy paramours.'

6. He then seeks her mouth with his mouth, with (the two verses), 'Honey! Lo! Honey! This is honey! my tongue's speech is honey; in my mouth dwells the honey of the bee; on my teeth dwells concord.

PATALA 7, SECTION 26¹.

1. The fire which (the sacrificer keeps) from the time of his marriage, is called the Aupāsana (or sacred domestic fire).

2. With this fire the sacred domestic ceremonies are performed.

3. On account of his worship devoted to this (fire the sacrificer) is considered as an Āhitāgni (i.e. as one who has set up the Srauta fires), and on account of his fortnightly Karu sacrifices (on the days of the new and full moon) as one who offers the sacrifices of the new and full moon (as prescribed in the Srauta ritual); so (is it taught).

4. If (the service at the domestic fire) has been interrupted for twelve days, the sacrificer ought to set the fire up again.

5. Or he should count all the sacrifices (that have been left out), and should offer them.

6. (The punarādhāna or repeated setting up of the fire is performed in the following way): in an enclosed space, having raised (the surface), sprinkled it (with water), strewn it with sand, and covered it with Udumbara or Plaksha branches, he silently brings together the things belonging to (the sacrifice) according as he is able to get them, produces fire by attrition out of a sacrificially pure piece of wood, or gets a common fire, places it in a big vessel, sets it in a blaze, and puts (fuel) on it with the words, ‘Bhūḥ! Bhuvaḥ! Suvaḥ! Om! Fixity!’

¹ This chapter is left out in Mātridatta’s commentary; it seems to be a later addition. The division of the Sūtras is my own.

26, 3. For tasyaupāsanaṇena I think we should read tasyopāsanaṇena.
7. He then puts wood on the fire, performs (the rites) down to the Vyāhṛiti oblations, and offers two ‘mindā oblations’ (i.e. oblations for making up for defects) with (the two Mantras), ‘If a defect (mindā) has arisen in me,’ (and), ‘Agni has given me back my eye’ (Taitt. Samh. III, 2, 5, 4).

9. He offers four ‘abhyaśavartin oblations’ with (the Mantras), ‘Agni who turns to us (abhyaśavartin)!’ ‘Agni Aṅgiras!’ ‘Again with sap,’ ‘With wealth’ (Taitt. Samh. IV, 2, 1, 2, 3).

10. Having made oblations with the single Vyāhṛitis and with (the three Vyāhṛitis together), and having made an oblation with the verse, ‘Thou art quick, Agni, and free from imprecation. Verily (satyam) thou art quick. Held by us in our quick mind (manas), with thy quick (mind) thou carriest the offering (to the gods). Being quick bestow medicine on us! Svāhā!’—this (last) oblation contains an allusion to the mind (manas), it refers to Pragāpati, and alludes to the number seven (?),—he quickly repeats in his mind the dāra-hotṛi formula (Taitt. Āraṇy. III, i, 1). Then he makes the sagraha oblation (?); (then follow the oblations), 'This, O Varuna' (&c.; see I, 2, 8, 16, down to the end of the Sûtra). Then he serves food to the Brâhmaṇas and causes them to say, 'An auspicious day! Hail! Good luck!' he then performs in the known way the sacrifice of a mess of cooked food to Agni.

11. Here he gives an optional gift to his Guru: a pair of clothes, a milch cow, or a bull.

12. If he sets out on a journey, he makes the fire enter himself or the two kindling-sticks in the way that has been described (in the Srauta-sûtra).

13. Or let him make it enter a piece of wood, in the same way as into the kindling-sticks.

14. A piece of Khadira wood, or of Palâsa, or of Udumbara, or of Aśvattha wood—

15. With one of these kinds of wood he fetches, where he turns in (on his journey), fire from the house of a Srottiya, and puts the (piece of wood) into which his fire has entered, on (that fire), with the two verses, 'He who has received the oblations' (Taitt. Samh. IV, 6, 5, 3), and 'Awake!' (IV, 7, 13, 5).

16. The way in which he sacrifices has been explained (in the Srauta-sûtra).

17. If one half-monthly sacrifice has been omitted, he should have a sacrifice to (Agni) Pathikrît performed over this (fire). If two (half-monthly sacrifices), to (Agni) Vaisvânara and Pathikrît. If more than two, (the fire) has to be set up again.

18. If the fire is destroyed or lost, or if it is mixed with other fires, it has to be set up again.

PRAśNA I, PATALA 8, SECTION 27.

1. If he will have a house built, he should during the northerly course of the sun, in the time of the increasing moon, under the constellation Rohini and under the three constellations designated as Uttara (Uttara-Phalgunt, Uttara-Ashādha, Uttara-Proshtha-pada) put wood on the fire, perform the rites down to the Vyāhṛti oblations, and should sacrifice with (the verses), 'This, O Varuna' (&c.; see I, 2, 8, 16, down to the end of the Sūtra). Then he serves food to the Brāhmaṇas and causes them to say, 'An auspicious day! Hail! Good luck!' he puts on a garment that has not yet been washed, touches water, takes a shovel with (the formula), 'On the impulse of the god Savitri' (Taitt. Samh. I, 3, 1, 1), draws lines thrice from the left to the right round (the places where the pits for the posts shall be dug) with (the formula), 'A line has been drawn' (Taitt. Samh. I, 3, 1, 1), digs the pits (in which the posts shall be erected) as it is fit, and casts the earth (dug out of those pits) towards the inside (of the building-ground).

2. He erects the southern door-post with (the verse), 'Here I erect a firm house; it stands in peace, streaming ghee. Thus may we walk in thee, O house, blessed with heroes, with all heroes, with unharmed heroes;'

3. The northern (door-post) with (the verse), 'Stand here firmly, O house, rich in horses and cows, rich in delight; rich in sap, overflowing with milk be set up, for the sake of great happiness.'
4. With (the verse), 'To thee (may) the young child (go), to thee the calf with its companion, to thee the golden cup; to thee may they go with pots of curds'—he touches the two posts, after they have been erected.

5. In the same way (Sūtras 2. 3) he erects the two chief posts,

6. And touches them as above (Sūtra 4).

7. He fixes the beam of the roof on the posts with (the formula), 'Rightly ascend the post, O beam, erect, shining, drive off the enemies. Give us treasures and valiant sons.'

8. When the house has got its roof, he touches it with (the verse),

'The consort of honour, a blissful refuge, a goddess, thou hast been erected by the gods in the beginning; clothed in grass, cheerful thou art; bring us bliss, to men and animals.'

9. Then, under the constellation Anurādhā, the ground (on which the house stands) is expiated (in the following way).

10. By night he puts wood on the fire in an inner room (of the house), performs the rites down to the Vyāhṛti oblations, and sacrifices (with the following Mantras):

dwell, the house I call. May it know us as we know it.

‘Hither are called the cows; hither are called goats and sheep; and the sweet essence of food is called hither to our house.

‘Hither are called many friends, the sweet companionship of friends. May our dwellings always be unharmed with all our men.

‘Rich in sap, rich in milk, refreshing, full of joy and mirth, free from hunger (?) and thirst, O house, do not fear us’—with (these verses) he approaches his house (when returning from a journey).

2. ‘To thee I turn for the sake of safety, of peace. The blissful one! The helpful one! Welfare! Welfare!’—with (this formula) he enters.

3. On that day, on which he has arrived, he should avoid all quarrelling.

4. ‘The joyful house I enter which does not bring death to men; most manly (I enter) the auspicious one. Bringing refreshment, with genial minds (we enter the house); joyfully I lie down in it’—with (this verse) he lies down.

5. ‘May we find our way with thee through all hostile powers, as through streams of water’—with (this verse) he looks at his wife; he looks at his wife.

End of the First Prasna.

Praśna II, Pātala 1, Section 1.

1. Now (follows) the Simantonnayana (or parting of the pregnant wife’s hair).

2. In the fourth month of her first pregnancy, in the fortnight of the increasing moon, under an auspicious constellation he puts wood on the fire, performs the rites down to the Vyāhṛīti oblations, and makes four oblations to Dhāṭrī with (the verse), ‘May Dhāṭrī give us wealth’ (and the following three verses, Taitt. Samh. III, 3, 11, 2, 3).

3. ‘This, O Varuna’ (&c.; see I, chap. 27, Sūtra 2, down to): ‘Hail! Good luck!’

He then makes the wife who has taken a bath, who wears a clean dress and ornaments, and has spoken with a Brāhmaṇa, sit down to the west of the fire, facing the east, in a round apartment. Standing to the east (of the wife), facing the west he parts her hair upwards (i.e. beginning from the front) with a porcupine’s quill that has three white spots, holding (also) a bunch of unripe fruits, with the Vyāhṛītis (and) with the two (verses), ‘I invoke Rākā,’ (and), ‘Thy graces, O Rākā’ (Taitt. Samh. III, 3, 11, 5). Then he recites over (his wife the formulas), ‘Soma alone is our king, thus say the Brāhmaṇa tribes, sitting near thy banks, O Gaṅgā,

1. Now (follows) the Pumsavana (i.e. the ceremony for securing the birth of a male child).

2. In the third month, in the fortnight of the increasing moon, under an auspicious constellation (&c.; see the preceding section, Sūtras 2 and 3, down to :) in a round apartment. He gives her a barley-grain in her right hand with (the formula), 'A man art thou;'

3. With (the formula), 'The two testicles are ye,' two mustard seeds or two beans, on both sides of that barley-grain.

4. With (the formula), 'Svāvṛitat' (? svāvṛittat ?) (he pours) a drop of curds (on those grains). That he gives her to eat.

5. After she has sipped water, he touches her belly with (the formula), 'With my ten (fingers) I touch thee that thou mayst give birth to a child after ten months.'

6. (He pounds) the last shoot of a Nyagrodha trunk (and mixes the powder) with ghee, or a silkworm (and mixes the powder) with a pap prepared of panick seeds, or a splinter of a sacrificial post taken from the north-easterly part (of that post) exposed to the fire, or (he takes ashes or soot [?] of)

7. If she miscarries, he should three times stroke (her body), from the navel upwards, with her wet hand, with (the formula), 'Thitherwards, not hitherwards, may Tvashtri bind thee in his bonds. Making (the mother) enter upon the seasons, live ten months (in thy mother's womb); do not bring death to men.'

8. When her confinement has come, he performs the kshipraprasavana (i.e. the ceremony for accelerating the confinement). Having placed a water-pot near her head and a Tûryantî plant near her feet, he touches her belly.

Patala 1, Section 3.

1. 'As the wind blows, as the ocean waves, thus may the embryo move; may it come forth together with the after-birth'—with (this verse) he strokes (her body) from above downwards.

2. When the child is born, he lays an axe on a stone, and a piece of gold on that axe; after he has turned these things upside down (so that the stone lies uppermost), he holds the boy over them with (the two verses),

'Be a stone, be an axe, be insuperable gold. Thou indeed art the Veda called son; so live a hundred autumns.

'From limb by limb thou art produced; out of the heart thou art born. Thou indeed art the self (âtman) called son; so live a hundred autumns.'

3. (The contents of this Sûtra are similar to those of Pâraskara I, 16, 2.)

4. They take the Aupâsana (or regular Grihya) fire away, and they bring the Sûtikâgni (or the fire of the confinement).

5. That (fire) is only used for warming (dishes, etc.).

6. No ceremonies are performed with it except the fumigation (see the next Sûtra).

7. He fumigates (the child) with small grains mixed with mustard seeds. These he throws into the coals (of the Sûtikâgni) (eleven times, each time with one of the following Mantras):

(a) 'May Sanda and Marka, Upavîtra, Sândikera, Ulûkhala, Kyavana vanish from here. Svâhâ!

(b) 'Âlikhat, Vilikhat, Animisha, Kimvadanta, Upasruti. Svâhâ!

(c) 'Aryamna, Kumbhin, Satru, Pâtrapâni, Nipuzi. Svâhâ!

(d) 'May Ântremukha, Sarshapûrûna vanish from here. Svâhâ!

(e) 'Kesînt, Svalomînt, Bagâbogâ, Upakâsînt—go away, vanish from here. Svâhâ!

(l) ‘O god with the black path, Agni, burn the lungs, the hearts, the livers of those (female demons); burn their eyes. Svâhâ!’

8. Then he washes his hands and touches the ground with (the verses), ‘O thou whose hair is well parted! Thy heart that dwells in heaven, in the moon: of that immortality impart to us. May I not weep over distress (falling to my lot) through my sons.

‘I know thy heart, O earth, that dwells in heaven, in the moon: thus may I, the lord of immortality, not weep over distress (falling to my lot) through my sons.’

of intelligence). With (an instrument of) gold over which he has laid a Darbha shoot tied (to that piece of gold) he gives to the child, which is held so that it faces the east, ghee to eat, with the formulas, 'Bhûk! I sacrifice the Rikas over thee! Bhuvah! I sacrifice the Yagus over thee! Suvaḥ! I sacrifice the Sâmans over thee! Bhûr bhuvah suvaḥ! I sacrifice the Atharvan and Ângiras hymns over thee!'

10. He then bathes the child with lukewarm water with (the following Mantras):

'From chronic disease, from destruction, from wile, from Varuna's fetter I release thee. I make thee guiltless before the Brahman; may both Heaven and Earth be kind towards thee.

'May Agni together with the waters bring thee bliss, Heaven and Earth together with the herbs; may the air together with the wind bring thee bliss; may the four quarters of the heaven bring thee bliss.

'Rightly have the gods released the sun from darkness and from the seizing demon; they have dismissed him from guilt; thus I deliver this boy from chronic disease, from curse that comes from his kin, from wile, from Varuna's fetter.'

11. He then places the child in his mother's lap with (the verse):

Patala 1, Section 4.

1. 'The four divine quarters of the heaven, the consorts of Wind, whom the sun surveys: to their long life I turn thee; may consumption go away to destruction!"

2. Having placed (him there) he addresses (his wife with the Mantra), 'May no demon do harm to thy son, no cow that rushes upon him (?) Mayst thou become the friend of treasures; mayst thou live in prosperity in thy own way.'

3. He washes her right breast and makes her give it to the child with (the formula), 'May this boy suckle long life; may he reach old age. Let thy breast be exuberant for him, and life, glory, renown, splendour, strength.'

4. In the same way the left breast.

5. With (the words), 'He does not suffer, he does not cry, when we speak to him and when we touch him'—he touches both breasts. Then he places a covered water-pot near her head, with (the formula), 'O waters, watch in the house. As you watch with the gods, thus watch over this wife, the mother of a good son.'

6. On the twelfth day the mother and the son take a bath.

7. They make the house clean.

8. They take the Sūtikāgni away, and they bring the Aupāsana fire.

9. Having put wood on that fire, and having performed the rites down to the Vyāhrīti oblations, they sacrifice twelve oblations with the verses, 'May Dhātri give us wealth' (III, 3, 11, 2–5); according to some (teachers they make) thirteen (oblations).

4, 2. I am not certain about the translation of dhenur atisārini. The Āpastambīya Mantrapāha has atyāśārini. Atisārin means, suffering from diarrhoea; perhaps we should read abhisārini.

10. 'This, O Varuna' (&c.; see I, chap. 27, Sūtra 2, down to): 'Hail! Good luck!' Then let him give a name to the child, of two syllables or of four syllables, beginning with a sonant, with a semi-vowel in it, with a long vowel (or) the Visarga at its end, or a name that contains the particle su, for such a name has a firm foundation; thus it is understood.

11. Let the father and the mother pronounce (that name) first. For it is understood, 'My name first, O Gātavedas.'

12. He should give him two names. For it is understood (Taitt. Samh. VI, 3, 1, 3), 'Therefore a Brāhmaṇa who has two names, will have success.'

13. The second name should be a Nakshatra name.

14. The one name should be secret; by the other they should call him.

15. He should give him the name Somayāgin (i.e. performer of Soma sacrifices) as his third name; thus it is understood.

16. When he returns from a journey, or when his son returns, he touches him with (the formula), 'With Soma's lustre I touch thee, with Agni's splendour, with the glory of the sun.'

1. Then (follows) in the sixth month the Anna-prásana (i.e. the first feeding with solid food).

2. In the fortnight of the increasing moon, under an auspicious constellation, he puts wood on the fire, performs the rites down to the Vyāhṛiti oblations, and sacrifices (with the Mantras), 'This, O Varuna' (&c.; see I, chap. 27, Sūtra 2, down to): 'Hail! Good luck!' Then he gives (to the child) threefold food to eat, curds, honey, and ghee, with (the formula), 'Bhûk I lay into thee! Bhuvaḥ I lay into thee! Suvaḥ I lay into thee!'

3. Then he gives him (other) food to eat with (the formula), 'I give thee to eat the essence of water and of the plants. May water and plants be kind towards thee. May water and plants do no harm to thee.'

Patala I, Section 6.

1. In the third year (he performs) the Kūḍākarman (i.e. the tonsure of the child's head).

3. To the north (of the fire) his mother or a student (brahma¯kārīn) holds a lump of bull's dung;
4. Therewith he (or she) receives the (cut-off) hair.
5. He then pours cold and warm water together.
6. Having poured warm water into cold water he moistens the hair near the right ear with (the formula), ‘May the waters moisten thee for life’ (Taitt. Samh. I, 2, 1, 1).
7. With (the formula), ‘Herb, protect him!’ (Taitt. Samh., loc. cit.) he puts an herb, with its point upwards, into (the hair).
8. With (the formula), ‘Axe, do no harm to him!’ (Taitt. Samh., loc. cit.) he touches (that herb) with the razor.
9. With (the words), ‘Heard by the gods, I shave that (hair)’ (Taitt. Samh., loc. cit.) he shaves him.
10. In the same way (he moistens, &c.) the other (sides of his head) from left to right.
11. Behind with (the Mantra), ‘The razor with which Savitrī, the knowing one, has shaven (the beard) of king Soma and Varuna, with that, ye Brāhmanas, shave his (head); make that he be united with vigour, with wealth, with glory.’

On the left side with (the Mantra), ‘(The razor) with which Pūshan has shaven (the beard) of Bṛhaspati, of Agni, of Indra, for the sake of long life, with that I shave thy (head), N. N.!’

6, 3, 4. Some consider, according to Mātridatta, these two Sūtras as one. He says (p. 149 of Dr. Kistre's edition), uttaratity etadādi pratigrhnātīty etadantam vā sūtram, dhārayams tenāsyakesān pratipathitavyam (read, pratigrhnātīti pathitavyam).

A person who is kindly disposed towards him, gathers the (cut-off) hair and buries it in a cow-stable, or near an Udumbara tree, or in a clump of Darbha grass, with (the Mantra), 'Where Pûshan, Brîhaspati, Savitri, Soma, Agni (dwell), they have in many ways searched where they should depose it, between heaven and earth, the waters and heaven.'

14. He makes a gift to a Brâhmaṇa according to his liberality.

15. To the barber (he gives) boiled rice with butter.

16. In the same way the Godânakarman (or the ceremony of shaving the beard) is performed in the sixteenth year.

1. Now (follows) the expiation for attacks of the dog-demon (epilepsy) (on the boy).

2. When the attack assails (the boy, the performer of the ceremony) arranges his sacrificial cord over his left shoulder, sips water, and fetches water with a cup that has not yet been used (in order to pour it upon the boy). In the middle of the hall he elevates (the earth at) that place in which they use to gamble; he besprinkles it with water, casts the dice, scatters them (on all sides), makes a heap of them, spreads them out, makes an opening in the thatched roof of the hall, takes the boy in through that (opening), lays him on his back on the dice, and pours a mixture of curds and salt-water upon him, while they beat a gong towards the south. Come quickly to my offering, Sarva! Om!’

3. To the northerly (hut he has) the ‘bountiful one’ (led);—(i.e. the consort of the spit-ox);

4. To the middle (between the two huts) the ‘conqueror’ (i.e. a calf of those two parents).

5. He gives them water to drink in the same order in which they have been led (to their places), prepares three messes of boiled rice, ‘spreading under’ and sprinkling (Ágya) on them, and touches (the three beasts with those portions of rice) in the order in which they have been led (to their places), with (the Mantras), ‘May he, the bountiful one, touch it. To the bountiful one svâhâ! May she, the bountiful one, touch it. To the bountiful one svâhâ! May the conqueror touch it. To the conqueror svâhâ!’

6. After he has performed (the rites) down to the Vyáhṛīti oblations, he takes the messes of boiled rice (to the fire) and sacrifices them (the first with the Mantra),

9. Then he cuts off from all the three portions of rice and sacrifices the Svishâkritt oblation with (the Mantra), 'To Agni Svishâkritt svâhâ!'

10. Around that fire they place their cows so that they can smell the smell of that sacrifice.

11. 'With luck may they walk round our full face'—with (these words) he walks round all (the objects mentioned, viz. the fire, the three beasts, and the other cows), so as to turn his right side towards them, and worships (the sütâgava) with the (eleven) Anuvâkas, 'Adoration to thee, Rudra, to the wrath' (Taitt. Samh. IV, 5), or with the first and last of them.

3. In feeding them he should not look at any (worldly) purposes.

4. Having put wood on the fire and strewn southward pointed and eastward-pointed Darbha grass around it, having prepared the Âgya in an Âgya pot over which he has laid one purifier, having sprinkled water round (the fire) from right to left, and put a piece of Udumbara wood on (the fire), he sacrifices with the (spoon called) Darvi which is made of Udumbara wood.

5. Having performed the rites down to the Âgya-bhâga offerings, he suspends his sacrificial cord over his right shoulder and calls the Fathers (to his sacrifice) with (the verse), 'Come hither, O Fathers, friends of Soma, on your hidden, ancient paths, bestowing on us offspring and wealth and long life, a life of a hundred autumns.'
6. He sprinkles water in the same direction (i.e. towards the south) with (the verse), 'Divine waters, send us Agni. May our Fathers enjoy this sacrifice. May they who receive their nourishment every month bestow on us wealth with valiant heroes.'

7. Having performed the rites down to the Vyâhriti oblations with his sacrificial cord over his left shoulder, he suspends it over his right shoulder and sacrifices with (the following Mantras):

'To Soma with the Fathers, svadhâ! Adoration!
'To Yama with the Ângiras and with the Fathers, svadhâ! Adoration!

'With the waters that spring in the east and those that come from the north: with the waters, the supporters of the whole world, I interpose another one between (myself and) my father. Svadhâ! Adoration!

'I interpose (another one) through the mountains; I interpose through the wide earth; through the sky and the points of the horizon, through infinite bliss I interpose another one between (myself and) my grandfather. Svadhâ! Adoration!

'I interpose (another one) through the seasons, through days and nights with the beautiful twilight. Through half-months and months I interpose another one between (myself and) my great-grandfather. Svadhâ! Adoration!'

Then he sacrifices with their names: 'To N. N. svadhâ! Adoration! To N. N. svadhâ! Adoration!'

7. Comp. Sânkhâyana III, 13, 5. The translation there given of the words anyam antâh pitur dadhe ought to be changed accordingly.—For ábhur anyopapadyatâm read mâtur anyo svapadyatâm as Sânkhâyana has.
‘Wherein my mother has done amiss, abandoning her duty (towards her husband), may my father take that sperm as his own; may another one fall off from the mother. Svadhā! Adoration!’

In the same way a second and a third verse with the alteration of the Mantra, ‘Wherein my grandmother,’ ‘Wherein my great-grandmother.’

Patala 4, Section 11.

1. ‘The Fathers who are here and who are not here, and whom we know and whom we do not know: Agni, to thee they are known, how many they are, Gātavedas. May they enjoy what thou givest them in our oblation. Svadhā! Adoration!

‘Your limb that this flesh-devouring (Agni) has burnt, leading you to the worlds (of the Fathers), Gātavedas, that I restore to you again. Unviolated with all your limbs arise, O Fathers! Svadhā! Adoration!

‘Carry the Âgya, Gātavedas, to the Fathers, where thou knowest them resting afar. May streams of Âgya flow to them; may their wishes with all their desires be fulfilled! Svadhā! Adoration!’

In the same way a second and a third verse with the alteration of the Mantra, ‘to the grandfathers,’ ‘to the great-grandfathers.’

2. In the same way he sacrifices of the food, altering the Mantra, ‘Carry the food, &c.’

3. Then he sacrifices the Svishtakṛit oblation

Before the verse, ‘Carry the Âgya,’ the Uddāyas, as Mātridatta states, insert the words, ‘He then makes oblations of Âgya (with the Mantra, &c.).’ According to this reading the words of the second Sūtra, ‘In the same way, &c.,’ would refer only to these last oblations.

with (the formula), 'To Agni Kavyavâhana Svishtakrit svadhâ! Adoration!'

4. He then touches the food with (the formulas),
'The earth is thy vessel, the heaven is the lid. I sacrifice thee into the Brahman's mouth. I sacrifice thee into the up-breathing and down-breathing of the Brâhmanas. Thou art imperishable; do not perish for the Fathers yonder, in yon world! The earth is steady; Agni is its surveyor in order that what has been given may not be lost.

'The earth is thy vessel, the heaven is the lid;
&c. Do not perish for the grandfathers yonder, in yon world. The air is steady; Vâyu is its surveyor, in order that what has been given may not be lost.

'The earth is thy vessel, the heaven is the lid;
&c. Do not perish for the great-grandfathers yonder, in yon world. The heaven is steady; Âditya is its surveyor, in order that what has been given may not be lost.'

5. With (the words), 'I establish myself in the breath and sacrifice ambrosia,' he causes the Brâh-manas to touch (the food).

Patala 4, Section 12.

1. While they are eating, he looks at them with (the words), 'My soul (âtman) dwells in the Brahman that it may be immortal.'

2. When they have eaten (and go away), he goes after them and asks for their permission to take the remains of their meal (for the rites which he is going to perform). Then he takes a water-pot and a handful of Darbha grass, goes forth to a place that lies in a south-easterly intermediate direction, spreads the Darbha grass out with its points towards the south, and pours out on that (grass) with downward-turned hands, ending in the south, three handfuls of water, with (the formulas), 'May the fathers, the friends of Soma, wipe themselves! May the grandfathers... the great-grandfathers, the friends of Soma, wipe themselves!' or, 'N. N.! Wash thyself! N. N.! Wash thyself!'

3. On that (grass) he puts down, with downward-turned hands, ending in the south, the lumps (of food for the Fathers). To his father he gives his lump with (the words), 'This to thee, father, N. N.!' to the grandfather with (the words), 'This to thee, grandfather, N. N.!' to the great-grandfather with (the words), 'This to thee, great-grandfather, N. N.!' silently a fourth (lump). This (fourth lump) is optional.

4. Should he not know the names (of the ancestors), he gives the lump to the father with (the words), 'Svadhā to the Fathers who dwell on the earth,' to the grandfather with (the words), 'Svadhā to the Fathers who dwell in the air,' to the great-grandfather with (the words), 'Svadhā to the Fathers who dwell in heaven.'

5. Then he gives, corresponding to each lump, collyrium and (other) salve and (something that represents) a garment.

3. According to the commentary after each formula the words are added, 'and to those who follow thee;' comp. Taitt. Samh. I, 8, 5, 1; III, 2, 5, 5; Kāty.-Sraut. IV, i, 12.
6. The collyrium (he gives), saying three times, ‘Anoint thy eyes, N. N.! Anoint thy eyes, N. N.!’

7. The salve, saying three times, ‘Anoint thyself, N. N.! Anoint thyself, N. N.!’

8. With (the formula), ‘These garments are for you, O Fathers. Do not seize upon anything else that is ours,’ he tears off a skirt (of his garment) or a flake of wool and puts that down (for the Fathers), if he is in the first half of his life.

9. He tears out some hairs of his body, if in the second half.

10. Then he washes the vessel (in which the food was of which he had offered the lumps), and sprinkles (the water with which he has washed it), from right to left round (the lumps) with (the Mantra), ‘These honey-sweet waters, bringing refreshment to children and grandchildren, giving sweet drink and ambrosia to the Fathers, the divine waters refresh both (the living and the dead), these rivers, abounding in water, covered with reeds, with beautiful bathing-places; may they flow up to you in your world!’ Then he turns the vessel over, crosses his hands so that the left hand becomes right and the right hand becomes left, and worships (the Fathers) with the formulas of adoration, ‘Adoration to you, O Fathers, for the sake of sap’ (Taitt. Samh. III, 2, 5, 5).

11. Then he goes to the brink of some water and pours down three handfuls of water (with the following Mantras):

6 seq. A fourth time he gives the same thing silently; comp. Sūtra 3.

8, 9. If his age is under fifty years or over fifty years (Mātri-datta; comp. the commentary on Kātyāyana-Sraut. IV, 1, 17. 18).
Patala 4, Section 13.

1. 'This is for thee, father, this honey-sweet wave, rich in water. As great as Agni and the earth are, so great is its measure, so great is its might. As such a great one I give it. As Agni is imperishable and inexhaustible, thus may it be imperishable and inexhaustible, sweet drink to my father. By that imperishable (wave), that sweet drink, live thou together with those, N. N.! The Rickas are thy might.

'This is for thee, grandfather, &c. . . . As great as Vāyu and the air are . . . As Vāyu is imperishable . . . to my grandfather. . . . The Yagus are thy might.

'This is for thee, great-grandfather, &c. . . . As great as Áditya and the heaven are . . . The Sāmans are thy might.'

2. Returning (from the place where he has performed the Pinda offerings) he puts the substance cleaving (to the Sthâll) into the water-pot and pours it out, with (the verse), 'Go away, O Fathers, friends of Soma, on your hidden, ancient paths. After a month return again to our house and eat our offerings, rich in offspring, in valiant sons.'

3. Thereby the (Srāddha) celebrated in the middle of the rainy season has been declared.

4. There (oblations of) flesh are prescribed;

5. Of vegetables, if there is no flesh.

End of the Fourth Patala.

PRAśNA II, PĀTALĀ 5, SECTION 14.

1. We shall explain (the festival of) the Ashākā.

2. The eighth day of the dark fortnight that follows after the full moon of Māgha, is called Ekāshākā.

3. On the day before that Ashākā, under (the Nakshatra) Anūrādhās, in the afternoon he puts wood on the fire, strews southward-pointed and eastward-pointed Darbha grass around it, and turns rice out of four shallow cups over which he has laid one purifier, with (the Mantra), 'I turn out, impelled by the god Savitṛi, this cake prepared from four cups (of rice), which may drive away all suffering from the Fathers in the other world. On the impulse of the god Savitṛi, with the arms of the two Āsvins, with Pūshan's hands I turn thee out, agreeable to the fathers, the grandfathers, the great-grandfathers.'

4. With the same purifier he silently strains the Prokṣhānt water; he silently sprinkles (with that water the rice and the vessels), silently husks (the rice), silently bakes it in four dishes like a Purodāsa, sprinkles (Āgya) on it, takes it from the fire, sprinkles (water) round (the fire) from right to left, and puts a piece of Udumbara wood on (the fire). With the (spoon called) Darvi which is made of Udumbara wood, he cuts off in one continual line which is directed towards south-east, (the Avadāna portions)

14, 1. Hiranyakesin describes only one Ashākā, the Ekāshākā, while the other texts speak of three or four Ashākās; comp. the quotations in the note on Sāṅkhāyana III, 12, 1.

4. The rules of the Srauta ritual regarding the baking of the Purodāsa are given by Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmondsopfer, p. 43.
one after the other, spreading under and sprinkling over them (Āgya), and sacrifices them, one after the other, in one continual line which is directed towards south-east, with (the Mantras), 'The mortars, the pressing-stones have made their noise, preparing the annual offering. Ekāśhṭakā! May we be rich in offspring, in valiant sons, the lords of wealth. Svadhā! Adoration!'

'God Agni! The cake which is prepared with ghee and accompanied by (the word) svadhā, that the Fathers may satiate themselves—(this our) offering carry duly, Agni. I, the son, sacrifice an oblation to my fathers. Svadhā! Adoration!'

'Here is a cake, Agni, prepared from four cups (of rice), with ghee, rich in milk, in wealth, in prosperity. May the Fathers gladly accept it all together; may it be well sacrificed and well offered by me. Svadhā! Adoration!'

5. Then he makes oblations of (other) food with (the verses), 'The one who shone forth as the first,' 'The Ekāśhṭakā, devoting herself to austerities,' 'She who shone forth as the first' (Taitt, Samhitā IV, 3, 11, 1. 3. 5).

6. Cutting off (the Avadānas destined for the Svishṭakṛit oblation) together from the cake and from the (other) food and mixing them with clarified butter, he makes an oblation thereof with (the formula), 'To Agni Kavyavāhana Svishṭakṛit svadhā! Adoration!'

7. That (cake) with ghee and honey and with the food (mentioned in Sūtras 5. 6) he touches in the way prescribed for the Srāddha ceremony and puts down lumps (of it) according to the ritual of the Pinda offerings.

8. (The remains of) that (cake, &c.) he serves to learned Brâhmanas.

9. He gives them food and presents as at the Srâddha ceremony.

10. The known (rites) down to the pouring out of the handfuls of water (are performed here) as at the monthly (Srâddha).

Patala 5, Section 15.

1. On the following day he sacrifices a cow to the Fathers.

2. Having put wood on the fire and strewn southward-pointed and eastward-pointed Darbha grass around it, he sacrifices the oblation for the touching of the animal (see below), with (the verse), ‘This cow I touch for the Fathers; may my assembled fathers gladly accept it (which is offered) with fat and ghee, with the word svadhâ; may it satiate my fathers in the other world. Svadhâ! Adoration!’ Then he touches (the cow) with one (blade of) sacrificial grass and with an unforked Vâpatrasāparnt of Udumbara wood, with (the formula), ‘I touch thee agreeable to the Fathers.’

3. He sprinkles (the cow with water) with (the words), ‘I sprinkle thee agreeable to the Fathers.’

4. When it has been sprinkled and fire has been carried round it, they kill it to the west of the fire, its head being turned to the west, its feet to the south.

4. The Udāyas read, as Mâtridatta states, ‘to the south of the fire.’

5. After it has been killed, he silently ‘strengthens’ its sense-organs (by touching them) with water, and silently takes out the omentum, the heart, and the kidneys.

6. With the Vapârapânt of Udumbara wood he roasts the omentum; with spits of Udumbara wood the other (parts mentioned in Sûtra 5) separately.

7. After he has roasted them, and has sprinkled Âgya over them, and has taken them from the fire, he sprinkles water round (the fire) from right to left, puts a piece of Udumbara wood on (the fire), and sacrifices with a Darvi spoon of Udumbara wood the omentum, spreading under and sprinkling over it (Âgya), with (the verse), ‘Carry the omentum, Gâtavedas, to the Fathers, where thou knowest them resting afar. May streams of fat flow to them; may their wishes with all their desires be fulfilled. Svadhâ! Adoration!’

8. He sacrifices the omentum entirely. The other parts (Sûtra 5) he should offer to the Brâhmanas and should feed them (with those parts of the cow).

9. When the food (for the Brâhmanas) is ready, he cuts off (the Avadânas) together from the mess of boiled rice, and from the pieces of meat, and mixing them with clarified butter he makes oblations

5. On the ‘strengthening’ of the sense-organs of an immolated victim, comp. Āpastamba-Srauta-sûtra VII, 18, 6 seq. Schwab, Thieropfer, 110.—On matasne, see Indische Studien, IX, 248; Schwab 127.

8. Possibly the reading of the Udtâyas indicated by Mâtridatta, vyâkriya instead of upâkriya, is correct. The translation would be, ‘With the rest, distributing it, &c.’
thereof with the verses, 'Behold the Ekāśṭakā, the giver of food with meat and ghee, (which is offered) with (the word) svadhā. By the Brāhmaṇas that food is purified. May it be an imperishable (blessing) to me! Svadhā! Adoration!'

'The Ekāśṭakā, devoting herself to austerities, the consort of the year, exuberant (with milk), has poured forth milk. May you live on that milk, O Fathers, all together. May this (food) be well offered and well sacrificed by me! Svadhā! Adoration!

'The image of the year' (Taitt. Samh. V, 7, 2, 1).

10. After he has sacrificed, he cuts off (the Ava-dānas) from the food and from the pieces of meat, and mixing them with clarified butter he makes an oblation with (the formula), 'To Agni Kavyavāhana Svishtakṛt svadhā! Adoration!'

11. The known (rites) down to the pouring out of the handfuls of water (are performed here) as at the monthly (Srāddha).

12. The gifts of food and presents, however, are not necessary here.

13. On the following day, he prepares food for the Fathers with the rest of the meat, and sacrifices with (the two verses), 'Thou, Agni, art quick,' (and), 'Pragāpati!' (see above, I, 1, 3, 5).

14. (= Sūtra 11).

End of the Fifth Paṭala.

11. See above, chap. 14, 10.
13. This is the so-called Anvashākya ceremony.
Praśna II, Patala 6, Section 16.

1. Now (follows) the Sravaṇa ceremony.

2. On the day of that full moon which falls under (the Nakshatra) Sravaṇa, after the evening Agni-hotra he puts wood on the (third of the three Srauta fires, called the) Dakshināgni. One who has not set up the (Srauta) fires, (does the same with) the sacred domestic fire.

3. Then he procures unbroken grains, unbroken fried grains, coarsely ground grains, (leaves and blossoms) of the Kimsuka tree, collyrium and (other) salve, and Âgya.

4. Having 'spread under' (Âgya) in the (spoon called) Darvi, he cuts off (the Avadānas) of those kinds of food (mentioned in Sūtra 3), mixes them with clarified butter, and sacrifices (with the formulas), 'Adoration to Agni the terrestrial, the lord of terrestrial beings! Svāhā! Adoration to Vāyu the all-pervading, the lord of aerial beings! Svāhā! Adoration to Sūrya, the red one, the lord of celestial beings! Svāhā! Adoration to Vishnu, the whitish one, the lord of the beings that dwell in the quarters (of the world). Svāhā!'

5. He anoints the Kimsuka (flowers and leaves) with Âgya, and sacrifices with (the Mantras), 'Devoured is the gadfly; devoured is thirst (?); devoured is the stinging worm.' 'Devoured is the stinging worm; devoured is thirst; devoured is the gadfly.'

5. I am not sure about the translation of viśashī. Perhaps it is only a blunder for vitriṣṭhi, which is the reading of the Āpastamba-biya Mantrapāthā. Comp. Winternitz, Der Sarpabali, ein altindischer Schlangencult (Wien, 1888), p. 28.
'Devoured is thirst; devoured is the gadfly; devoured is the stinging worm.'

6. He takes a water-pot and a handful of Darbha grass, goes forth, his face turned towards the east, spreads the Darbha grass out with its points towards the east, and makes four Bali-offerings on that (grass) with (the formulas), 'To the terrestrial Serpents I offer this Bali,' 'To the aerial, &c.; to the celestial, &c.; to the Serpents dwelling in the quarters (of the world),' &c.

7. Having given there collyrium and (other) salve (to the Serpents), he worships them with the Mantras, 'Adoration be to the Serpents' (Taitt. Samhitā IV, 2, 8, 3).

8. He should take a water-pot and should at that distance in which he wishes the serpents not to approach, three times walk round his house, turning his right side towards it, and should sprinkle water round it with (the formulas), 'Beat away, O white one, with thy foot, with the fore-foot and with the hind-foot, these seven human females and the three (daughters) of the king's tribe.

'Within the dominion of the white one the Serpent has killed nobody. To the white one, the son of Vidarva, adoration!

'Adoration to the white one, the son of Vidarva!'

9. Then he worships the Serpents towards the different regions, one by one with (the corresponding section of) these Mantras, 'The convergent one thou art called, the eastern region' (Taitt. Samh. V, 5, 10, 1 seq.).

10. From that time he daily makes the Bali-offerings till the full-moon day of Mārgastraṣha.

11. Here the Kimsuka offerings (see § 5) are not repeated.

12. The sprinkling (of water) round (the house) does not take place (see § 8).

13. The last Bali he offers with (the words), 'Going to acquit myself, going to acquit myself.'

End of the Sixth Patala.

Praṣna II, Patala 7, Section 17.

1. We shall explain the Âgraḥāyaṇī ceremony.

2. On the full-moon day of Mārgastraṣha he puts wood on the fire, strews (Darbha grass) on the entire surface round the fire, cooks a mess of sacrificial food with milk, sprinkles it (with Âgya), takes it from the fire, performs the rites down to the Vyāhr̥̄ti oblations, and sacrifices (four oblations) with (the following Mantras):

   'This offering, the creeping of Idā, rich in ghee, moving and not moving, accept gladly, O Gātavedas.

13. Some authorities understand, as Mātridatta states, that he should offer the Bali only with the words as they stand in the Sūtra, others prescribe the formula (comp. § 6): 'To the terrestrial (aerial, &c.) Serpents I offer this Bali going to acquit myself, going to acquit myself.'

17, 1. Comp. on the Âgraḥāyaṇī ceremony Sāṅkhāyana IV, 17; Pāraskara III, 2, &c.; Winternitz, Sarpabali, 32 seq.

2. The first Mantra is very corrupt; comp. Atharva-veda III, 10, 6. Regarding the legend of Idā, who was procreated out of Manu's Pāka-sacrifice, and 'came forth as if dripping, and clarified butter gathered on her step,' comp. Satapatha Brāhmaṇa I, 8, 1, 7 (M. M., India, what can it teach us? p. 136).
What domestic animals there are, of all shapes, all seven kinds of them: may they gladly dwell here and may they prosper. Svâhâ!

'The night which men welcome like a cow that comes to them, (the night) which is the consort of the year, may that (night) be auspicious to us. Svâhâ!

'Bringing bliss to the cattle, to the wife, bringing bliss by night and by day, may this (night) which is the consort of the year, be auspicious to us. Svâhâ!

'The full-moon night, bringing abundance, visiting one after another, dividing the months and fortnights: may this (night), the full one, protect us. Svâhâ!'

3. He sacrifices the oblation to Agni Svishâkrît with (the verse), 'Agni, make this (sacrifice) full that it may be well offered. Be victorious, O god, in all battles. Shine far and wide, showing us a wide path. Bestow on us long life, full of splendour and free from decay. Svâhâ!'

4. Then he washes his hands and touches the earth with (the formulas), 'In power I establish myself, in royalty. Among the horses I establish myself, among the cows. In the limbs I establish myself, in the self. In the Prânas I establish myself, in prosperity. In Heaven and Earth I establish myself, in sacrifice.

'May the three times eleven gods, the thirty-three, the gracious ones, whose Purohitâ is Brîhaspati, on the impulse of the god Savîtrî—may the gods with (all) the gods give me bliss!'

5. The master of the house sits down at their southerly end,
6. The other persons to the north,
7. According to their seniority.
8. They who know the Mantras among them, murmur the Mantras (which will be stated).
9. With (the verse), 'Be soft to us, O earth, free from thorns; grant us rest; afford us wide shelter' (Taitt. Âr. X, 1, 10), and with the two (verses), 'Verily of the mountains' (Taitt. Samh. II, 2, 12, 2. 3) they lie down on their right sides.
10. With (the verse), 'Up! with life' (Taitt. Samh. I, 2, 8, 1) they arise.
11. When they have arisen, they murmur, 'We have arisen; we have become immortal.'
12. In that way they (lie down and) arise that night three times.
13. Having served food to the Brâhmanas and having caused them to say, 'An auspicious day! Hail! Good luck!' they rest that night.

End of the Seventh Patala.

PRAŚNA II, PATALA 8, SECTION 18.

1. Now we shall explain the opening and the conclusion (of the annual course of study).
2. During the fortnight that precedes the Sravanā

13. 'Here end the Grîhya ceremonies,' says Mâtridatta. Dr. Kirste (Preface, p. viii), accordingly, believes that the last chapters may be later additions. It may be observed in connection with this, that in the Âpastambhiya-Grîhya, which throughout is so closely related to our text, the ceremonies of the Upâkaraṇa and Utsargana, of which these three chapters treat, are not described.
18, 2. Sravanâpaks̄ha means, according to Mâtridatta, srâvafull moon, when the herbs have appeared, under (the Nakshatra) Hasta or on the full-moon day (itself), the opening ceremony of the (annual course of) study (is performed).

3. Having put wood on the fire and performed the rites down to the Vyâhriti oblations, he sacrifices (with his pupils) to the Rishis of the Kândas: ‘To Pragâpati, the Rishi of a Kânda, svâhâ! To Soma, the Rishi of a Kânda, svâhâ! To Agni, the Rishi of a Kânda, svâhâ! To the Visve devâs, the Rishis of a Kânda, svâhâ! To Svayambhû, the Rishi of a Kânda, svâhâ!’—these are the Rishis of the Kândas. Or (he sacrifices) to the names of the Kândas, to the Sávitṛ, to the Rig-veda, the Yagur-veda, the Sâma-veda, the Atharva-veda, and to Sadasaspati.

4. Having (thus) sacrificed, they repeat the first three Anuvâkas,

5. Or the beginnings of all Kândas.

6. He enters upon (sacrificing) the Gaya, &c. (oblations; see above, I, 1, 3, 8).

7. After all rites down to the Svish'akrit oblation have been performed, they stop studying three days or one day; then they should go on studying so as to commence where they have broken off: so say the teachers.

8. During the fortnight that precedes the Taishî full moon, under (the Nakshatra) Rohinî or on the full-moon day (itself), the Utsarga (or conclusion of the term of study) is celebrated.

napûrvapaksha, and indeed the moon stands in conjunction with the Nakshatra Hasta only on one day of the first, not of the second, fortnight of the month Srvâma (comp. the note on Âsvalâyana-Grihyâ II, 5, 2, 3). Comp. taishâpakshasya rohinyâm, below, § 8.

8. As to taishâpaksha, comp. the note on Sûtra 2.
9. (The teacher) with his pupils goes in an easterly or northerly direction, and where they find a pleasant water with a pleasant bathing-place, they dive into it and perform three suppressions of the breath with the Aghanamarshana hymn (Rig-veda X, 190 = Taitt. Âr. X, 1, 13. 14). Holding purifiers (i.e. Darbha blades) in their hands they bathe with the three (verses), 'Ye waters, ye are wholesome' (Taitt. Samh. IV, 1, 5, 1), with the four (verses), 'The gold-coloured, pure, purifying waters' (T. S. V, 6, 1, 1 seq.), and with the Anuvâka, ' (Soma) which clears itself, the heavenly being' (Taitt. Br. I, 4, 8): giving the Darbha blades to each other and feigning to try to seize (??) each other.

10. Then they arrange on a pure spot that is inclined towards the east, seats of eastward-pointed Darbha grass, so that they end in the north—

Patala 8, Section 19.

1. For Brahman, Pragâpati, Brâhaspati, Agni, Vâyu, the Sun, the Moon, the Stars, king Indra, king Yama, king Varuna, king Soma, king Vaisravana, for the Vasus, the Rudras, the Âdityas, the Visve devâs, the Sâdhyas, the Ribhus, the Bhrgus, the Maruts, the Atharvans, the Ângiras: for these divine beings.

9. On the last words of this Sûtra, Måtridatta says, ditsanta iveti dātum ikhanta ivânyonyam prati. athavâ åditsanta iveti pâthah. åditsanto mushhanta ivânyonyam.—Professor Kielhorn’s text MS. has, âtsamta ivânyonyam; Professor Bühler’s text MS., ditsamta ivânyonyam.

19, 1. According to Måtridatta, they prepare a seat for Brahman with the words, ‘For Brahman I prepare (a seat),’ and so on. Comp. chap. 20, 3.
2. Visvāmitra, Gomadagni, Bharadvāga and Gautama, Atri, Vasishtha, Kasyapa: these are the seven Rishis.

3. Wearing their sacrificial cords below (round their body) they arrange towards the north, at a place that is inclined towards the north, seats of northward-pointed Darbha grass, so that they end in the east, for Visvāmitra, Gomadagni, Bharadvāga, Gautama, Atri, Vasishtha, Kasyapa.

4. Between Vasishtha and Kasyapa they arrange (a seat) for Arundhati, (the wife of Vasishtha);

5. Towards the south, in a place inclined towards the east, for Agastya.

6. Then for the (following) teachers, ending with those who teach (only) one Veda (?), viz. for Krishna Dvaipāyana, Gātukarna, Taruksha, Trinabindu, Varmin, Varūthin, Vāgin, Vāgarasavas, Satyasravas, Susravas, Sutasravas, Somasushmāyana, Satvat, BrīhadukthaVāmadev(y)a, Vāgiratna, Haryagvāyana, Udamaya, Gautama, Rinaṅgaya, Rītaṅgaya, Kri-taṅgaya, Dhanaṅgaya, Bhāhrū, Tryaruna, Trivarsha, Tridhātu, Sibinta, Parāsara, Vishnu, Rudra, Skanda, Kāśīvara, Gvara, Dharmag, Artha, Kāma, Krodha, Vasishtha, Indra, Tvashtri, Kartri, Dhātri, Dṛityu, Savitṛi, Sāvitrī, and for each Veda, for the Rig-veda, the Yagur-veda, the Sāma-veda, the Atharva-veda, the Itihāsa and Purāṇa.

7. Towards the south, with their sacrificial cords suspended over their right shoulders, in a place inclined towards the south, they arrange seats of southward-pointed Darbha grass, so that they end in the west—

Patala 8, Section 20.

1. For Vaisampāyana, Paliṅgu, Tittira [sic], Ukha, Ātreya, the author of the Pada-text, Kaundaṅnya the author of the commentary, for the authors of the Sūtras, for Satyāshādha (Hiranyakesin), for the handers-down of the text, for the teachers, the Rishis, the hermits dwelling in the woods, the chaste ones, for those who have only one wife.

2. They prepare (seats) each for his own fathers and maternal ancestors.

3. With (the words), 'For N. N. I prepare (a seat); for N. N. I prepare (a seat)' (he prepares) a seat.

4. With (the words), 'I satiate N. N.; I satiate N. N.' (he makes offerings of) water.

5. With (the words), 'Adoration to N. N.! Adoration to N. N.!' (he offers) perfumes, flowers, incense, and lamps.

6. With (the words), 'To N. N. svāhā! To N. N. svāhā!' (he offers) food.

7. With (the words), 'I satiate N. N.; I satiate N. N.' (he offers) water with fruits in it.

8. Having worshipped them with (the words), 'Adoration to N. N.! Adoration to N. N.!'—

9. Having put wood on the fire to the west of the surface (on which he had performed the Tarpana), 20, 1. The Kandaṅukrama of the Ātreya-sākhā, which has been printed by Professor Weber in his edition of the Taittirīya Samhitā, vol. ii, p. 356, shows that the dative Paliṅgave ought to be corrected to Paṅgaye. The 'vṛttikāra' is there called not Kuṇḍānya, but Kuṇḍina.

9. There is only one difference between the text of this Sūtra and having performed the rites down to the Vyāhrīti oblations (&c., as above, chap. 18, 3–7).

10. With the two (verses), ‘From joint to joint,’ ‘Thou who with a hundred’ (Taitt. Samh. IV, 2, 9, 2) they plant Dūrvā grass at the shore of the water.

11. They stir up waves in the water and run a race in an easterly or northerly direction until they lose their breath.

12. When they have returned (from that race? or when they have returned from the whole ceremony to the village?) they offer cakes, coarsely ground grain, and boiled rice to the Brāhmaṇas.

13. The same (rites are repeated) when they have finished the study of the whole Veda, with the exception of the planting of Dūrvā grass, of (stirring up) the water, and of the race.

14. Thus they satiate daily (after the Brahmayagna) the gods, the Rishis, and the Fathers with water; they satiate them with water.

End of the Hiranyakesi-sūtra.

and that of chap. 18, 3–7: instead of hutvā trīn ādīto-anuvākān adhīyate (18, 4) we read here, hutvā prathamena-anuvākenādhistīyate, which I believe must be translated, ‘Having sacrificed with the first Anuvāka, they recite (that Anuvāka).’ Mātridatta says, hutvā prathamottamānunvākam adhīyate.

GRIHYA-SŪTRA OF ĀPASTAMBA.
INTRODUCTORY NOTE

TO THE

GRHYA-SÛTRA OF ĀPASTAMBA.

The short treatise of Āpastamba on the Gṛhya ritual forms one Prasna of the great corpus of the Āpastambīya-Kalpa-sūtra (see Sacred Books, vol. ii, p. xii) and stands, among the Gṛhya texts, in closest connection with the Hiranyakesi-Gṛhya-sūtra. The chief difference between these two Sūtras, both belonging to the Taittiriya School of the Black Yagur-veda, consists herein, that Āpastamba, just as has been stated above with regard to Gobhila, gives only the rules for the performance of the Gṛhya rites without the Mantras, which are contained in a special collection, the Mantrapāṭha, standing by the side of the Sūtras: Hiranyakesin, on the other hand, follows the more usual practice, as adopted by Śāṅkhāyana, Āvalāyana, Pāraskara, of interweaving the description of the ceremonies with the text of the corresponding Mantras. As to the relation in which the Āpastambīya-sūtras stand to the Mantrapāṭha, there is, so far as I can see, no reason why we should not extend the theory which we have tried to establish with regard to Gobhila, to the evidently parallel case of Āpastamba: the Sūtras presuppose the existence of the Mantrapāṭha, just as the latter text seems to presuppose the Sūtras.—The questions regarding the historical relation of Āpastamba to Hiranyakesin have been treated of by Professor Bühler in his Introduction to Āpastamba's Dharma-sūtra, S. B. E., vol. ii, pp. xxiii seq.

I have here to thank Dr. Winternitz, to whom we are indebted for an excellent edition of the Āpastambīya-Gṛhya-sūtra, for having placed at my disposal, before publication, the proof-sheets of his edition, and for lending me his copy of the Mantrapāṭha as well as of the commentary of Haradatta. The kindness of the same scholar has enabled me to make use of Professor Eggeling's copy of the first part of Sudarsanârya's commentary and of his own copy of the second part of the same work.

GRIHYA-SÛTRA OF ÂPASTAMBA.

PÂTALA 1, SECTION 1.

1. Now (follow) the ceremonies (the knowledge of) which is derived from practice (and not from the Sruti).

2. They should be performed during the northern course of the sun, on days of the first fortnight (of the month), on auspicious days,

3. With the sacrificial cord suspended over (the sacrificer's) left shoulder.

4. (The rites should be performed) from left to right.

5. The beginning should be made on the east side or on the north side,

6. And also the end.

7. Ceremonies belonging to the Fathers (are performed) in the second fortnight (of the month),

8. With the sacrificial cord suspended over the right shoulder,

9. From right to left,

10. Ending in the south.

11. Ceremonies occasioned by special occurrences (are performed) according as their occasions demand.

1, i-ii. The Paribbâshas for the Pâkayânas.

7-10. Comp. 7 with 2, 8 with 3, 9 with 4, 10 with 6.
12. Having set the fire in a blaze, he strews eastward-pointed Darbha grass around it,
13. Or eastward-pointed and northward-pointed (grass);
14. Southward-pointed at sacrifices to the Fathers,
15. Or southward-pointed and eastward-pointed.
16. To the north of the fire he strews Darbha grass and (on that) he places the vessels (required for sacrifice) upside-down, two by two, if referring to ceremonies directed to the gods,
17. All at once, if to men,
18. One by one, if to the Fathers.
19. The preparation of the (blades used as) ‘purifiers,’ the measure of their length, the preparation of the Prokshánt water, and the sprinkling of the vessels are the same here as at the sacrifices of the new and full moon, (but are performed) in silence.
20. To the west of the fire he pours water into a vessel over which he has laid (two grass blades called) purifiers, purifies (the water) three times with two northward-pointed purifiers, holds it on a level with his nose and mouth, places it to the north of the fire on Darbha grass, and covers it with Darbha grass.
21. On the south side he causes a Brāhmaṇa to sit down on Darbha grass.
22. He melts the Āgya, pours it, to the west of the fire, into the Āgya-pot, over which he has laid two purifiers, draws coals (out of the sacrificial fire) towards the north, puts (the Āgya) on them, throws light on it by means of a burning (grass-blade), throws two Darbha points into it, moves a fire-brand round it three times, takes it from the fire towards the north, sweeps the coals back (into the fire), purifies (the Āgya) three times with two northward-pointed purifiers, moving them backward and forward, and throws the purifiers into the fire.

Patala 1, Section 2.

1. He warms at the fire the implement with which he sacrifices, wipes it off with Darbha blades, warms it again, sprinkles it (with water), puts it down, touches the Darbha blades with water, and throws them into the fire.

2. As paridhis (or pieces of wood laid round the fire) yoke-pins are used at the marriage, the Upanayana, the Samavartana, the parting of the (wife’s) hair, the tonsure of the child’s hair, the cutting of the beard, and at expiatory ceremonies.

3. He sprinkles water round the fire, on the south side from west to east with (the words), ‘Aditi, give thy consent!’ on the west side from south to north with ‘Anumati, give thy consent!’ on the north side from west to east with ‘Sarasvati [sic], give thy consent!’ all around with ‘God Savitri, give thy impulse!’

4. At ceremonies belonging to the Fathers (water is sprinkled) only all round (the fire), silently.

5. Having put a piece of wood on the fire, he

5. The Srauta rules on the two Āghāras are given Srauta-sūtra II, 12, 7; 14, 1.
offers the two Āghāra oblations as at the sacrifices of the new and full moon, silently.

6. Then he offers the two Āgyabhâga oblations, over the easterly part of the northerly part (of the fire) with (the words), 'To Agni Svâhâ!' over the easterly part of the southerly part (another oblation) exactly like the preceding one, with (the words), 'To Soma Svâhâ!'

7. Having offered the chief oblations (belonging to each sacrifice) according to prescription, he adds the following oblations, viz. the Gaya, Abhyâtâna, Râshrâbhrît oblations, the oblation to Prâgâpati, the Vyâhrîtis one by one, the oblation to (Agni) Svishâtakrît with (the following formula), 'What I have done too much in this ceremony, or what I have done here too little, all that may Agni Svishâtakrît, he who knows, make well sacrificed and well offered. Svâhâ!'

8. The sprinkling (of water) round (the fire is repeated) as above; the Mantras are altered so as to say, 'Thou hast given thy consent,' 'Thou hast given thy impulse.'

9. The designation 'Pâkayagñâ' is used of ceremonies connected with worldly life.

10. There the ritual based on the Brâhmana (holds good),

7. On the Gaya, Abhyâtâna, Râshrâbhrît formulas, comp. Pâraskara I, 5, 7 seq.; Hiranyakeshin I, 1, 3, 7 seq.; Taitt. Samhitâ III, 4, 4–7.—The last formula occurs also in Ârvalâyana I, 10, 23; Hiranyakeshin I, 1, 3, 6, &c.

8. Comp. above, Sûtra 3.

10. According to Haradatta, this Sûtra would imply that wheresoever the ritual described in the preceding Sûtras holds good,
11. (To which the words allude), 'He sacrifices twice; he wipes off (his hand) twice; he partakes twice (of the sacrificial food); having gone away he sips (out of the Sruṅ) and licks off (the Sruṅ).'

12. All seasons are fit for marriage with the exception of the two months of the sisīra season, and of the last summer month.

13. All Nakshatras which are stated to be pure, (are fit for marriage);

14. And all auspicious performances.

15. And one should learn from women what ceremonies (are required by custom).

16. Under the Invakās (Nakshatra), (the wooers who go to the girl's father) are sent out: such wooers are welcome.

Patala 1, Section 3.

1. Under the Maghās (Nakshatra) cows are provided;

another ritual based on the Brāhmaṇa, and more especially on the treatment of the Agnihoṭra in the Brāhmaṇa, may be used in its stead.

11. Comp. Taitt. Brāhmaṇa II, 1, 4, 5; Satapatha Brāhmaṇa II, 3, 1, 18. 21.—At the Agnihoṭra the sacrificer, having wiped off the Sruṅ with his hand, wipes off the hand on the Barhis or on the earth (Āpast.-Sraut. VI, 10, 11; 11, 4; Kātyāyana IV, 14, 20). As to the following acts alluded to in this Sūtra, comp. Āpastamba VI, 11, 4. 5; 12, 2.

16. On the Nakshatra Invakās, comp. Section 3, Sūtra 4. This Sūtra forms a Sloka-hemistich, on which Haradatta observes, 'This verse has not been made by the Sutrakāra.'

3, 1, 2. Comp. Rig-veda X, 85, 13; Atharva-veda XIV, 1, 13; Kausika-sūtra 75; Rāmāyana I, 71, 24; 72, 13; Weber, Die vedischen Nachrichten von den Naxatra, II, 364 seq. These parallel passages most decidedly show that in Sūtra 2 we ought to read vyūhyate, not vyūhyate.
2. Under the Phalgunt (Nakshatra) marriage is celebrated.

3. A daughter whom he wishes to be dear (to her husband), a father should give in marriage under the Nishṭyā (Nakshatra); thus she becomes dear (to her husband); she does not return (to her father's) house: this is an observance based on a Brāhmaṇa.

4. The word Invakās means Mrīgasiras; the word Nishṭyā means Svāti.

5. At the wedding one cow;
6. In the house one cow:
7. With the (first cow) he should prepare an Argha reception for the bridegroom as for a guest,
8. With the other (the bridegroom [?] should do so) for a person whom he reveres.

9. These are the occasions for killing a cow: (the arrival of) a guest, (the Ashtakā sacrifice offered to) the Fathers, and marriage.
10. Let (the wooer) avoid in his wooing a girl that sleeps, or cries, or has left home.

11. And let him avoid one who has been given (to another), and who is guarded (by her relations), and one who looks wicked (?), or who is a most

3. Comp. Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa I, 5, 2, 3.
4. Comp. Sūtra 3, and above, Section 2, Sūtra 16.
5–8. Comp. Śāṅkha-yana-Grīhya I, 12, 10. It is clear that with the first cow the bride's father has to receive the bridegroom. The ‘house’ mentioned in Sūtra 6 seems to be the house of the newly-married couple. In the expression ‘whom he reveres,’ ‘he,’ according to the commentaries, is the bridegroom.
10. This Sūtra forms a half-sloka.

11. Most expressions in this Sūtra are quite doubtful, and their translation rests on the explanations of the commentators (see pp. 44, 45 of Dr. Winternitz's edition), which are evidently for the most part only guesses.
excellent one (?), or (who is like the fabulous deer) sarabha (?), a hunch-back, a girl of monstrous appearance, a bald-headed girl, a girl whose skin is like a frog’s (?), a girl who has gone over to another family (?), a girl given to sensual pleasures (?), or a herdess, or one who has too many friends, or who has a fine younger sister, or one whose age is too near to that of the bridegroom (?).

12. Girls who have the name of a Nakshatra, or of a river, or of a tree, are objectionable.

13. And all girls in whose names the last letter but one is r or l, one should avoid in wooing.

14. If possible, he should place (the following) objects hidden before the girl, and should say to her, 'Touch (one of these things).'

15. (The objects are), different kinds of seeds mixed together, loose earth from (the kind of sacrificial altar called) vedi, an earth-clod from a field, cow-dung, and an earth-clod from a cemetery.

16. If she touches one of the former (objects, this portends) prosperity as characterized (by the nature of what she has touched).

17. The last is regarded as objectionable.

18. Let him marry a girl of good family and character, with auspicious characteristics, and of good health.

19. Good family, a good character, auspicious characteristics, learning, and good health: these are the accomplishments of a bridegroom.

20. A wife who is pleasing to his mind and his eyes, will bring happiness to him; let him pay no attention to the other things: such is the opinion of some.

Patala 2, Section 4.

1. Let him send out as his wooers friends who have assembled, who are versed in the Mantras.
2. He should recite over them the first two verses (Mantrap. I, 1, 1. 2).
3. When he himself has seen (the bride), let him murmur the third (verse; M. I, 1, 3).
4. With the fourth (M. I, 1, 4) let him behold her.
5. Let him seize with his thumb and fourth finger a Darbha blade, and let him wipe (therewith) the interstice between her eye-brows with the next Yagus (M. I, 1, 5), and let him throw it away towards the west.
6. If an omen occurs (such as the bride’s or her relations’ weeping), let him murmur the next (verse; M. I, 1, 6).
7. With the next (verse; M. I, 1, 7) let him send an even number of persons who have assembled there, and who are versed in the Mantras, to fetch water.
8. With the next Yagus (M. I, 1, 8) he places a round piece of Darbha net-work on her head; on that, with the next (verse; M. I, 1, 9) he places a right yoke-hole; on this hole he lays with the next (verse; M. I, 1, 10), a piece of gold, and washes her with the next five verses (M. I, 2, 1-5), (so that the water runs over that gold and through the yoke-hole); with the next (verse; M. I, 2, 6) he causes her to dress in a fresh garment, and with the next (M. I, 2, 7) he girds her with a rope.

4, 8. As to the last sentence of this Sūtra, comp. the statements collected by Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmondsopfer, p. 59.

9. Then he takes hold of her with the next (verse; M. I, 2, 8) by her right hand, leads her to the fire, spreads a mat, west of the fire, so that the points of the blades in it are directed towards the north, and on this mat they both sit down, the bridegroom to the north.

10. After the ceremonies have been performed from the putting of wood on the fire down to the Āgyabhâga oblations, he recites over her the first two (verses of the third Anuvâka).

11. Then he should take with his right hand, palm down, her right hand which she holds palm up.

12. If he wishes that only daughters may be born to him, he should seize only the fingers (without the thumb);

13. If he wishes that only sons may be born to him, the thumb.

14. He takes (her hand) so as just to touch her thumb and the little hairs (on her hand),

15. With the four verses, 'I take thy hand' (Mantrap. I, 3, 3–6).

16. He then makes her step forward with her right foot, to the north of the fire, in an easterly or northerly direction, with (the formula), 'One step for sap' (M. I, 3, 7).

17. At her seventh step he murmurs, 'Be a friend' (M. I, 3, 14).
Patala 2, Section 5.

1. Having before the sacrifice gone round the fire, so that their right sides are turned towards it,

2. They sit down in their former position, and while she takes hold of him, he offers the oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras), with (the Mantras), ‘To Soma, the acquirer of a wife, Svâhâ!’ (M. I, 4, 1–16), one oblation with each Mantra.

3. He then causes her, to the north of the fire, to tread with her right foot on a stone, with (the verse), ‘Tread’ (M. I, 5, 1).

4. Having ‘spread under’ Âgya into her joined hands, he pours roasted grain twice (into them), and sprinkles Âgya over it.

5. Some say that an uterine relation of hers pours the grain (into her hands).

6. He (?) sacrifices (that grain) with (the verse), ‘This wife’ (M. I, 5, 2).

7. Having gone round the fire, with the right side turned towards it, with the next three (verses; M. I, 5, 3–5) he makes her tread on the stone as above (M. I, 5, 6).

8. And the oblation (is performed) with the next (verse; M. I, 5, 7).

9. (Then follow) again the circumambulation (M. I, 5, 8–10), the injunction to tread on the stone

5, 2. See 4, 9. 3. See below, IV, 10, 9.
6. ‘The action of sacrificing belongs to the bridegroom; the hands of the wife represent the sacrificial vessel.’ Haradatta.—‘It is the bridegroom who sacrifices the grain with the verse, “This wife.”’ Sudarsanârya.

(I, 5, 11), and the oblation with the next (verse; I, 5, 12);

10. (Then) the circumambulation again (I, 5, 13–15).

11. He enters upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations.

12. Having performed (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire), and having untied the rope with the next two verses (I, 5, 16–17), he should then make her depart (from her father’s house in a vehicle), or should have her taken away.

13. Having put that fire (with which the marriage rites have been performed, into a vessel), they carry it behind (the newly-married couple).

14. It should be kept constantly.

15. If it goes out, (a new fire) should be kindled by attrition,

16. Or it should be fetched from the house of a Srotriya.

17. Besides, if (the fire) goes out, one of them, either the wife or the husband, should fast.

18. Or he may sacrifice with the next (verse; M. I, 5, 18), and not fast.

19. The next (verse; M. I, 6, 1) is for putting the chariot (on which the young couple is to depart), in position;

20. With the next two (verses; M. I, 6, 2–3), he puts the two animals to the chariot;

21. First the right one.

22. When she mounts (the chariot), he recites over her the next (verses; M. I, 6, 4–7).

11, 12. See Section 2, Sūtras 7, 8; Section 4, Sūtra 8.
12 seq. Comp. Hīranyakesin I, 7, 22, 1 seq.
23. With the next (verse; M. I, 6, 8), he spreads out two threads in the wheel-tracks (in which the chariot is to go), a dark-blue one in the right (track), a red one in the left.

24. With the next (verses; M. I, 6, 9-11), he walks on these (threads).

25. And when they pass by bathing-places, posts, or cross-roads, let him murmur the next (verse; M. I, 6, 12).

Patala 2, Section 6.

1. The next (verse; M. I, 6, 13), he recites over a boat (with which they are going to cross a river).

2. And let the wife, when she is crossing, not see the crew.

3. When they have crossed, let him murmur the next (verse; M. I, 6, 14).

4. If they have to pass over a cemetery, or if any article (which they carry with them), or their chariot is damaged, the ceremonies from the putting of wood on the fire down to the Āgyabhāga oblations are performed, and while she takes hold of him, he offers the oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras; M. I, 7, 1-7), then he enters upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations, and performs (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire).

5. If they pass by trees with milky sap or by other trees that serve as marks, by rivers or by deserts, he should murmur the next two (verses; M. I, 7, 8, 9), according to the characteristics in them (which refer to these different cases).

6. With the next (verse) he shows her the house (M. I, 7, 10).
7. With the next two (verses; M. I, 7, ll. 12) he unyokes the two animals; the right one first.

8. Having, with the next (verse; M. I, 8, 1), spread out, in the centre of the house, a red bull’s skin with the neck to the east, with the hair up, he causes her to recite the next (verse; M. I, 8, 2), while he makes her enter the house, (which she does) with her right foot.

9. And she does not stand on the threshold.

10. In the north-east part of the house the ceremonies from the putting of wood on the fire down to the Âgyabhâga oblations are performed, and while she takes hold of him, he offers the oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras; M. I, 8, 3–15); then he enters upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations, and performs (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire). Then they sit down with the next (verse; M. I, 9, 1) on the skin, the bridegroom to the north.

11. He then places with the next (verse; M. I, 9, 2), the son of a wife who has only sons and whose children are alive, in her lap, gives fruits to the (child) with the next Yagus (M. I, 9, 3), and murmurs the next two (verses; M. I, 9, 4–5). Then he (and his wife) observe silence until the stars appear.

12. When the stars have appeared, he goes out (of the house with her) in an easterly or northerly direction, and shows her the polar star and (the star) Arundhati with the next two verses (M. I, 9, 6–7), according to the characteristics (contained in those verses).
Patala 3, Section 7.

1. He then makes her offer the sacrifice of a Sthâltpâka sacred to Agni.

2. The wife husks (the rice grains out of which this Sthâltpâka is prepared).

3. After he has cooked (the Sthâltpâka), and has sprinkled (Âgya) over it, and has taken it from the fire towards the east or the north, and has sprinkled (Âgya) over it while it stands (there near the fire), (the ceremonies) from the putting of wood on the fire down to the Âgyabhâga oblations (are performed), and while she takes hold of him, he sacrifices of that Sthâltpâka.

4. The ‘spreading under’ and the sprinkling over (of Âgya are done) once; two Avadânas (or cut-off portions are taken).

5. Agni is the deity (of the first oblation); the offering is made with the word Svâhâ.

6. Or he may sacrifice after having picked out, once, a portion (of the sacrificial food with the Darvi spoon).

7. Agni Svishākṛit is the second (deity).

8. (At the Svishtākṛit oblation) the ‘spreading under’ and taking an Avadâna are done once, the sprinkling over (of Âgya) twice.

9. The Avadâna for the first deity (is taken) out of the middle (of the Sthâltpâka);

10. It is offered over the centre (of the fire).

7, 1 seq. Hiranyakesin I, 7, 23, 2 seq.

6. As to the technical meaning of upahatya or upaghâtâm, comp. the note on Gobhila I, 8, 2; Grîhya-samgraha I, 111.
11. (The Avadāna) for the second (deity is taken) from the northern part (of the Sṭhālīpāka);

12. It is offered over the easterly part of the northerly part (of the fire).

13. Having silently anointed (a part of) the Barhis (by dipping it) into the remains both (of the Sṭhālīpāka and the Āgya) in the way prescribed (in the Srauta ritual) for the (part of the Barhis called) Prastara, he throws (that part of the Barhis) into the fire.

14. (The rule regarding) the second sprinkling (of water round the fire) is valid (here).

15. He gives (the remains of) that (sacrificial food) with butter to a Brāhmaṇa to eat—

16. Whom he reveres. To that (Brāhmaṇa) he makes the present of a bull.

17. In the same way, with the exception of the sacrificial gift, they should sacrifice a Sṭhālīpāka from then onwards, on the days of the new and full moon, after having fasted.

18. Some say that a vessel full (of grain) is the sacrificial gift.

19. From then onwards he should offer morning and evening with his hand these two oblations (to Agni and to Agni Svishṭākṣi.) of (rice) grains or of barley.

13. Comp. Srauta-sūtra III, 5, 9 seqq.—On the prastara, see Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmondsopfer, 64. 142. 146.

14. See above, I, 2, 8. The upahomās prescribed above, I, 2, 7, are not performed here, but the second parisheṇāna is.

16. I have altered in my translation the division of the two sentences. Comp. Hiranyakesin I, 7, 23, 5–6, and the note there.

19. The two regular daily oblations corresponding to the Agnihotra of the Srauta ritual.
20. The deities are the same as at the Sthālīpāka (just described).

21. Some say that the first oblation in the morning is sacred to Sūrya.

22. Before and after (those oblations) the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire is performed) as stated above.

23. By the sacrifice of the new and full moon the other ceremonies have been explained (the knowledge of) which is derived from practice.

24. The deities (of those rites) are as stated (with regard to each particular case), having their place between Agni (Śūtra 5) and Svishtakrit (Śūtra 7).

25. The sacrifice (of a cow) on the arrival of a guest (should be performed as stated below) without alterations.

26. (The deities) of the Vaisvadeva ceremony are the Visve devās,

27. Of ceremonies performed on full-moon days, the full-moon day on which they are performed.

3. They reject a sacrifice performed by a wife or by one who has not received the Upanayana initiation, and a sacrifice of salt or pungent food, or of such food as has an admixture of a despised sort of food.

4. Sacrifices connected with special wishes and Bali sacrifices (should be performed) as stated (even against the clauses of the last Sutra).

5. Whenever the fire flames up of itself, he should put two pieces of wood on it with the next two (verses; M. I, 9, 9-10),

6. Or with (the two formulas), 'May fortune reach me! May fortune come to me!'

7. Let him notice the day on which he brings his wife home.

8. (From that day) through three nights they should both sleep on the ground, they should be chaste, and should avoid salt and pungent food.

9. Between their sleeping-places a staff is interposed, which is anointed with perfumes and wrapped round with a garment or a thread.

10. In the last part of the fourth night he takes up the (staff) with the next two (verses; M. I, 10, 1-2), washes it and puts it away; then (the ceremonies) from the putting of wood on the fire down to the Agyabhaga oblations (are performed), and while she takes hold of him, he sacrifices the oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras; M. I, 10, 3-9); then he enters upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations, and performs (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire). Then he makes her sit down to the west of the fire, facing the east, and pours some Ágya of the remains (of those oblations) on her head with the (three) Vyāhritis and the word Om as the fourth (M. I, 10, 10–13). Then they look at each other with the next two verses (M. I, 11, 1–2), according to the characteristics (contained in those verses); with the next verse (M. I, 11, 3) he besmears the region of their hearts with remains of Ágya; then he should murmur the next three verses (I, 11, 4–6), and should murmur the rest (of the Anuváka; I, 11, 7–11) when cohabiting with her.

11. Or another person should recite (the rest of the Anuváka) over her, (before they cohabit).

12. During her (first) monthly illness he instructs her about the things forbidden (to menstruous women), contained in the Brāhmaṇa, in the section, 'A menstruous woman with whom,' &c.

13. After the appearance of her monthly illness, he should, when going to cohabit with her after her illness, recite over her, after she has bathed, the next verses (M. I, 12, 1–13, 4).

PÁTALA 3, SECTION 9.

1. Each following night with an even number, from the fourth (after the beginning of her monthly illness) till the sixteenth, brings more excellent offspring to them, if chosen for the (first) cohabiting after her illness; thus it is said.

2. If he sneezes or coughs while going about on business, he should touch water and should murmur the two following (verses; M. I, 13, 5. 6) according to the characteristics (which they contain).

3. In the same way with the next (Mantras—M. I, 13, 7–10—he should address the following objects), according to the characteristics (which those Mantras contain): a conspicuous tree, a heap of excrements, the skirt (of his garment) which is blown against him by the wind, and a shrieking bird.

4. One (for instance, the wife’s father) who wishes that the hearts of both (husband and wife) may be in accord should observe chastity through at least three nights and should prepare a Sthālpāka. Then (the ceremonies) from the putting (of wood) on (the fire) down to the Āgyabhāga oblations (are performed), and while the wife takes hold of him, he sacrifices of the Sthālpāka the oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras; M. I, 14, 1–7); then he enters upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations, and performs (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire). (The remains of) the (sacrificial food) with butter, he should give to eat to an even number of Brāhmaناس, at least to two, and should cause them to pronounce wishes for his success.

5. When the moon, on the following day, will be in conjunction with Tishya, she strews three times seven barley-grains around (the plant) Clypea Hernandifolia with (the formula), ‘If thou belongest to Varuṇa, I redeem thee from Varuṇa. If thou belongest to Soma, I redeem thee from Soma.’

_9, 5. Comp. Gobhila II, 6, 6 seq._
6. On the following day she should set upright (the plant) with the next (verse; M. I, 15, 1), should recite the next three (verses; M. I, 15, 2–4) over it, should tie (its root) with the next (verse; M. I, 15, 5) to her hands so that (her husband) does not see it, and should, when they have gone to bed, embrace her husband with her arms, with the verse alluding to the word upadḥāna ('putting on;' M. I, 15, 6).

7. Thus he will be subject to her.

8. By this (rite) also (a wife) overcomes her co-wives.

9. For this same purpose she worships the sun daily with the next Anuvāka (M. I, 16).

10. If a wife is affected with consumption or is otherwise sick, one who has to observe chastity, should rub her limbs with young lotus leaves which are still rolled up, and with lotus roots, with the next (formulas, limb by limb) according to the characteristics (contained in those formulas; M. I, 17, 1–6), and should throw away (the leaves and roots) towards the west.

11. With the next (verses; M. I, 17, 7–10) he should give the wife's garment (which she has worn at the wedding [?]) to (a Brāhmaṇa) who knows this (ceremony).

Patala 4, Section 10.

1. We shall explain the Upanayana (or initiation of the student).

2. Let him initiate a Brāhmaṇa in the eighth year after the conception,

3. A Rāganya in the eleventh, a Vaisya in the twelfth year after the conception.
4. Spring, summer, autumn: these are the (fit) seasons (for the Upanayana), corresponding to the order of the castes.

5. (The boy’s father) serves food to Brāhmaṇas and causes them to pronounce auspicious wishes, and serves food to the boy. (The teacher?) pours together, with the first Yagus (of the next Anuvāka, warm and cold) water, pouring the warm water into the cold, and moistens (the boy’s) head with the next (verse; M. II, 1, 2).

6. Having put three Darbha blades into his hair (towards each of the four directions) (the teacher [?]) shaves his hair with the next four (verses; M. II, 1, 3–6) with the different Mantras, towards the different (four) directions.

7. With the following (verse, M. II, 1, 7, somebody) addresses him while he is shaving.

8. Towards the south, his mother or a Brahma-ārin strews barley-grains on a lump of bull’s dung; with this (dung) she catches up the hair (that is cut off), and puts it down with the next (verse; M. II, 1, 8) at the root of an Udumbara tree or in a tuft of Darbha grass.

9. After (the boy) has bathed, and (the ceremonies) from the putting (of wood) on (the fire) down to the Āgyabhāga oblations (have been performed), he causes him to put a piece of Palása wood on the fire with the next (verse; M. II, 2, 1), and makes him tread with his right foot on a stone to the north of the fire, with (the verse), 'Tread' (M. II, 2, 2).

10. Having recited the next two (verses; M. II, 2, 3, 4) over a garment that has been spun and woven on one day, and has caused him, with the next three (verses; M. II, 2, 5–7), to put it on, he recites over him, after he has put it on, the next (verse; M. II, 2, 8).

11. He ties thrice around him, from left to right, a threefold-twisted girdle of Mūṅga grass with the next two (verses; M. II, 2, 9, 10), and (gives him) a skin as his outer garment with the next (verse; II, 2, 11).

12. To the north of the fire (the teacher) spreads out Darbha grass; on that he causes (the boy) to station himself with the next (verse; M. II, 3, 1), pours his joined hands full of water into (the boy's) joined hands, makes him sprinkle himself three times with the next (verse; M. II, 3, 2), takes hold of his right hand with the next (formulas; M. II, 3, 3–12), gives him with the next (formulas; M. II, 3, 13–23) in charge to the deities (mentioned in those Mantras), initiates him with the next Yagus (M. II, 3, 24), and murmurs into his right ear the (Mantra), 'Blessed with offspring' (II, 3, 25).

Patala 4, Section 11.

1. The boy says, 'I am come to be a student' (II, 3, 26).

11. Comp. Āpast. Dharma-sūtra I, 1, 2, 33; I, 3, 3 seq.

12. As to the words, 'he initiates him' (upanayati), comp. Sāṅkhāyana II, 2, 11. 12; Āsvalāyana I, 20, 4 &c.
2. The other (i.e. the teacher) has to ask; the boy has to answer (II, 3, 27–30).

3. The other murmurs the rest (of the Anuvāka),

4. And causes the boy to repeat (the Mantra) which contains wishes for himself (II, 3, 32).

5. (The rites) down to the Ágyabhāgas have been prescribed.

6. Having then caused him to sacrifice the oblations (indicated in the) next (Mantras; M. II, 4, 1–11), he enters upon (the performance) of the Gaya and following oblations.

7. Having performed (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire), he puts down, to the west of the fire, a bunch of northward-pointed grass; on that (the teacher) who performs the initiation, sits down with the next Yagus (M. II, 4, 12).

8. The boy, sitting to the east (of him), facing the west, seizes with his right hand (the teacher’s) right foot and says, ‘Recite the Sāvitrī, Sir!’

9. He recites (the Sāvitrī) to him, ‘That (glorious splendour) of Savitri’ (Tattt. Samh. I, 5, 6, 4; M. II, 4, 13);

11. (When repeating the Sāvitrī Pāda by Pāda, he pronounces) the Vyāhritīs singly at the beginning or at the end of the Pādas;

12. In the same way (the first and the second Vyāhritī at the beginning or at the end) of the hemistichs; the last (Vyāhritī, when he repeats) the whole verse.

13. With the next Mantra (M. II, 4, 14) the boy touches his upper lip;

11, 5. See above, Section 10, Sūtra 9.
14. With the next (II, 4, 15) both his ears;
15. With the next (II, 5, 1) he takes up the staff.
16. The staff of a Brâhmaṇa is made of Palâsa wood, that of a Râganya of a branch of the Nyagrodha tree, so that the downward-turned end (of the branch) forms the tip (of the staff), that of a Vaisyâ of Bâdara or Udumbara wood.
17. Some state (only), without any reference to caste, that the staff should be made of the wood of a tree.
18. After (the teacher) has made him repeat (the formula), 'My memory' (M. II, 5, 2), and he has bestowed an optional gift on his teacher, and (the teacher) has made him arise with (the formula, M. II, 5, 3), 'Up, with life!' (the student) worships the sun with the next (Mantras; II, 5, 4).
19. If (the teacher) wishes, 'May this (student) not be estranged from me,' let him take (the student) by the right hand with the next (verse; II, 5, 6).
20. They keep that fire (used at the Upanayana) three days,
21. And (during that time) salted and pungent food should be avoided.
22. Having wiped (with his hand wet) around (the fire) with (the formula), 'Around thee' (M. II, 6, 1), he should put (twelve) pieces of wood on that (fire) with the next Mantras (II, 6, 2–13).
23. In the same way also on another (fire, when the Upanayana fire is kept no longer),
24. Fetching fuel regularly from the forest.
25. With the next (formula—M. II, 6, 14—the teacher) instructs (the student in his duties).

16, 17. These Sûtras are identical with Dharma-sûtra I, 1, 2, 38 (S. B. E., vol. ii, p. 9).
26. On the fourth day (after the Upanayana the teacher) takes the garment (of the student) for himself with the next (verse; M. II, 6, 15), having made him put on another (garment).

Patala 5, Section 12.

1. Having studied the Veda, when going to take the bath (which signifies the end of his studentship), he enters a cow-shed before sunrise, hangs over its door a skin with the hair inside, and sits there.

2. On that day the sun should not shine upon him.

3. At noon, after (the ceremonies) from the putting (of wood) on the fire down to the Āgyabhāga oblations (have been performed), he puts a piece of Palāśa wood on (the fire) with the next (verse; M. II, 7, 1), sits down to the west of the fire on a mat or on erakā grass, recites the next (verse, II, 7, 2) over a razor, and hands it over to the barber with the next Yagus (II, 7, 3). (The rites) beginning with the pouring together of (warm and cold) water down to the burying of the hair are the same as above (comp. M. II, 7, 4).

4. He sits down behind the cow-shed, takes the girdle off, and hands it over to a Brahmakārin.

5. The (Brahmakārin) hides it with the next Yagus (II, 7, 5) at the root of an Udumbara tree or in a tuft of Darbha grass.

6. With water of the description stated above he bathes with the six next (verses; II, 7, 6–11), and with the next (II, 7, 12) he cleanses his teeth with a stick of Udumbara wood.

7. Having bathed and shampooed his body with such ingredients as are used in bathing, (aromatic powder, &c.),

8. He puts on with the next Yagus (M. II, 7, 13) a fresh under garment, and anoints himself, after having given the salve in charge of the deities with the next (Mantras, II, 7, 14), with the next (verse, II, 7, 15) with sandal salve which is scented with all kinds of perfumes. With the next (verse, II, 7, 16) he moves about a gold pellet with its setting, which is strung on a string, three times from left to right in a water-pot; with the next (verse, II, 7, 17) he ties the (pellet) to his neck; in the same way, without Mantras, he ties a pellet of Bâdara wood to his left hand, and repeats the rites stated above with a fresh upper garment, with the (verses), ‘May the rich’ (comp. above, IV, 10, 10; M. II, 7, 18).

9. To the skirt (of that garment) he ties two ear-rings, puts them into the (sacrificial spoon called) Darvi, offers the oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras; M. II, 8, 1–8), pouring the Âgya over (the ear-rings), and enters upon (the performance of) the Gaya and following oblations.

10. Having performed (the ceremonies) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire), he should tie (one of the ear-rings) with the same (verses) to his right ear, and with the same (verses one) to his left ear.

11. In the same way he should with the following (formulas, M. II, 8, 9–9, 5), according to the characteristics (contained in them), (put) a wreath on his head, anoint (his eyes), look into a mirror, (put on) shoes, (and should take) a parasol and a staff.

12. He keeps silence until the stars appear.

13. When the stars have appeared, he goes away towards the east or north, worships the quarters (of the horizon) with the next hemistich, and the stars and the moon with the next (M. II, 9, 6).

14. Having spoken with a friend he may go where he likes.

Patañga 5, Section 13.

1. Now this (is) another (way for performing the Samàvartana). He bathes silently at a bathing-place and puts silently a piece of wood on (the fire).

2. He sits down on a bunch of grass, as stated above (comp. M. II, 9, 7), at a place where they are going to honour him (with the Argha reception).

3. A king and a chieftain (sit down) in the same way (as a Brâhmana), with the next two (formulas, M. II, 9, 8. 9), according to the characteristics (contained in them).

4. (The host) announces (to the guest), 'The water for washing the feet!'

5. (The guest) should recite the next (verse, II, 9, 10) over (that water) and should stretch out the right foot first to a Brâhmaṇa, the left to a Sûdra.

6. Having touched the person who washes him, he should touch himself (i.e. his own heart) with the next (formula, M. II, 9, 11).

7. (The host, taking the Argha water) in an earthen vessel which he holds with two bunches of grass, announces (to the guest), 'The Argha water!'

8. (The guest) should recite the next (formula, II, 9, 12) over (that water) and should murmur the next Yagus (II, 9, 13), while a part (of the water) is poured over his joined hands.

9. Over the rest (of the water) which is poured out towards the east, he recites the next (verse, M. II, 9, 14).

10. (The host) pours together curds and honey in a brass vessel, covers it with a larger (brass cover), takes hold of it with two bunches of grass, and announces (to the guest), 'The honey-mixture!'

11. Some take three substances, (those stated before) and ghee.

12. Some take five, (the three stated before), and grains, and flour.

13. The guest recites the next two (formulas, M. II, 10, 1. 2) over (the honey-mixture) and sips water with the two Yagus (II, 10, 3. 4) before (eating) and afterwards; with the next (verse, II, 10, 5) he should partake three times (of the food) and should give the remainder to a person towards whom he is kindly disposed.

14. A king or a chieftain should only accept it and (give it) to his Purohita.

15. (The host) announces the cow with (the word), 'The cow!'

16. After the guest has recited the next (formula, M. II, 10, 6) over (the cow, the host) cooks its omentum, and having performed the 'spreading under' and the sprinkling over (of Āgya), he sacrifices it with the next (verse, M. II, 10, 7) with a Palāśa leaf from the middle or the end (of the stalk).
17. If the guest chooses to let (the cow) loose, he murmurs the next (formulas, II, 10, 8–11) in a low voice (and says) loudly, 'Om! Let it loose!' (II, 10, 12).

18. (In this case) he recites the next (formulas, M. II, 10, 13–17) in a low voice over the food which is announced to him (instead of the cow), (and says) loudly, 'Om! Make it ready!' (II, 10, 18).

19. For his teacher, for a Rûtvig, for his father-in-law, for a king he ought to perform this (Arghya ceremony) as often as they visit his house, if at least one year has elapsed (since they came last).

20. For a renowned teacher (of the Veda the ceremony should be performed) once.

Patala 6, Section 14.

1. The Ślmantonnayana (or parting of the pregnant wife's hair, is performed) in her first pregnancy, in the fourth month.

2. (The husband) serves food to Brâhmanas and causes them to pronounce auspicious wishes; then, after (the ceremonies) from the putting (of wood) on the fire down to the Āgyabhâga oblations (have been performed), he offers the oblations (indicated in the) next (Mantras, M. II, 11, 1–8), while (the wife) takes hold of him, and enters upon the (performance) of the Gaya and following oblations.

3. Having performed (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire), he makes her sit down to the west of the fire, facing the east, and parts her hair upwards (i.e. beginning from the front) with a porcupine's quill that has three white spots, with three Darbha blades, and with a bunch of unripe Udumbara fruits, with the Vyâhrîtis or with the two next (verses, II, 11, 9, 10).

4. He says to two lute-players, 'Sing!'

5. Of the next two (verses, II, 11, 11, 12) the first (is to be sung on this occasion) among the (people of the) Sâlvas.

6. The second (is to be used) for Brâhmanâs; and the river near which they dwell is to be named.

7. He ties barley-grains with young shoots (to the head of the wife); then she keeps silence until the stars appear.

8. When the stars have appeared, he goes (with his wife) towards the east or north, touches a calf, and murmurs the Vyâhrîtis; then she breaks her silence.

9. The Pûmsavana (i.e. the ceremony to secure the birth of a male child) is performed when the pregnancy has become visible, under the constellation Tishya.

10. From a branch of a Nyagrodha tree, which points eastward or northward, he takes a shoot with two (fruits that look like) testicles. The putting (of wood) on the fire, &c., is performed as at the Siman- tonnayana (Sûtra 2).

11. He causes a girl who has not yet attained maturity to pound (the Nyagrodha shoot) on an upper mill-stone with another upper mill-stone, and to pour water on it; then he makes his wife lie down on her back to the west of the fire, facing the east, and inserts (the pounded substance) with his thumb into her right nostril, with the next Yagus (II, 11, 13).

12. Then she will give birth to a son.

13. Here follows the ceremony to secure a quick deliverance.

14. With a shallow cup that has not been used before, he draws water in the direction of the river's current; at his wife's feet he lays down a Tūryanti plant; he should then touch his wife, who is soon to be delivered, on the head, with the next Yagus (II, 11, 14), and should sprinkle her with the water, with the next (three) verses (II, 11, 15-17).

15. Yadi garāyu na pated evamvihitābhīr evādbhīr uttarābhhyām (II, 11, 18. 19) avokshet.

Patala 6, Section 15.

1. After he has touched the new-born child with the Vātsapra hymn (Taitt. Samh. IV, 2, 2; M. II, 11, 20), and has taken him on his lap with the next Yagus (M. II, 11, 21), with the next (three) (verses—II, 11, 22; 12, 1. 2—one by one) he addresses the child, kisses him on his head, and murmurs (the third verse) into his right ear.

2. And he gives him a Nakshatra name.

3. That is secret.

4. He pours together honey and ghee; into this (mixture) he dips a piece of gold which he has tied with a noose to a Darbha blade. With the next (three) formulas (II, 12, 3-5) he gives the boy (by means of the piece of gold, some of the mixture) to eat. With the next five (verses, II, 12, 6–10) he bathes him. Then he pours curds and ghee together and gives him this (mixture which is called) 'sprinkled butter' (priṣhadāgya) to eat out of a brass vessel, with the Vyāhritis to which the syllable

'Om' is added as the fourth (II, 12, 11–14). The remainder he should mix with water and pour out in a cow-stable.

5. With the next (verse, M. II, 13, 1) he places
(the child) in the mother's lap; with the next (II, 13, 2) he causes her to give him her right breast; with the next two (verses, II, 13, 3, 4) he touches the earth, and after (the child) has been laid down, he touches him) with the next (formula, II, 13, 5).

6. With the next Yagus (II, 13, 6) he places a water-pot at (the child's) head, sacrifices mustard seeds and rice-chaff with his joined hands three times with each of the next (formulas, II, 13, 7–14, 2), repeating each time the word Svāhā, and says (to the people who are accustomed to enter the room in which his wife lies), 'Whenever you enter, strew silently (mustard seeds with rice-chaff) on the fire.'

7. This is to be done until the ten days (after the child's birth) have elapsed.

8. On the tenth day, after (the mother) has risen and taken a bath, he gives a name to the son. The father and the mother (should pronounce that name first).

9. (It should be a name) of two syllables or of four syllables; the first part should be a noun; the second a verb; it should have a long vowel (or) the Visarga at the end, should begin with a sonant, and contain a semi-vowel.
10. Or it should contain the particle su, for such a name has a firm foundation; thus it is said in a Brâhmaṇa.

11. A girl's name should have an odd number of syllables.

12. When (the father) returns from a journey, he should address the child and kiss him on his head with the next two (verses, M. II, 14, 3. 4), and should murmur the next Mantras (II, 14, 5) into his right ear.

13. With the next Yagus (II, 14, 6) he addresses a daughter (when returning from a journey).

Patala 6, Section 16.

1. In the sixth month after the child's birth he serves food to Brâhmaṇas and causes them to pronounce auspicious wishes; then he should pour together curds, honey, ghee, and boiled rice, and should give (the mixture) to the boy to eat, with the next (four) Mantras (II, 14, 7-10);

2. (He should feed him) with partridge, according to some (teachers).

3. In the third year after his birth the Kaula (or tonsure is performed) under (the Nakshatra of) the two Punarvasus.

4. Brâhmaṇas are entertained with food as at the initiation (Upanayana).

5. The putting (of wood) on the fire, &c. (is performed) as at the Simantonnayana.

6. He makes (the boy) sit down to the west of the fire, facing the east, combs his hair silently with a porcupine’s quill that has three white spots, with three Darbha blades, and with a bunch of unripe Udumbara fruits; and he arranges the locks in the fashion of his ancestral Rishis,

7. Or according to their family custom.

8. The ceremonies beginning with the pouring together of (warm and cold) water and ending with the putting down of the hair are the same (as above; comp. M. II, 14, 11).

9. He puts down the razor after having washed it off.

10. The ceremony is (repeated) three days with the (same razor). (Then) the rite is finished.

11. (The father) gives an optional gift (to the Brāhmaṇa who has assisted).

12. The Godāna (or the ceremony of shaving the beard, is performed) in the sixteenth year, in exactly the same way or optionally under another constellation.

13. Or he may perform the Godāna sacred to Agni.

14. Some prescribe the keeping of a vow through one year in connection with the Godāna.

8. See IV, 10, 5–8.
10. I translate as if the words tena tryaham and karmanivrittīḥ formed two Sūtras.
13. ‘Having performed the same rites as at the opening of the study of the Āgneya-kāṇḍa, he performs an Upāshāna to the deities as taught with regard to the Sukriyavrata.’ Haradatta.—‘After the ceremonies down to the Agyabhāgaś have been performed, one chief oblation of Āgya is offered with the formula, “To Agni, the Rishi of the Kāṇḍa, svāhā!”’ Sudarsanārya.
14. Comp. the statements given in the note on Gobhila III, 1, 1.
15. The difference (between the K'aula and the Godâna) is that (at the Godâna) the whole hair is shaven (without leaving the locks).

16. According to the followers of the Sâma-veda he should 'touch water.'

Patala 7, Section 17.

1. The ground for building a house should be inclined towards the south-west. He elevates the surface and sweeps (the earth) with a broom of Palâsa wood or of Samâl wood, with the next (verse, M. II, 15, 1), in the same (south-west) direction;

2. In the same way three times.

3. He touches the ground, which has thus been prepared, with the next (verse, II, 15, 2). Then he has the pits for the posts dug from left to right, throws the earth (from the pits) towards the inside (of the building-ground), and erects the right door-post with the next two (verses, M. II, 15, 3, 4);

4. In the same way the other (door-post).

5. Having erected after (the door-posts) the other (posts) in the same order in which (the pits) have been dug, he recites the next Yagus (II, 15, 5) over the ridge-pole when it is placed (on the posts),

6. The next (six) (Yagus formulas, II, 15, 6–11) over the (house when it is) finished, according to the characteristics contained in the single formulas.

7. He sets a piece of Palâsa wood or of Samâl wood on fire, takes the fire up (in a dish) with the next verse (II, 15, 12), carries it to the house with

16. The udakopasparsana according to the rite of the Sâma-vedins is described by Gobhila, I, 2, 5 seqq.
the next Yagus (II, 15, 13), and places the fire in the north-eastern part of the house with the next (II, 15, 14).

8. The place for the water-barrel is to the south of that spot.

9. He strews there Darbha grass, so that its points are turned in every direction, pours rice and barley-grains over the (grass) with the next (verse, II, 15, 15), and thereon he places the water-barrel.

10. With the next (Yagus, II, 15, 16) he pours four potfuls of water into it.

11. If (the barrel) breaks, he recites the next (verse, II, 15, 17) over it.

12. After the ceremonies from the putting of wood on the fire down to the Ågyahåga oblations have been performed, he offers the (four) oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras; II, 15, 18–21); then he enters upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations.

13. Having performed (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire), he should sprinkle (water) with a water-pot around the house or the resting-place on the inside, with the next
then he should serve cakes, flour, and boiled rice to the Bråhmanas.

Patala 7, Section 18.

1. When a boy is attacked by the dog-demon
(i.e. epilepsy), (the father or another perform er of the ceremony), having devoted himself to austerities

(such as fasting), covers him with a net. Then he causes a gong to be beaten or a bell to be rung, takes (the boy) by another way than the door into the gambling-hall, raises (the earth in the middle of the hall) at the place in which they gamble, sprinkles it (with water), casts the dice, lays (the boy) on his back on the dice, and besprinkles him with his joined hands with curds and salt, with the next (eleven) (formulas, II, 16, 1-11), in the morning, at noon, and at night.

2. Then he will get well.

3. Over a boy who suffers from the 'Saṅkha' disease, (the father, &c.) having devoted himself to austerities, should recite the next two (verses, II, 16, 12, 13), and should pour (water) on his head with a water-pot with the next (verse, II, 16, 14), in the morning, at noon, and at night.

4. Then he will get well.

5. On the day of the full moon of (the month) Srāvana after sunset a Sthālpāka (is offered).

6. After the ceremonies down to the Āgyabhāga oblations have been performed in the same way as at the fortnightly sacrifices, he sacrifices of the Sthālpāka, and with each of the next (formulas, II, 16, 15-17) he offers with his joined hands Kimśuka flowers.

7. With the next (three) verses (II, 17, 1-3) (he offers) pieces of Åragvadha wood (Cathartocarpus fistula);

3. 'Saṅkhin is a person attacked by such a disease that he utters cries like the sound of a conch trumpet (saṅkha),' Haradatta.

5. Here follows a description of the Sarpabali.

8. Then the Āgya oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras, II, 17, 4–7).

9. Then he enters upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations.

10. Having performed (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire), he silently takes the objects required (for the rites which he is going to perform), goes out in an easterly or northerly direction, prepares a raised surface, draws on it three lines directed towards the east and three towards the north, pours water on the (lines), and lays (an offering of) flour (for the serpents) on them, with the next (formula, II, 17, 8).

11. Silently (he lays down) unground (?) grain, roasted grain, collyrium, ointment, (the fragrant substance called) Sthagara, and Usíra root.

12. With the next (formulas, II, 17, 9–26) he should worship (the serpents), should sprinkle water round (the oblations), should return (to his house) silently without looking back, should sprinkle (water) with a water-pot from left to right, thrice around the house or the resting-place on the inside, with the two verses, 'Beat away, O white one, with thy foot' (II, 17, 27. 28), and should offer food to the Brāhmaṇas.

Patala 7, Section 19.

1. The unground grain (which is left over, see above, VII, 18, 11) they give to the boys to eat.

2. Let him repeat in the same way this Bali-offering of whatever food he has got or of flour, from that day to full moon of (the month) Mārgaśīrsha.
3. On the day of the full moon of Mārgasirsha after sunset a Sthāltpāka (is offered as above, VII, 18, 5).

4. In the Mantra for the Bali-offering he changes (the word 'I shall offer' into) 'I have offered.'

5. Then he does not offer (the Bali) any longer.

6. (Now follows) the Āgrayana sacrifice (or partaking of the first-fruits) of one who has not set up the (Śrauta) fires.

7. He prepares a Sthāltpāka of the fresh fruits, sacrifices to the deities of the (Śrauta) Āgrayana sacrifice with (Agni) Svishṭakṛit as the fourth, fills his mouth with grains, swallows them, sips water, forms a lump of the boiled (sacrificial) food, and throws it up with the next Yagus (II, 18, 1) to the summit of the house.

8. (Now follows) the 'redescent' in the winter.

9. With the next Yagus (II, 18, 2) they 'redescend' (or take as their sleeping-place a layer of straw instead of the high bedsteads which they have used before). With the next Yagus formulas (II, 18, 3–7) they lie down on a new layer (of straw) on their right sides,

10. The father to the south, the mother to the north (of him), and so the others, one after the other from the eldest to the youngest.

11. After he has arisen, he touches the earth with the next two (verses, II, 18, 8–9).

12. In the same way the lying down, &c., is repeated thrice.

13. Having prepared a Sthāltpāka for Īsāna and

8. Comp. the note on Śāṅkhāyana IV, 17, 1.

13. The description of the sūlagava sacrifice, which here follows, agrees in most points with the statements of Hiranyakesin II, 3, 8.
one for Kshetrapati, he goes out in an easterly or northerly direction, prepares a raised surface, (and then follow the ceremonies) beginning with the putting of wood on the fire.

14. To the west of the fire he builds two huts.

Patala 7, Section 20.

1. With the next (verse, II, 18, 10) he has the Isâna led to the southern (hut),

2. With worldly words the 'bountiful goddess' to the northern (hut),

3. To the middle (between the two huts) the 'conqueror.'

4. He gives them water to drink in the same order in which they have been led (to their places), takes three portions of boiled rice (from the Sthâlt-pâka prepared for Isâna), takes (these portions of rice) to the fire, makes (the three gods) touch them with the next (formulas, II, 18, 11–13), sacrifices of these portions, to each god of the portion which belongs to him, with the next (formulas, II, 18, 14–30), cuts off (Avadânas) from all (portions), and sacrifices with the next Yagus (II, 18, 31) to Agni Svishâkârit.

5. Having worshipped (the god Isâna) with the next Yagus (II, 18, 32), he distributes with the next (formulas, II, 18, 33–39) leaves together with portions of boiled rice, two (leaves) with each (Yagus), then ten to the divine hosts (II, 18, 40), and ten to the (divine hosts) that follow (and are referred to in the next Yagus, II, 18, 41).

6. With the next (formulas, II, 18, 42-45) he does the same as before (i.e. he distributes two leaves with each Mantra).

7. Having formed a lump of boiled rice, he puts it into a basket of leaves, and with the next Yagus (II, 18, 46) hangs it up on a tree.

8. Here he should murmur the Rudra texts (Taitt. Samhitā IV, 5),

9. Or the first and last (Anuvāka).

10. He places his cows around the fire so that the smoke (of the sacrifice) may reach them.

11. With his firmly shut fist full of Darbha grass he besprinkles (them) with scents; the bull first.

12. He should perform a sacrifice to Kshetrapati, without a fire, in the path used by his cows.

13. He has (the Kshetrapati) led to his place in the same way as the Îsâna (see above, Sūtra 1).

14. He puts (portions of boiled rice) into four or seven leaves, naming (the god).

15. Let him sacrifice quickly; the god has a strong digestion (?).

16. With the next two (verses, II, 18, 47, 48) he does worship (to Kshetrapati).

17. The Sthālpāka (belonging to Îsâna) he gives to the Brāhmaṇas to eat;

18. That belonging to Kshetrapati his uterine relations eat,

19. Or as is the custom in their family.

11. On grumush/i, see the notes of the commentators, p. 93 of Dr. Winternitz's edition, and the commentary on Taitt. Samhitā V, 4, 5, 3 (Indische Studien, XII, 60).

15. I have translated here as in Hiranayak. II, 3, 9, 11. Haradatta and Sudarśanārya give another explanation of the words 'pâko devah;' see p. 93 of the edition.
Patala 8, Section 21.

1. The times for the monthly Srâddha are in the second fortnight (of the month), as they are stated.

2. Let him feed, without regard of (worldly) purposes, pure Brâhmaṇas, versed in the Mantras, who are not connected with himself by consanguinity or by their Gotra or by the Mantras (such as his teacher or his pupils), an odd number, at least three.

3. He makes oblations of the food (prepared for the Brâhmaṇas) with the next (verses, II, 19, 1-7);

4. Then the Âgya oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras, II, 19, 8-13).

5. Or invertedly (i.e. he offers Âgya with the verses referred to in Sûtra 3, and food with those referred to in Sûtra 4).

6. Let him touch the whole (food) with the next (formulas, II, 19, 14-16).

7. Or the (single) prepared (portions of food destined) for the single Brâhmaṇas.

8. Having caused them with the next (formula, II, 20, 1) to touch (the food, he gives it to them to eat).

9. When they have eaten (and gone away), he goes after them, circumambulates them, turning his right side towards them, spreads out southward-pointed Darbha grass in two different layers, pours water on it with the next (formulas, II, 20, 2-7), distributes the Pindaśas, ending in the south, with the next (formulas, II, 20, 8-13), pours out water as before with the next (formulas, 14-19), worships (the ancestors) with the next (formulas, II, 20, 20–23), sprinkles with the next (verse, 24) water three times from right to left round (the Pindas) with a water-pot, besprinkles the vessels, which are turned upside down, repeating the next Yagus (25) at least three times without taking breath, sets up the vessels two by two, cuts off (Avadānas) from all (portions of food), and eats of the remains at least one morsel with the next Yagus (26).

10. Of the dark fortnight that follows after the full moon of Māgha, the eighth day falls under (the constellation of) Gyesht'hā: this day is called Ekāshakā.

11. In the evening before that day (he performs) the preparatory ceremony.

12. He bakes a cake of four cups (of rice).

13. (The cake is prepared) in eight dishes (like a Purodāsa), according to some (teachers).

Patala 8, Section 22.

1. After the ceremonies down to the Āgyabhāga oblations have been performed in the same way as at the fortnightly sacrifices, he makes with his joined hands oblations of the cake with the next (verse, II, 20, 27).

2. The rest (of the cake) he makes ready, divides (it) into eight parts and offers it to the Brāhmaṇas.

12, 13. Comp. Hiranyak. II, 5, 14, 3 seq.
22, 1. Comp. above, VII, 18, 6.
2. I believe that seshāḥ means the rest of the cake. The word ‘siddhaḥ’ possibly refers to such preparations of the food as are indicated in Hiranyak. II, 5, 14, 7. Haradatta understands seshāḥ as the rest of the rites (tantrasya seshāḥ): ‘The rest of the rites is
3. On the following day he touches a cow with a Darbha blade, with the words, ‘I touch thee agreeable to the Fathers.’

4. Having silently offered five Ágya oblations, and having cooked the omentum of the (cow), and performed the ‘spreading under’ and the sprinkling over (of Ágya), he sacrifices (the omentum) with the next (verse, II, 20, 28) with a Palāsa leaf from the middle or the end (of the stalk).

5. (He sacrifices) boiled rice together with the meat (of the cow) with the next (verses, II, 20, 29–35).

6. Food prepared of meal with the next (verse, II, 21, 1),

7. Then the Ágya oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras, II, 21, 2–9).

8. (The rites) from the Svishtakrit down to the offering of the Pinda are the same (as at the Srāddha).

9. Some (teachers) prescribe the Pinda offering for the day after the Ashtakā.

10. Here (follows) another (way for celebrating the Ashtakā sacrifice). He sacrifices curds with his joined hands in the same way as the cake.

11. Having left over from the meat of the (cow, see above, 3. 4) as much as is required, on the day after (the Ashtakā) (he performs) the rite of the Anvashtakā.

12. This rite has been explained in the description of the monthly Srāddha.

13. If he goes out in order to beg for something, the regular one, without alterations:’ it must be admitted that the expressions used by Hiranyak. II, 5, 14, 10 would agree well with this explanation.

4. See above, V, 13, 16.
let him murmur the next (Mantras, II, 21, 10–16) and then state his desire.

14. If he has obtained a chariot, he has the horses put to it, lets it face the east, and touches with the next (verse, II, 21, 17) the two wheels of the chariot or the two side-pieces.

15. With the next Yagus (II, 21, 18) he should mount, and drive with the next (verse, II, 21, 19) towards the east or north, and should then drive off on his business.

16. Let him mount a horse with the next (formulas, II, 21, 20–30),

17. An elephant with the next (formula, II, 21, 31).

18. If any harm is done him by these two (beasts), let him touch the earth as indicated above.

19. If he is going to a dispute, he takes the parasol and the staff in his left hand.

Patala 8, Section 23.

1. Having sacrificed, with his right hand, a fist full of chaff with the next (verse, II, 21, 32), he should go away and murmur the next (verse, 33).

2. Over an angry person let him recite the two next (formulas, II, 22, 1. 2); then his anger will be appeased.

3. One who wishes that his wife should not be touched by other men, should have big living centipedes ground to powder, and should insert (that powder) with the next (formula, II, 22, 3), while she is sleeping, into her secret parts.

4. For success (in the generation of children)

let him wash (his wife) with the urine of a red-brown cow.

5. For success (in trade) let him sacrifice with the next (verse—II, 22, 4—some portion) from the articles of trade which he has in his house.

6. If he wishes that somebody be not estranged from him, let him pour his own urine into the horn of a living animal, and sprinkle (it) with the next two (verses, II, 22, 5. 6) three times from right to left around (the person) while he is sleeping.

7. In a path which servants or labourers use to run away, he should put plates (used for protecting the hands when holding a hot sacrificial pan) on (a fire), and should offer the oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras, II, 22, 7–10).

8. If a fruit falls on him from a tree, or a bird befouls him, or a drop of water falls on him when no rain is expected, he should wipe that off with the next (Mantras, II, 22, 11–13), according to the characteristics (contained in these Mantras).

9. If a post of his house puts forth shoots, or if honey is made in his house (by bees), or if the footprint of a dove is seen on the hearth, or if diseases arise in his household, or in the case of other miracles or prodigies, let him perform in the new-moon night, at dead of night, at a place where he does not hear the noise of water, the rites from the putting (of wood) on the fire down to the Āgyabhāga oblations, and let him offer the oblations (indicated in the) next (Mantras, II, 22, 14–23), and enter upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations.

10. Having performed (the ceremonies) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire), he puts up towards the south with the next (verse, II, 22, 24) a stone as a barrier for those among whom a death has occurred.

End of the Āpastambhiya-Gṛihya-sūtra.

ÂPASTAMBA'S
YAGÑA-PARIBHÂSHÂ-SÛTRAS.
INTRODUCTION.

As Professor Oldenberg was unable to find any other texts connected with the Grihya-sūtras, I have tried to bring this volume to its proper size by adding a translation of Āpastamba's Yagña-Paribhāshā-sūtras. These Sūtras give some general information about the performance of sacrifices, and may prove useful to the students both of the Srauta and the Grihya sacrifices. Paribhāshā is defined as a general rule or definition applicable throughout a whole system, and more binding than any particular rule. How well this sense of paribhāshā was understood in India, we may see from a passage in the Sisupālavadha XVI, 80:

Paritak pramitāksharāpi sarvam vishayam prāptavatā gatā pratishthām na khalu pratihanyate kutaskit paribhāsheva garlyasī yadāgīnā.

‘Whose (the king’s) command, though brief, having reached the whole kingdom round about and obtained authority, is never defeated, being of the highest weight, like a Paribhāshā.’

These Paribhāshās are a very characteristic invention of ancient Indian authors, particularly during the Sūtra period. We find them as early as the Anukramanis, and even at that early time they had been elaborated with many purely technical contrivances. Thus we are told in the Index to the Rig-veda that, as a general rule, if no deity is mentioned in the index of the hymns, Indra must be supposed to be the deity addressed; when no metre is mentioned, the metre must be understood to be the Trishṭubh; at the beginning of each Mandala the hymns must be taken to be addressed to Agni, till we come to hymns distinctly addressed to Indra. Now it is clear that in this case these Paribhāshās or general instructions must have been laid down.
before the whole work was carried out. The same applies to other Paribhāshās, such as those of the metrical Sūtras, but I feel more doubtful as to the Paribhāshās in the grammatical Sūtras of Pāṇini. To judge from the Paribhāshendusekhara, it would seem that the Paribhāshā-sūtras to Pāṇini’s grammar also had been settled before a single Sūtra of Pāṇini was composed, and yet it seems almost incredible that this gigantic web of Sūtras should have been woven on so complicated a warp. This question ought to be settled once for all, as it would throw considerable light on the workmanship of Pāṇini’s Sūtras, and there is no one better qualified to settle it for us than the learned editor of the Paribhāshendusekhara. It is different with our Paribhāshās. There is no necessity to suppose that they were worked out first, before the Sūtras were composed. They look more like useful generalisations than like indispensable preliminary instructions. They give us a general idea of the sacrifice, and inculcate rules that ought to be observed throughout. But I doubt whether they are as essential for enabling the priest to carry out the instructions of the Sūtras in performing a sacrifice as the grammatical paribhāshās are in carrying out the grammatical rules of Pāṇini.

The Āpastamba-sūtras for which our Paribhāshās are intended are said to have comprised thirty Prasnas (see Burnell, Catalogue, p. 19, and p. xxix in Professor Oldenberg’s Introduction). Burnell mentions that sometimes two Prasnas, treating of the Paitrīmedhika rites, were counted as the thirty-first and thirty-second of the whole work. Of these thirty Prasnas fifteen have been edited with Rudradatta’s commentary by Professor Garbe in the Bibliotheca Indica, 1882–1885. Rudradatta’s commentary does not seem to have extended beyond the fifteenth Prasna; some authorities, however, suppose that Haradatta, to whom commentaries on the later Prasnas are ascribed, was only another name for Rudradatta. According to Kaundappa’s Prayogaratnamālā (see Burnell, Classified Index, I, p. 17 a), the Paribhāshā-sūtras formed part of the twenty-fourth Prasna (kaṭurvimśe tataḥ prasne nyāyaprāvarahautrakam). Here Nyāya in the sense of method, way, plan, seems to stand for Paribhāshā. Another name is Sāmānya-sūtra (see Burnell, Classified Index, p. 15 b, where it is mentioned as § 4 of Prāsa XXIV). Kaundappākārya himself, who is said to have been minister of Vīrabhūpati, the son of the famous king Bukka of Vigayanaagara, begins his work with a paribhāshā-parikkheda.

I published a German translation of these Sūtras with notes many years ago, in the Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, 1855. I here give the same translation, but I have shortened the notes and compared the translation once more with the MSS.

The principal MSS. used are MS. I. O. L. 1676 b, 259, and 1127. MS. 1676 b, now 308, is described in Professor Eggeling’s Catalogue of the Sanskrit MSS. in the Library of the India Office, vol. i, p. 58 b. It is written in Devanāgarī, contains thirty leaves, and is called at the end iti Śrikapardinā bhāshye uddhrātatasāram paribhāshāpatālam. MS. 259, now 309, contains twenty-seven leaves in Devanāgarī, and is called at the end iti Kapardisvāmi-bhāshye paribhāshāpatālam. MS. 1127, now 307, in Devanāgarī, is dated Samvat 1691, Sāka 1556, and contains on 220 leaves portions of Tālavṛindanivāsin’s manual, the Āpastambasūtra-prayoga-vrītti, and on pp. 75 a–116 a Kapardisvāmin’s commentary on Āpastamba’s Paribhāshāpatālam. Burnell mentions another copy of this work in his Classified Index, I, p. 17 b, and he states (Catalogue, p. 24) that, according to tradition, the author was a native of Southern India, called Andappillai, and that tālavṛinda or tālavṛinta is a translation of the Tamil panai-kkātu, a very common name for villages among palmyra trees (panai = palmyra, kātu = forest).

While preparing my new translation for the Press, I received a printed edition of the text and commentary published by Śrī Satyavratasāmaśramibhātākārya in his valuable Journal, the Ushā, beginning in the eighth fasciculus. He gives also a Bengāli translation, and some commentaries in the same language, which have proved useful in certain difficult passages.
ÂPASTAMBA'S
YAGÑA-PARIBHÂSHÂ-SÛTRAS.

GENERAL RULES OF THE SACRIFICE.

SÛTRA I.
We shall explain the sacrifice.

Commentary.
Yagñã, sacrifice, is an act by which we surrender something for the sake of the gods. Such an act must rest on a sacred authority (âgama), and serve for man's salvation (sreyoarth). The nature of the gift is of less importance. It may be purodâsa, cake; karu, pulse; sâmnâyya, mixed milk; pasu, an animal; soma, the juice of the Soma-plant, &c.; nay, the smallest offerings of butter, flour, and milk may serve for the purpose of a sacrifice.

Yagñã, yága, yagana, and ishti are considered as synonyms.

SÛTRA II.
The sacrifice is for the three colours or castes (varña), for Brâhmañas and Råganyas, also for the Vaisya.

Commentary.
Though the sacrifice is meant for the three castes, here called varña, i.e. colour, the third caste, that of the Vaisya or citizen, is mentioned by itself, while the two castes, the Brâhmañas and Råganyas (the Kshatriyas or nobles), are mentioned together. This is done because there are certain sacrifices (bahuyagamâna), performed by Brâhmañas and Råganyas together, in which Vaisyas take no part. In the Sânkhañâsana-sûtras, I, 1, 3, also the Vaisya is mentioned by himself. In Kātyāyana’s Sūtras, however, no such distinction is made, and we read, I, 6, Brāhmaṇa-rāganya-vaiśyānāṁ srutek. Women, if properly married, are allowed to participate in sacrifices, but no one is allowed to be accompanied by a Sūdrā woman, even though she be his wife. Properly a Brāhmaṇa should marry a wife of his own caste only. A Kshatriya may marry a woman of his own or of the Brāhmaṇa caste. A Vaiśya’s proper wife should be taken from his own caste. See, however, Manu III, 12 seq.

The four castes, with the Sūdra as the fourth, are mentioned once in the Rīg-veda, X, 90, 12. The opposition between Āryas and Sūdras occurs in the Atharva-veda, XIX, 62, &c., and in most of the Brāhmaṇas. In the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa we read of the four castes, Brāhmaṇa, Rāganya, Vaiśya, and Sūdra, and we are told that none of them vomits the Soma. Kātyāyana excludes from the sacrifice the aṅgahīna, cripple, shanda, eunuch, and all aśrotriyas, persons ignorant of the Veda, which would bar, of course, the whole class of the Sūdras, but they are also specially excluded. Concessions, however, had to be made at an early time, for instance, in the case of the Rathakāra, who is admitted to the Agnyādhaṇa, &c. This name means chariot-maker, but Āpadeva, in his Mīmāṃsā-nyāya-prakāsa, remarks that, though rathakāra means a chariot-maker etymologically, it should be taken here as the name of a clan, namely that of the Saudhanvanas (MS. Mill 46, p. 13b). Deva, in his commentary on the Kātyāyana-sūtras, makes the same remark. See also Weber, Ind. Stud. X, 12 seq. These Saudhanvanas, often identified with the Rībhus, are evidently the followers of Bṛibu, mentioned RV. VI, 45, 31; 33, and wrongly called Bṛidhu in Manu X, 107; see M. M., Hist. of A. S. L., p. 494. In the Sāṅkhāyana-Srauta-sūtras, XVI, 11, 11 (ed. Hillebrandt), he is rightly called Bṛibu. In later times Rathakāra is the name of a caste, and its members are supposed to be the offspring of a marriage between a Māhishya and a Karani. A Māhishya is the son of a Kshatriya and a Vaiśyā, a Karani the daughter of a Vaisya and a Sûdrá. Sudhanvan also is used in Manu, X, 23, as the name of a caste, namely the offspring of fallen (vrâtya) Vaisyas.

Another exception is made in favour of a Nisháda-sthapati, a Nisháda chieftain. If it meant a chieftain of Nishádas, it might be meant for a Kshatriya who happens to be a chieftain of Nishádas. Here it is meant for a chieftain who is himself a Nisháda, a native settler. He is admitted to the Gavedhuka sacrifice.

Again, although, as a rule, the sacrificer must have finished his study of the Veda and be married, a sacrifice is mentioned which a Brahma-kârin, a student, may perform. The case thus provided for is, yo brahma-kâri striyam upeyât, sa gardabham paśum ālabheta. As these sacrificers are not upanîta, and therefore without the sacred fires, their sacrifices have to be performed with ordinary fires, and the sacrificial offerings, the purodāsas, are not cooked in kapâlas, jars, but on the earth, while the avadánas (cuttings), heart, tongue, &c., are sacrificed in water, and not in fire. The Nisháda chieftain has to learn the necessary Vedic verses by heart, without having passed through a regular course of Vedic study. The same applies to women, who have to recite certain verses during the sacrifice.

That certain women are admitted to the sacrifice, is distinctly stated by Kâtyâyana, I, 1, 7, stri kâvîseshât.

Sûtra III.

The sacrifice is prescribed by the three Vedas.

Commentary.

In order to know the whole of the sacrifice, one Veda is not sufficient, still less one sákhâ (recension) only. The sacrifice is conceived as a whole, and its members (aṅgas) are described in different parts of the three Vedas.

Sûtra IV.

By the Rig-veda, the Yagur-veda, the Sûma-veda (is the sacrifice prescribed).
Sūtra V.

The Darsa-pūrnamāsau, the new and full-moon sacrifices, are prescribed by the Rīg-veda and the Yagur-veda.

Sūtra VI.

The Agnihotra is prescribed by the Yagur-veda.

Sūtra VII.

The Agnishūtoma is prescribed by all.

Commentary.

By saying all, the Atharva-veda is supposed to be included, at least according to one commentator.

The Agnishūtoma requires sixteen priests, the Pāsu sacrifices six, the Kāturmāṣyas five, the Darsa-pūrnamāsas four.

Sūtra VIII.

With the Rīg-veda and Sāma-veda the performance takes place with a loud voice (ukkaiḥ).

Commentary.

Even lines of the Yagur-veda, if they are contained in the Rīg-veda and Sāma-veda, would have to be pronounced with a loud voice. Certain mantras, however, are excepted, viz. the gapa, abhimantarana, and anumantranta-mantras.

Sūtra IX.

With the Yagur-veda the performance takes place by murmuring (upāmsu).

Commentary.

This murmuring, upāmsu, is described as a mere opus operatum, the words being repeated without voice and without thought. One may see the movements of the vocal organs in murmuring, but one should not hear them at a distance. If verses from the Rīg-veda or Sāma-veda occur in the Yajur-veda, they also have to be murmured. See Kâty. I, 3, 10.

SûTRA X.

With the exception of addresses, replies, choosing of priests (pravara), dialogues, and commands.

Commentary.

As all these are meant to be understood by others, they have therefore to be pronounced in a loud voice. The address (āsruta) is om srâvaya; the reply (pratyāsruta) is astu sraushat\(^1\); the choosing of priests (pravara) is agnir devo hoṭâ; a dialogue (samvâda) is brahman prokshishhyâmi, om proksha; a command (sampresha) is prokshanâir āsâdaya.

SûTRA XI.

In the Sâmidheni hymns the recitation is to be between (the high and the low tone).

Commentary.

The Sâmidhenis are the hymns used for lighting the fire. One commentator explains antarâ, between, as between high tone (krushṭa) and the murmuring (upāmsu). Another distinguishes three high tones, the krushṭa (also called târa or krauṭkā), the madhyama, and the manda, and assigns the madhyama to the Sâmidheni hymns. The manda notes come from the chest, the madhyama notes from the throat, the uttama notes from the head.

SûTRA XII.

Before the Āgyabhâgas (such as the Āgya-portions at the Darsa-pûrnamâsa), and at the morning Savana (oblation of Soma), the recitation is to be with the soft (manda) voice.

\(^1\) See Hillebrandt, Das Altind. Neu- und Vollmondsopfer, p. 94.
Commentary.

The pronunciation is loud, ukkhaih, but soft, mandra. Satyavrata restricts this rule to the passages mentioned in Sūtra X. He also treats the second part of Sūtras XII, XIII, and XIV as separate Sūtras.

Sūtra XIII.

Before the Svishṭakṛit (at the Darsa-pūrṇamāsa) sacrifice, and at the midday Savana, the recitation is to be with the middle voice.

Sūtra XIV.

In the remainder and at the third Savana with the sharp (krushṭa) voice.

Commentary.

The remainder refers to the Darsa-pūrṇamāsa sacrifice, the three Savanas to the Soma sacrifice. Satyavrata takes all these rules as referring to the cases mentioned in Sūtra X.

Sūtra XV.

The movement of the voice is the same.

Commentary.

In the three cases mentioned before, the voice moves quickly, when the words are to be pronounced high; slowly, when low; and measuredly, when neither loud nor low.

Sūtra XVI.

The Hotṛi-priest performs with the Rig-veda.

Sūtra XVII.

The Udgātri-priest with the Sāma-veda.

1 See on this, Rig-veda Prātisākhya 13, 17; Āsval. I, 5, 27; Sāṅkh. I, 14; Hillebrandt, l. c. p. 103.
Sūtras XIII–XXII.

Sūtra XVIII.
The Adhvaryu-priest with the Yagur-veda.

Sūtra XIX.
The Brahma-priest with all.

Commentary.
‘With all’ means with the three Vedas, because the Brahma-priest, or superintendent of the whole sacrifice, must be acquainted with the three Vedas. Others would include the Atharva-veda.

Sūtra XX.
When it is expressly said, or when it is rendered impossible, another priest also may act.

Commentary.
Vipratishe'dha is explained by asambhava and aṣākti.

Sūtra XXI.
The priestly office (ārtvīgya) belongs to the Brāhmaṇas.

Commentary.
Sacrifices may be performed for Kshatriyas, Vaisyas, and, in certain cases, even for others, but never by any but Brāhmaṇas. The reason given for this is curious,— because Brāhmaṇas only are able to eat the remains of a sacrifice. See Satap. Br. II, 3, 1, 39; Kātyāyana IV, 14, 11; also I, 2, 8, com.

Sūtra XXII.
For all sacrifices the fires are laid once.

Commentary.
The sacrificial fires have to be arranged for the first time

[30]
by a peculiar ceremony, called the Agnyádhána. They are generally three (Tretá), the Gárhapatyá, the father; the Dakshína, the son; and the Áhavaniya, the grand-son. The first laying of the Gárhapatyá fire-altar takes place in spring for a Bráhma, in summer for a Ráganya, in winter for a Vaisya.

Sûtra XXIII.

If it is said, guhoti, ‘he sacrifices,’ it should be known that sarpir ágya, melted butter, is meant.

Commentary.

Sarpis is here taken as an adjective, running; yad asarpat tat sarpir abhavat. Ágya is explained as navanitavikárdradravyagātityayavakānak sabdak, i.e. a word signifying any kind of substance made of fresh butter.

In the Aitareya-Bráhma I, 3, we read ágyam vai devánám surabhi, ghritam manushyánám, ayutam pitranám, navanítam garbhánám, ‘Ágya is sweet or fragrant to the gods, ghrita to men, ayuta to the manes, navanita to children.’ Here the commentator explains that ágya is butter, when melted (vilina sarpis), ghrita, when hardened. Ayuta, sometimes called astu, is butter, when slightly melted, nishpakva, when thoroughly melted. According to Kátyáyana I, 8, 37, ágya is of different kinds. It may be simple ghrita, which, as a rule, should be made of the milk of cows. But in the absence of ágya, the milk of buffaloes (máhisha), or oil (taila), or sesam-oil (gártila), or linseed oil (atasisneha), &c., may be taken.

Sûtra XXIV.

If it is said, guhoti, it should be known that the Adhvaryu is meant as performer.

Commentary.

Though there is a man who offers the sacrifice, yet the actual homa, the throwing of butter &c. into the fire, has to be performed by the Adhvaryu priest.
Sūtra XXV.
Likewise, the spoon (guhû) as the vessel.

Commentary.
Guhû, the spoon, is so called because it is used for pouring out (guhoti, homa).

Sūtra XXVI.
If the guhû has been elsewhere employed, let it be done with a ladle (sruva).

Commentary.
The guhû is a sruk, a spoon, the sruva, a ladle.

Sūtra XXVII.
The offering is made in the Åhavanyâ fire.

Sūtra XXVIII.
The sacrificial vessels are kept from the first laying of the fires (âdhâna) for the whole life.

Commentary.
All sacrificial vessels and instruments are to be kept, and most of them are burnt with the sacrificer at his death.

Sūtra XXIX.
At every sacrifice these vessels are to be purified.

Sūtra XXX.
The rule for the sacrifice are the Mantras and Brâhmanas.

Sūtra XXXI.
The name Veda belongs both to the Mantras and Brâhmanas.
Sūtra XXXII.

The Brāhmaṇas are the precepts for the sacrifice.

Sūtra XXXIII.

The rest of the Brāhmaṇa, that which does not contain precepts, consists of explanations, i.e. reproof, praise, stories, and traditions.

Commentary.

It is difficult to find words corresponding to technical terms in Sanskrit. Arthavāda, which I have translated by explanation, means not only the telling of the meaning, but likewise the telling of the object; parakṛiti, story, means literally the action of another; purākalpa, traditions, means the former state. The difference between the two is stated to be that parakṛiti refers to the act of one person, purākalpa to that of several. This subject is fully treated in the Pūrva-mīmāṃsā. Satyavrata begins a new Sūtra with 'reproof' (nīndā).

Sūtra XXXIV.

All the rest are Mantras.

Sūtra XXXV.

But passages which are not handed down, are not to be classed as Mantras, as, for instance, the pravara, the words used in choosing priests, divine or human; ūha, substitution of one word for another; and nāmadheya-grahaṇa, the mentioning of the names of particular sacrificers.

Commentary.

The reason why such passages are not to be treated as Mantras is that they should not be subject to some of the preceding rules, as, for instance, the murmuring, enjoined in Sūtra IX. Those passages naturally vary in each sacrifice. With regard to the names a distinction is made between the gārhyam nāma, the domestic name of a person, such as Yagñasarman, and the astrological name, such as Rauhīṇa, derived from the star Rōhīṇī.

Sūtra XXXVI.

Likewise the sound of a carriage and the sound of a drum.

Commentary.

These sounds, though serving for the sacrifice, are not to be considered as liable to the rules given for the recitation of Mantras.

Sūtra XXXVII.

The prohibition of reciting Mantras in the Svādhyāya does not apply to the sacrifice, because there is then a different object.

Commentary.

Svādhyāya, i.e. self-reading, is the name given to the study of the Veda, both in first learning and in afterwards repeating it. This study is under several restrictions, but these restrictions cease when the Veda is used for sacrificial purposes.

Sūtra XXXVIII.

Sacrificial acts are accompanied by one Mantra.

Commentary.

If it is said that the priest cuts the plants with fourteen verses, that means that there are fourteen plants to be cut and that one verse is used for each plant.

Sūtra XXXIX.

This applies also to sacrificial acts which have a number and are to be carried out by separate (repeated) acts.
Commentary.

If a rule is given, such as triḥ prokshati, he sprinkles thrice, the mantra which accompanies the act, is recited once only. Again in the case of acts that require repetitions, such as rubbing, pounding, &c., the hymns are recited once only.

Sūtra XL.

The same applies to rubbing, sleeping, crossing a river, down-pours of rain, the conjuring of unlucky omens, unless they happened some time ago.

Commentary.

If several members of the body are to be rubbed, the verses required for the purpose are recited once only. A prayer is enjoined if one wakes during the night. If one wakes more than once that prayer is not to be repeated. In crossing a river the necessary verse is not to be repeated at every wave, nor during a down-pour, at every drop of rain. If some unlucky sight has to be conjured, the conjuring verse is spoken once and not repeated, unless some time has elapsed and a new unlucky sight presents itself.

Sūtra XLI.

In case of a journey, however, one hymn is used till the object (of the journey) has been accomplished.

Commentary.

I read prayâne tu-ā-arthanivritteḥ. Another reading is arthanivrittiḥ.

Sūtra XLII.

It is the same also with regard to acts which do not produce an immediate effect.

Commentary.

The commentators distinguish between acts which produce a visible effect, such as pounding or sprinkling, and acts which do not, such as addressing, approaching, looking. The latter are called asamnipātin. Thus when the stones used for the preparation of Soma are addressed, the hymn which is used for addressing them, is not repeated for each single stone, the same as in Sūtra XL. Sūtras XLI and XLII are sometimes joined.

Sūtra XLIII.

Repetition takes place in the case of the Havishkrit, Adhrigu, Puronuvākyā, and Manotā hymns, (because they have to be used) at different times.

Commentary.

Havishkrit-adhrigu-puronuvākyā-manotam is to be taken as a Dvandva compound.

The Havishkrit hymn is an invocation when the havis is made. The Adhrigu hymn is ‘Daivyah samitāraḥ,’ &c. The Puronuvākyā hymn is that which precedes the Yāgyā, immediately after the Sampraisha. The Manotā hymn is ‘Tvam hy agne pratham manotā,’ &c. These hymns are to be repeated, if the act which they accompany has to be repeated after a certain interval.

Sūtra XLIV.

When it is expressly stated, one sacrificial act may be accompanied by many hymns.

Commentary.

Thus we read, 'He takes the Abhri, the hoe, with four Mantras.'

Sūtra XLV.

One ought to let the beginnings of a sacrificial act coincide with the end of the Mantras.
Commentary.

The mantra which indicates the nature and purpose of a sacrificial act should come first, and as soon as it has been finished the act should follow. See Kâty. I, 3, 5.

Sûtra XLVI.

In the case of the āghāra, sprinkling of clarified butter, and of dhārā, pouring out of Soma, the beginning of the mantra and the act takes place at the same time.

Sûtra XLVII.

Mantras are indicated by their first words.

Commentary.

These first words are often called Pratīkhas, and rules are given in Āsvalāyana's Srauta-sūtras I, 1, 17–19, as to the number of words that should form such a pratīka, if it is meant for one verse, for three verses, or for a whole hymn. According to Āsvalāyana, if one foot is quoted, it is meant for a verse; if an imperfect foot of an initial verse is quoted, it is meant for a whole hymn; if more than a foot is quoted, it is meant for three verses.

Sûtra XLVIII.

One should know that with the beginning of a following mantra, the former mantra is finished.

Sûtra XLIX.

In the case of Hotrā and Yāgamāna-mantras, an aggregation takes place.

Commentary.

Hotrâs are mantras recited by the Hotrī-priest, Yāgamānâs are mantras recited by the sacrificer himself. They are hymns which accompany, but do not enjoin any sacrificial act.
Sûtra L.

In the case of the Yâgyâs and Anuvâkyâs this (the aggregation) is optional.

Commentary.

The Yâgyâ is explained by prayakkhati yâgyayâ, the Anuvâkyâ by áhayaty anuvâkyayâ. Sometimes more than one are mentioned, but in that case the priest is free to do as he likes. According to the same principle, when we read that one should sacrifice with rice or with barley, that means that rice should be used after the rice-harvest, barley after the barley-harvest, and not that rice and barley should be used at the same time.

Sûtra LI.

It is the same with numbers.

Commentary.

If we read that, as in the case of fees to be given to priests, two, seven, eleven, twelve, twenty-one, sixty, or a hundred, this means that either one or the other, not that all should be given at the same time.

Sûtra LII.

But accumulation is meant in the buying (of Soma), in the redemption, and in initiation.

Commentary.

When it is said that Soma is bought for a goat, gold, &c., that it is re-bought from the priests by means of a fee, or that at the time of the Dikshâ, the purification and initiation of a sacrificer, clothes, gold, grain, &c., should be given, these are cases not of aut-aut but of et-et.

The Soma-plant, which is supposed to be bought from northern barbarians, is botanically described in an Æurvedic extract, quoted in the Dhûrtasvâmi-bhâshyaâikâ (MS. E. I. H. 531, p. 3b), as syāmālāmlā ka nishpatrā kshirini tvāki māmsalā, slesh-malā vamani valli somākyā khāgabhogananam. 'The creeper called Soma is dark, sour, without leaves, milky, fleshy on the surface, producing phlegm and vomiting, food for goats.'

This passage, quoted from some Ayur-vedic text, is still the only one which gives an approximative description of the Soma-plant. Dr. Hooker says that the predicates 'sour and milky' point to Sarcostemma, but the question is not decided yet. For further information see George Watt,
The Soma Plant, an extract from the third volume of the Dictionary of Economic Products of India, and Hillebrandt, Vedische Mythologie, pp. 14 seq.

Sūtra LIII.

If one has performed an offering to Rudra, to the Rākshasas, to Nirvīti, or to the Pitris, if one has cut or broken or thrown away anything, or rubbed oneself, &c., one should touch water.

Commentary.

The touching of water is for the sake of purification.
Nirasana is left out in some MSS. The ka, inserted after abhīmasanañāni, is explained, as usual, as including other acts also, corresponding to our etc.

Sūtra LIV.

All priestly performances take place on the northern side of the Vihāra.

Commentary.

Uttarata-upakāraḥ has to be taken as a compound.
Vihāra is explained as vihriyante gnayak pātrāni ka yasmin dese, i.e. the sacrificial ground. Upakāra is explained as adhvaryvādinām samkaraḥ, and this samkara, according to Kātyāyana I, 3, 42, is the path between the Kātvāla and Utkara, the Utkara being on the west, the pranitās on the east of the Vihāra. Kātyāyana I, 8, 26, expresses the same rule by uttarata-upakāro yagānak,
the vihāra being the place where the yagānak takes place.
Sûtras LIII—LX.

Sûtra LV.

The priest should never turn away from the fire, i.e. should never turn his back on the altar.

Sûtra LVI.

Nor from the Vihâra.

Sûtra LVII.

Sacrificial utensils should be turned inside, the performers being outside.

Commentary.

The meaning is that the priest should carry such things as spoons, vessels, &c., holding them towards the altar. The sacrificer and his wife should likewise be on the inside of the priest, and the priests should take precedence sideways according to their rank.

Sûtra LVIII.

After a sacrificial object has been hallowed by a Mantra, the priest should not toss it about.

Sûtra LIX.

Sacrificial acts intended for the gods, should be performed by the priest towards the east or towards the north, after he has placed the Brahmanic cord over the left and under the right arm (yagñopavî- tin), and turning towards the right.

Sûtra LX.

Sacrificial acts intended for the Fathers should be performed by the priest towards the south, after he has placed the Brahmanic cord over the right and under the left arm (prâktinâvtin), and turning towards the left.

Sûtra LXII.

Ropes which are not joined (single ropes), should be tied by the priest from left to right.

Commentary.

The exact process here intended is not quite clear. The ropes seem to have been made of vegetable fibres. See Kâty. I, 3, 15-17.

Sûtra LXIII.

Let a man sacrifice with the Amâvâsyâ sacrifice at the time of the Amâvâsyâ, new moon.

Commentary.

Amâ-vâsyâ is the dwelling together, i.e. the conjunction, of sun and moon, an astronomical expression which was adopted in the common language of the people at a very early time. It does not occur, however, in the Rig-veda. In our Sûtra amâvâsyâ is used in the sense both of new moon and new-moon sacrifice.

Sûtra LXIV.

And let a man sacrifice with the Paurnamâsya sacrifice at the time of the Paurnamâst, full moon, thus it is said.

Commentary.

Here the full moon is called paurnamâst, the sacrifice paurnamâsyâ. Satyavrata joins the two Sûtras in one, and leaves out yageteti, which may have belonged to the commentary.
Sûtra LXV.

Let a man observe that full-moon day as a day of abstinence on which the moon comes out full before.

Commentary.

The full moon (paurnamāsi) is really the very moment on which the moon is full and therefore begins to decrease. That moment on which sun and moon are, as the Hindus said, at the greatest distance from each other, is called the parva-sandhi, the juncture of the two phases of the moon. Thus the name of paurnamāsi belongs to the last day of the one and to the first day (pratipad) of the other phase, and both days might be called paurnamāsi. If therefore the moon is full on the afternoon, the evening, or the twilight of one day, that day should be observed as a fast-day, and the next day should be the day of sacrifice.

The meaning of purastād, which I have translated by before, is doubtful. One commentator says it has no object, and should be dropped, purastād ity etat padam asmin sūtra idānīm anvayam nalabhate prayoganabhāvat. Purastād, before, may, however, mean before the second day, on which the real sacrifice takes place, and the commentator mentions purastāt-paurnamāsi as a name of the katurdasi-yuktā, i.e. the full moon beginning on the fourteenth day. The same kind of full moon is also called Anumati, Pûrvā-paurnamāsi, and Sandhyā-paurnamāsi, while that which takes place on the pratipad, the first day of the lunar phase, is called Rākā, Uttarā-paurnamāsi, Astamitodita, and Svakh-pūritā.

Corresponding to these two kinds of Paurnamāsi there are also two kinds of Amāvāsyā. That which falls on the fourteenth day is called Pûrvā-amāvāsyā, or Sinivālt, the ty kal vist; that which falls on the pratipad, the first day of the new phase, is called Kuhū, Uttarā-amāvāsyā, Svoyuktā. See also Ait.-Brāhm. II, 4; Nir. XI, 31-32.
Sūtra LXVI.

Or the day when one says, To-morrow it will be full.

Commentary.

In that case the day before should be observed as a day of abstinence. The real full moon would then take place in the fore-noon, pûrvāhne, of the next day. Abstinence, upavāsa, consists in abstaining from meat and from maithuna, in shaving beard and head, cutting the nails, and, what seems a curious provision, in speaking the truth. See Kāty.-Srauta-sūtras II, 1, 8–12.

Sūtra LXVII.

The Vāgasaneyins mention a third, the Kharvikā full moon.

Commentary.

Kharva means small. If one divides the night into twelve parts, and if in a portion of the twelfth part the greatest distance of sun and moon takes place, then the full moon is called kharvikā, also kshīnā. Or, if on the sixteenth day, the full moon takes place before noon, that also is called kharvikā paurṇamāśī. In that case abstinence or fasting takes place on the sixteenth day (tasyāṁ shodase-hany upavāsaḥ). Both paurṇamāśīs are also called sadyaskālā.

Sūtra LXVIII.

Let a man observe that new-moon day (amāvāsyā) as a day of abstinence, on which the moon is not seen.

Commentary.

This Sūtra has to be connected with Sūtra LXV. The abstinence takes place on the day, if the actual new moon, the nearest approach of sun and moon, falls on the afternoon, at night, or at twilight. And this new moon, the junction of the fifteenth day and the pratipad, is called Kuhū. We should read amāvāsyām.
Sūtras LXVI–LXXI.

Sūtra LXIX.

Or the day when one says, To-morrow they will not see it.

Commentary.

In that case, when the real new moon takes place in the fore-noon, abstinence is observed on the day before, and the new moon is called Sinivālī. Satyavrata reads svo yuktā iči vā instead of svo na drashṭāra iči vā. Dra-shṭāraḥ should be explained as īkṣḥitāraḥ, ‘they will not see it.’ There is much difference of opinion on this subject among different Sākhās, Sūtrakāras, and their commentators; see Taṅṭ. Samh. III, 4, 9; Weber, Ind. Stud., V, p. 228.

Sūtra LXX.

The principal acts (pradhāna), prescribed in one (typical) performance, follow the same special rules (vidhāna).

Commentary.

This Sūtra is variously explained: Satyāvrata’s commentary, which I have followed in the translation, explains pradhānāni as āgneyādīnī, i.e. the chief parts of such a sacrifice as the Darsa-pūrṇamāsa; vidhānāni as āṅgānī. Kapardīsvāmin’s commentary also explains vidhānāni as the āṅgāni of a pradhānam; pradhānam as pūrṇamāsa, &c. It would therefore mean that such ceremonies as the āgneya (ashta-kapāla), āgni-shomiya (ekādara-kapāla), and upāmsu, which form the pradhānas of the Darsapūrṇamāsa, retain throughout the same vidhānas or āṅgas as prescribed in one Prakaraṇa, viz. the Darsapūrṇamāsa. The Āṅgas or members are all the things used for sacrificial purposes, milk, butter, grains, animals, &c.

Sūtra LXXI.

The special rules are limited by (the purpose of) the (typical) performance (prakaraṇa).
Commentary.

Here the rules (vidhis) are again the Āṅgas, which belong to a sacrifice, as the members belong to the body.

Sūtra LXXII.

If no special instruction is given (in the Sruti), the acts are general.

Sūtra LXXIII.

If a special instruction is given, they are restricted.

Commentary.

Nirdesa is explained as vīsesa-sruti, and the meaning is supposed to be that unless such a special rule is given, the Āṅgas of all the Pradhāna acts remain the same, as, for instance, the Paryagnikarana, the Prayāgas, &c. Special instructions are when it is said: payasa maitravarūnam srīnāti, sruvena purodāsam anakti, he cooks the Maitravarūna with milk, he anoints the Purodāsa with the spoon, &c.

Sūtra LXXIV.

The Ashtā-kapāla for Agni, the Ekādāsa-kapāla for Agni-Shomau, and the Upāmṣu-yāga (the muttered offering of butter), form the principal acts at the Paurvamāṣṭ, the full moon.

Commentary.

The Ashtā-kapāla is the cake baked in eight cups, the Ekādāsa-kapāla that baked in eleven cups, and respectively destined for Agni and Soma. What is meant are the sacrificial acts for which these cakes are used.

Sūtra LXXV.

The other Homas are Āṅga.

Commentary.

The other acts, such as the prayāgas and anuyāgas, are auxiliary, and have no promise of reward by themselves.
SŪTRAS LXXII–LXXIX.

SŪTRA LXXVI.

The Ashtā-kapāla for Agni, the Ekādāsa-kapāla or Dvādāsa-kapāla for Indra-Agni, form the principal acts at the Amāvāsyā, the new moon, in the case of one who does not sacrifice with Soma.

SŪTRA LXXVII.

In the case of one who sacrifices with Soma, the second principal act is the Sāmnāyya (both at the full-moon and new-moon sacrifices).

Commentary.

The Sāmnāyya is a mixture of dadhi and payas, sour and sweet milk, and is intended for Indra or Mahendra. It takes the place of the second Purodāsa at the new-moon sacrifice.

SŪTRA LXXVIII.

In the case of a Brāhmaṇa, who does not sacrifice with Soma, the Agnīshomīya cake is omitted.

Commentary.

This rule does not seem to be accepted by all schools. It is not found in Kātyāyana, and Hiranyakesīn observes: Nāsomayāgino brāhmaṇasyāgnīshomīyaḥ purodāso vidyata ity ekeshām. See Hillebrandt, l. c. p. iii.

SŪTRA LXXIX.

Without distinction of caste, the Aindrāgna offering is omitted for one who offers the Sāmnāyya.

Commentary.

Even though he be not a Somayāgin, says the commentary.

1 Vaidya in his Dictionary explains it, however, as any substance mixed with clarified butter and offered as a burnt offering, which can hardly be right.

[30]
This whole matter is summed up in Kapardin's commentary: Amāvāsyāyām asomayāgīna ainḍragna-sām-nāyyayor vikalpaḥ. Paurnamāsyām tv asomayāgīno brāhmaṇasyāgnīshomīyayāgābhāvah. Tadrahitāpi paurnamāsī purushārtham sādhyayati. Tatra dvayor eva hi yāgayoh paurnamāsīsabdavādyatvam asti, pratyekam nāmayogat. Tasmād agnīshomīyayāgarahitāv evetarau purushārtham sādhayataḥ.

Sūtra LXXX.

The Pitri-yagāḍa, the sacrifice to the fathers, is not Aṅga (auxiliary) because its own time is prescribed.

Commentary.

The text should be pitriyagāḍaḥ svakālavidhānād anaṅgah syāt. This sacrifice for the Manes, called also the Pinda-pitriyagāḍa, falls under the new-moon sacrifice, but is to be considered as a pradhāṇa, a primary sacrifice, not as an aṅga, a member of the Darsa.

Sūtra LXXXI.

Also, because it is enumerated like the Darsapūrṇamāsa sacrifice.

Commentary.

This refers to such passages from the Brāhmaṇas as: There are four great sacrifices, the Agnihotram, the Darsapūrṇamāsau, the Kāturāṃṣyāni, and the Pinda-pitriyagāḍa.

Sūtra LXXXII.

Also, because, when the Amāvāsyā sacrifice is barred, the Pitriyagāḍa is seen to take place.

Sūtra LXXXIII.

A principal act (pradhāṇa) is accompanied by auxiliary acts (aṅga).
SŪTRAS LXXX—LXXXVII.

Commentary.
This Sūtra forms sometimes part of the preceding Sūtra, and would then refer to the Pitṛiyāgna only.

SŪTRA LXXXIV.
A principal act is what has its own name, and is prescribed with special reference to place, time, and performer.

Commentary.
This Sūtra is sometimes divided into two; the first, dese kāle kartariti nirdisyate, the second, asvāsabdasyat. The following are given as illustrations. If it is said that ‘he should sacrifice with the Vaisvadeva on a slope inclined to the East,’ we have the locality. If it is said that ‘he should sacrifice with the Vāgāpeya in autumn,’ we have the time. If it is said that ‘the sacrificer himself should offer the Agnihotra on a parvan (change of the moon),’ we have the performer. In each of these cases, therefore, the prescribed sacrificial act is a pradhāna sāṅgam, a principal act with auxiliary members.

SŪTRA LXXXV.
The Darvi-homa (libation from a ladle) stands by itself.

Commentary.
Apurvā is explained by the commentator, not in its usual sense of miraculous, but as not being subject to the former regulations.

SŪTRA LXXXVI.
They are ordered by the word guhoti, he pours out.

SŪTRA LXXXVII.
They are offered with the word Svāhā.

Commentary.
According to Kātyāyana I, 2, 6–7, the guhotis are... offered sitting, the yagatsis standing. See Sûtra XCII. The guhoti acts consist in pouring melted butter into the fire of the Áhavaniya altar, which is so called because ‘áhû-yante sminn áhutayaḥ kshipyanta iti.’

SûTRA LXXXVIII.

Taking (the butter) once.

SûTRA LXXXIX.

Or, if there are several Áhutis, taking (the butter) for each Áhuti.

SûTRA XC.

Or, doing as he likes in dividing (the butter).

Commentary.

These three Sûtras belong together. They teach that one slice (avadāna) of butter should be taken, melted, and poured on the Áhavaniya fire; or, if there are more than one Áhuti, then one slice should be taken for each. This, however, is made optional again by the last Sûtra.

SûTRA XCI.

There is no fuel (in the Darvi-homa), except at the Agnihotra.

Commentary.

In the case of the Agnihotra it is distinctly stated, dve samidhâv âdadhya‘t, let him lay down two sticks.

SûTRA XCII.

One pours out (guhoti) the Darvi-homas, sitting west of the Áhavantya fire, and bending the right knee, or not bending it.

SûTRA XCIII.

If it is distinctly stated, it is done in a different way.
Commentary.

The vidhi, contained in Sūtra XCII, is therefore called autsargika, general, and liable to exceptions, as when it is said, that he turns to the east.

Sūtra XCIV.

One pours out (guhoti) all āḥutis, west of the Āhavanīya fire, passing (the altar) southward, and then turning to the north.

Sūtra XCV.

The Āśruta and Pratyāśruta, the Yāgyā and Anuvākyā, the Upastarana and Abhīghārana, with the slicings, the Katurgrīhīta also, and the Vashaṭkāra constitute the Darvi-homas.

Commentary.

The Āśruta is ā śravaya; the Pratyāśruta, astu sraushat; Anuvākyā and Yāgyā are verses, the first inviting the deity, the second accompanying the sacrifice. Whenever vegetable, animal, or sāmnāyya offerings have to be sliced, upastarana, spreading, and abhīghārana, sprinkling with fat, take place. With āgya offerings there is Katurgrīhīta (taking four times), and the Vashaṭkāra.

Sūtra XCVI.

With āḥutis one should let the act (the pouring out) take place after the Vashaṭkāra has been made, or while it is being made.

Commentary.

The Vashaṭkāra consists in the word Vashat, to be uttered by the Hotri-priest. The five sacrificial interjections are, svāhā, sraushat, vaushat, vashat, and svadhā.

Sūtra XCVII.

With the Grahas the act should be made to coincide with the Upayāma.
Commentary.

Grahas are offerings of Soma, and likewise the vessels (kāmasa) in which the Soma is offered. The Soma is offered with the words upayāma-grīhīto-si, and while these words are being uttered, the fluid should be poured out (dhārāṃ sraṣvayet).

Sūtra XC VIII.

With the Ishtakās, the act should be made to coincide with the words tayā deva tena.

Commentary.

When the different Ishtakās or bricks are placed together for building an altar, &c., the act itself begins with the first and ends with the last words of the accompanying verse.

Sūtra XC IX.

When there is a number of Purodāsas, one should slice off one after another, saying for each portion vyāvartadhvam (separate)!

Commentary.

Purodāsa is a cake made of meal (pakvah pishṭapindah), different from kāru, which is more of a pulse consisting of grains of rice or barley, and clarified butter (ghrīatatandulo-bhayātmakam). This purodāsa cake has to be divided for presentation to different deities. If there are more than two deities, the plural vyāvartadhvam, separate, has to be used.

Sūtra C.

When the two last are sliced off, he should say for each portion, vyāvartethām, separate ye two!

Commentary.

Each slice, avadāna, is said to be about a thumb’s breadth. In the case of sāmnāyya, the mixture of sour and sweet milk, a kind of coagulated sour milk, each portion is to be of the same breadth, but, as it is fluid, it is... taken out with a ladle (ṣruva) of a corresponding size; see Kātyāyana I, 9, 7.

Sūtra CI.

For these two last portions he makes the indication of the deity.

Commentary.

With the earlier portions, there is a rule which of two gods should have the first or the second portion. With the last couple, however, the priest may himself assign whichever portion he likes to one or the other god. The commentary says, svayam eva idam asyā itī saṅkalpayet.

Sūtra CII.

When there is a number of Karus and Purodāsas, one separates what belongs to the Karus and what belongs to the Purodāsas, before the strewing.

Commentary.

Prāg adhivapanāt, before the strewing, is explained by prāg adhivapanārthakrīśhrishnāginādānāt, before one takes the black skin which is used for the strewing.

Sūtra CIII.

One then marks the two (the materials for the Karus and the Purodāsas) according to the deities (for whom they are intended).

Sūtra CIV.

Let the word idam be the rule.

Commentary.

This means that the offering (havis) intended for each deity should be pointed out by the words idam, this, Agneh, is for Agni, &c. Thus we read with regard to the offerings intended for certain gods and goddesses: idam Dhātur, idam Anumatyā, Rākāyāḥ Sinivālyāḥ, Kuhvāḥ.
Sūtra CV.

All this applies also to Karus and Purodāsas which are separated.

Commentary.

The commentary explains vyatishikta by anyonyam vyavahita, though it is difficult to see how it can have that meaning. It is said that in the Vaiśvadeva the Karus and Purodāsas are vyatishikta, but that they also have to be divided before the adhivapana, and to be marked for each deity. Thus we read: Idam Agneh, Savituh, Pūshno, Marutām, Dyāvāprithivyoh, &c.

Sūtra CVI.

At the time when the Kapālas are put on the fire, one puts on the Karu with the first Kapāla verse.

Commentary.

Karu is here used for the vessel for boiling the Karu, the Karusthāli. The first of these verses is dhrishtri asī. Kapālas are the jars in which the rice is cooked.

Sūtra CVII.

The verse is adapted and changed to dhruvoṣi.

Commentary.

Samnāma means the same as āha, i.e. the modification of a verse so as to adapt it to the object for which it is used. In our case, Karu, being a masculine, dhrishti, a feminine, is replaced by dhruva, a masculine.

Sūtra CVIII.

At the time when the meal is to be cleansed, one cleanses the grains.

Commentary.

This takes place after the Karu-pot has been put on. The tandulas are the unhusked grains, pishṭa is the ground flour. In Sanskrit a distinction is made between sasya, the corn in the field, dhânya, corn with the husk, tandula, grains without husks, anna, roasted grains.

Sûtra CIX.
At the time of cooking (adhisrapana) one throws the grains in with the cooking verse.

Commentary.

This verse is gharmoṣi.

Sûtra CX.
Without taking the karu (out of the sthâlī) one puts it down.

Sûtra CXI.
At the Darsa-pûrnamâsa sacrifices there are fifteen Sâmídhensís.

Commentary.

Sâmídhensís are particular verses recited while the fire is being kindled. The first and last verses are repeated thrice, so as to make fifteen in all.

Sûtra CXII.
At the Ishṭi and Pasubandha sacrifices there are seventeen Sâmídhensís, when they are so handed down.

Sûtra CXIII.
When it is said that wishful ishṭis are performed in a murmur, this means that the names of the chief deities are pronounced in a murmur (likewise the yâgyâ and anuvâkyâ).

Sûtra CXIV.
The Darsa-pûrnamâsa sacrifice is the Prakṛiti or norm for all ishṭis.
Commentary.

The Sûtras, in describing the performance of certain sacrifices, treat some of them in full detail. These are called prakrīti. Prakriyante smin dharmā iti prakaranam prakrītiḥ. They form the type of other sacrifices, which are therefore looked upon as mere modifications, vikrīti, and in describing them those points only are fully described in which they differ from their prakrīti. A sacrifice which is a vikrīti, may again become the prakrīti of another sacrifice. This system is no doubt compendious, but it is not free from difficulty, and, in some cases, from uncertainty. It shows how much system there is in the Indian sacrifices, and how fully and minutely that system must have been elaborated, before it assumed that form in which we find it in the Brāhmaṇas and Sûtras. It must not be supposed that the sacrifices which serve as prakrīti, are therefore historically the most ancient.

Sûtra CXV.

It is also the norm for the Agnīshomīya Paśu, the animal sacrifice for Agnī-Shomau.

Sûtra CXVI.

And this is the norm for the Savantīya.

Sûtra CXVII.

And the Savantīya is the norm for the Aikādāsinas.

Sûtra CXVIII.

And the Aikādāsinas are the norm for the Paśuganās.

Commentary.

The rules for the Paśuganās are therefore to be taken over from the Aikādāsinas, the Savantīya, the Agnīshomīya-paśu, and the Darsa-pūrnamāsa, so far as they have been modified in each particular case, and are finally determined by the rules of each \textit{Pasugana}, as, for instance, the \textit{Aditya-pasu}.

\textsc{Sūtra CXIX.}

The \textit{Vaisvadeva} is the norm for the \textit{Varuna-praghāsa}, \textit{Sākamedha}, and \textit{Sūtra}.

\textbf{Commentary.}

The \textit{Vaisvadeva}, beginning, like the \textit{Darsa-pūrnamāsa}, with an Āgneya ashtakapāla, takes certain rules from the \textit{Darsa-pūrnamāsa}, and transfers these, together with its own, as, for instance, the nine \textit{prayāgas}, to the \textit{Varuna-praghāsa}, &c.

\textsc{Sūtra CXX.}

The \textit{Vaisvadevika Ekakapāla} is the norm for all \textit{Ekakapālas}.

\textbf{Commentary.}

The \textit{Ekakapāla} is a \textit{purodāsa} cake, baked in one kapāla. It is fully described in the \textit{Vaisvadeva}, and then becomes the norm of all \textit{Ekakapālas}. An \textit{ekakapāla} cake is not divided.

\textsc{Sūtra CXXI.}

The \textit{Vaisvadevī Šāmkshā} is the norm for the Šāmkshās (a preparation of milk).

\textsc{Sūtra CXXII.}

Here the \textit{Vikāra}, the modification, is perceived from similarity.

\textbf{Commentary.}

If it has once been laid down that the \textit{Darsa-pūrnamāsa} is the \textit{prakṛti} or norm for all \textit{ishrīs}, then similarity determines the modification in all details, such as the offerings and the gods to whom offerings are made. Thus \textit{Karu}, being a vegetable offering, would rank as a \textit{vikāra} of \textit{purodāsa}, which occurs in the \textit{Darsa-pūrnamāsa} sacrifice, and is likewise vegetable. Honey and water would be looked upon as most like the Âgya in the Darsa-pûrṇamāsa. Âmikshā, a preparation of milk, would come nearest to the Sâmnâyya, which is a mixture of sour and sweet milk.

Sûtra CXXIII.

Offerings for one deity are vikâras of the Âgneya.

Commentary.

In the Darsa-pûrṇamāsa, which is the prakṛiti of the ishtis, the purodāsa for Agni is meant for one deity. Hence all offerings to one deity in the vikṛitis follow the general rules of the Âgneya purodāsa, as described in the Darsa-pûrṇamāsa, for instance, the karu for Sûrya, the Dvādasa-kapâla for Savitri.

Sûtra CXXIV.

Offerings for two deities are vikâras of the Agnîshomîya.

Commentary.

They must, however, be vegetable offerings, because the purodāsa for Agni-Shomau is a vegetable offering. As an instance, the Âgnâvaishnava Ekădasâkapâla is quoted. Agnîshomîya has a short a, but the first a in Âgnâvaishnava is long.

Sûtra CXXV.

Offerings for many deities are vikâras also of the Aindrâgna.

Commentary.

The ka in bahudevatâs ka is explained by the commentary as intended to include the Âgnâvaishnava also. Any offering intended for more than one deity may be considered as intended for many deities.

Sûtra CXXVI.

They are optionally vikâras of the Aindrâgna.
SŪTRAS CXXIII—CXXVIII.

Commentary.

Sometimes these two Sūtras are combined into one. The commentator, however, sees in the vā of aindrāgnavikārā vā a deeper meaning. Agni-Shomau, he says, consists of four, Indrāgni of three syllables. Therefore if the name of more than one deity consists of four syllables, it should be treated as a vikāra of the Agnīshomiya, if of less than four syllables, as a vikāra of the Aindrāgna.

SŪTRA CXXVII.

An exception must be made in the case of the gods of the prakṛiti, as, for instance, the Aindra purodāsa, the Saumya kāru.

Commentary.

The exception applies to cases where the offering in a vikṛiti sacrifice is meant for the same principal deities as those of the prakṛiti offering. For instance, in the Darsa-pūrnamāsa Agni and Soma are the deities of the Agnīshomiya, Indra and Agni of the Aindrāgna. If then in one of the secondary or vikṛiti sacrifices there occurs an Aindra purodāsa, or a Saumya kāru, then the Aindra purodāsa is treated as a vikāra of the Aindrāgna, the Saumya kāru as a vikāra of the Agnīshomiya. The Somendra kāru also, as its principal deity is Soma, would follow the Agnīshomiya, the Indrāsomiya purodāsa, as its principal deity is Indra, would follow the Aindrāgna.

SŪTRA CXXVIII.

If there is sameness both in the offering and in the deity, then the offering prevails.

Commentary.

If a kāru for Pragāpati occurs in a vikṛiti sacrifice, it would follow that, being offered to Pragāpati, it should be offered with murmuring, but, as it is a vegetable offering, it follows the norm of the purodāsa, though the purodāsa is intended for Agni.
Sûtra CXXIX.

If there is contradiction with regard to the substance and the preparation of an offering, the substance prevails.

Commentary.

A purodâsa may be made of vrihi, rice, or of nivâra, wild growing rice. The wild rice has to be pounded, but not the good rice. The preparation, however, has to yield in a vikrîti, the important point being the substance.

Sûtra CXXX.

If there is contradiction with regard to the substance, the object prevails.

Commentary.

An example makes the meaning of this Sûtra quite clear. Generally the yûpa or sacrificial post for fastening sacrificial animals is made of Khadîra wood. But if a post made of wood is not strong enough to hold the animal, then an iron post is to be used, the object being the fastening of the animal, while the material is of less consequence.

Sûtra CXXXI.

In a Prakrîti sacrifice there is no Ûha, modification of the mantras.

Commentary.

Certain mantras of the Veda have to be slightly altered, when their application varies. In the normal sacrifices, however, no such alteration takes place.

Sûtra CXXXII.

In a Vikrîti sacrifice modification takes place, according to the sense, but not in an arthavâda.

Commentary.

Some mantras remain the same in the Vikrîti as in the Prakrîti. Others have to be modified so as to be adapted to anything new that has to be. If, for instance, there is a Purodâsa for Agni in the Prakriti, and in its place a Purodâsa for Sûrya in the Vikriti, then we must place Sûrya instead of Agni in the dedicatory mantra.

Sûtra CXXXIII.

When we hear words referring to something else, that is arthavâda.

Commentary.

Arthavâda is generally explained as anything occurring in the Brâhmanas which is not vidhi or command. Here, however, it refers to Mantras or passages recited at the sacrifice. We saw how such passages, if they referred to some part of the sacrifice, had to be modified under certain circumstances according to the sense. Here we are told that passages which do not refer to anything special in the sacrifice, are arthavâda and remain unmodified. All this is expressed by the words paravâkyasravanät. Vâkyâ stands for padâni, words, such as are used in the nivâpamanastra, &c. Some of these words are called samave-târthâni, because they tell of something connected with the performance of the sacrifice, as, for instance, Agnaye gushtam nirvapâmi, I offer what is acceptable to Agni; others are asamave-târthâni, as, for instance, Devasya tvâ Savituk prasave. When such passages which are not connected with some sacrificial act occur (sravanât), they naturally remain unaltered.

Sûtra CXXXIV.

If what is prescribed is absent, a substitute is to be taken according to similarity.

Commentary.

Here we have no longer modification, but substitution (pratinidhi). In cases where anything special that has been prescribed is wanting, a substitute must be chosen, as similar as possible, and producing a similar effect.
According to Mandana’s Trikānda, the degrees of similarity are to be determined in the following order:

Kāryai rūpais tathā parnaḥ kṣīraḥ pushpaḥ phalair api, Gandhai rasaiḥ sadṛig grāhyam pūrvālabhe param param.

‘What is similar by effect, by shape, by leaves, by milk, by flowers, and by fruit, By smell, or by taste is to be taken one after the other, if the former cannot be found.’

Sūtra CXXXV.

If there is nothing very like, something a little like may be substituted, only it must not be prohited.

Commentary.

If in a karu of mudgas, kidney-beans, phaseolus mungo, these kidney-beans should fail, a substitute may be taken, but that substitute must not be māshas, phaseolus radiatus, because these māshas are expressly forbidden; for it is said, Ayagṛiṣyā vai māṣhāḥ, ‘Māshas are not fit for sacrifice.’

Sūtra CXXXVI.

The substitute should take the nature of that for which it is substituted.

Commentary.

Taddhārma, having the same qualities. If, for instance, nīvāra has been substituted for vṛīhi, it should be treated as if it were vṛīhi. The name vṛīhi should remain, and should not be replaced by nīvāra, just as Soma, if replaced by pūtiṅkā, is still called Soma. Thus, when in the course of a sacrifice vṛīhi has once been replaced by nīvāra, and vṛīhi can be procured afterwards, yet nīvāra is then to be retained to the end. If, however, the substituted nīvāra also come to an end, and afterwards both nīvāra and vṛīhi are forthcoming, then vṛīhi has the preference. If neither be forthcoming, then some substitute is to be taken that approaches nearest to the substitute, the nīvāra, not to the original vrihi. Further, if a choice has been allowed between vrihi, rice, and yava, barley, and vrihi has been chosen, and afterwards, as substitute for vrihi, nivâra, then, if nivâra come to an end, and in the absence of vrihi, when a new supply of both nivâra and yava has been obtained, the yava is to be avoided, and the original substitute for vrihi, the nivâra, must be retained. In most of these cases, however, a certain penance also (prâya-sktta) is required.

SûTRA CXXVII.

If something is wanting in the measure, let him finish with the rest.

Commentary.

If it is said that a pu rodâsa should be as large as a horse’s hoof, and there is not quite so much left, yet whatever is left should be used to finish the offering.

SûTRA CXXVIII.

Substitution does not apply to the master, the altar-fire, the deity, the word, the act, and a prohibition.

Commentary.

The master is meant for the sacrificer himself and his wife. Their place cannot, of course, be taken by anybody else. The altar-fire is supposed to have a supernatural power, and cannot be replaced by any other fire. Nothing can take the place of the invoked deities, nor of the words used in the mantras addressed to them, nor can the sacrifice itself be replaced by any other act. Lastly, when it is said that mâshas, varakas, kodravas are not fit for sacrifice, or that a man ought not to sacrifice with what should not be eaten by Áryas, nothing else can be substituted for what is thus prohibited.

SûTRA CXXIX.

The Prakrâti stops from three causes, from a corollary, from a prohibition, and from loss of purpose.

[30] A a
Commentary.
A corollary (pratyāmnāna) occurs, when it is said, 'instead of Kusa grass, let him make a barhis of reeds.' A prohibition (pratishedha) occurs, when it is said, 'he does not choose an Ārsheya.' Loss of purpose (arthalopa) occurs, when peshana, pounding, would refer to karu, a pulse, that cannot be pounded, while grains can be.

Sūtra CXL.
The Agnishṭoma is the Prakṛiti of the Ekāha sacrifices.

Commentary.
The Ekāha are sacrifices accomplished in one day.

Sūtra CXLI.
The Dvādasāha is the Prakṛiti of the Aharganas.

Commentary.
The Dvādasāha lasts twelve days and is a Soma sacrifice. It is either an Ahīna or a Sattra. An Ahargana is a series of daily and nightly sacrifices. Those which last from two nights to eleven nights are called Ahīna. Those which last from thirteen to one hundred nights or more are called Sattras.

Sūtra CXLII.
The Gavāmayana is the Prakṛiti of the Sāmvatsarikas.

Commentary.
The Gavāmayana lasts three years, and it is the type of all Sāmvatsarika sacrifices, whether they last one, two, three or more years. They all belong to the class of Sattras.

Sūtra CXLIII.
Of the Nikāyi sacrifices the first serves as Prakṛiti.
Commentary.

Among the Nikāyī sacrifices, lit. those which consist of a number, all having the same name, but different rewards, the first is the prakṛiti of the subsequent ones. The commentator calls them sādyaskra &c., and mentions as the first the Agniṣṭoma. See Sūtra CXLVI, and Weber, Ind. Stud. XIII, p. 218.

Sūtra CXLIV.

At the Agniṣṭoma there is the Uttara-vedi.

Commentary.

The commentator explains this by saying that at the Soma sacrifices, i.e. at the Agniṣṭoma, Uktethya, Shodāsin, and Atirātra, the fire is carried from the Āhavanīya to the Uttara-vedi, which is also called the Soma altar.

Sūtra CXLV.

The fire is valid for the successive sacrifices.

Commentary.

This fire refers to the fire on the Uttara-vedi, mentioned in the preceding Sūtra, and the object of the Sūtra seems to be to include the act of lighting the fire on the Uttara-vedi in the Prakṛiti, though properly speaking it does not form part of the Agniṣṭoma. But I cannot quite understand the argument of the commentator.

Sūtra CXLVI.

This does not apply to the Sādyaskras, the Vāgapeya, the Shodāsin, and the Sārasvata Sattra.

Commentary.

With regard to the Shodāsin and its viśkāra, the Vāgapeya, the laying of the fire is not mentioned. In the case of the Sādyaskras, it becomes impossible, because they have to be quickly finished. In the case of the Sārasvata Sattra, there is the same difficulty on account of not remaining in the same place (anavasthāpān nāgnis kīyate).
Sūtra CXLVII.

A sacrificer wishes the object of his sacrifice at the beginning of the sacrifice.

Commentary.

Some MSS. read kāmayeta, 'he should wish,' but the commentator explains that such a command (vidhi) is unnecessary, because it is natural to form a wish (svatāk siddhatvāt).

Sūtra CXLVIII.

At the beginning of a special part of the sacrifice, one should wish the object of that part of the sacrifice.

Commentary.

The commentary, though objecting, and objecting rightly, to kāmayeta, 'he should wish,' in the preceding Sūtra, accepts kāmayeta as determining the present Sūtra, saying kāmayetety anuvartate. One should read yagnāṅgakāmam, not yagnakāmam, for the commentary explains it by yagnāṅgapralasāṅkalpaḥ. Whether it was really intended that there should be a special wish for each part or subsidiary act of a sacrifice (yagnāṅga), is another question, but the commentator evidently thought so.

Kātyāyana, who treats the same subject (1, 2, 10 seq.), states that there should be this desire for a reward for certain sacrifices which are offered for a certain purpose, as, for instance, the Dvādaśāha, but that there are no such motives for other sacrifices, and parts of sacrifices. He mentions, first of all, a niyama, a precept for the sacrifice, such as 'Speak the truth.' Then a nimitta, a special cause, as when some accident has taken place that must be remedied, for instance, when the house has been burnt down, &c. Thirdly, the Agnihotra, the morning and evening Homā; fourthly, the Darsa-pūrnamāsau; fifthly, the Dākshāyana, a vikṛiti of the Darsa-pūrnamāsau, the Āgrayana; sixthly, the Nirūdha-pasu, the animal sacrifice. All these have to be performed as a sacred duty, and without any view to special rewards. Thus we read in Vâsishtâ:

Avâyam brâhmâno-gnîn âdadhitâ, darsapûrnamâsâgrâyaneshâkâtûrmâsya-pasaromais ka yageta, 'A Brâhmaṅa should without fail place his fires, and offer the Darsapûrnamâsâ, the Āgrayaneshtî, the Kâtûrmâsya-s, the Paṣu, and the Soma sacrifices.'

Hârita says: Pâkayagnânam yagen nityam haviryagnâms ka nityasâh, Somâms ka vidhipûrvena ya ikkhed dharmam avyayam, 'Let a man offer the Pâkayagnâs always, always also the Haviryagnâs, and the Soma sacrifices, according to rule, if he wishes for eternal merit.' The object of these sacrifices is aparimitanîksreyasarûpa-moksha, eternal happiness, and hence they have to be performed during life at certain seasons, without any special occasion (nîmîta), and without any special object (kâma). According to most authorities, however, they have to be performed during thirty years only. After that the Agnihotra only has to be kept up. The proper seasons for these sacrifices are given by Manu, IV, 25-27:

1 A Brâhmaṅa shall always offer the Agnihotra at the beginning or at the end of the day and of the night, and the Darsa and Paûrnamâsa (ishîs) at the end of each month;

1 When the old grain has been consumed the (Āgrayanâ) Ishâ with new grain; at the end of the (three) seasons the (Kâtûrmâsya) sacrifices; at the solstices an animal (sacrifice); at the end of the year Soma offerings;

1 A Brâhmaṅa, who keeps sacred fires, shall, if he desires to live long, not eat new grain or meat, without having offered the (Āgrayanâ) Ishâ with new grain and an animal (sacrifice)

These Pâkayagnâs, Haviryagnâs or ishîs, and Soma sacrifices are enumerated by Gautama, as follows:

1 See Manu, transl. by Bühler, S. B. E., XXV, who quotes to the same purpose Gaut. VIII, 19-20; Vâs. XI, 46; Vi. LIX, 2-9; Baudh. II, 4, 23; Yâgî. I, 97, 124-125.

In a commentary on Dhūrtasvāmin’s Āpastambasūtra-bhāshya (MS. E. I. H. 137) another list is given:

According to the substances offered, sacrifices are sometimes divided into vegetable and animal sacrifices. The vegetable substances are, tandulâh, pishhâni, phalikaranâh, purodâsaḥ, odanâh, yavâgûh, prithukâh, lâgâh, dhânâh, and akta vâh. The animal substances are, payâh, dadhi, âgyam, âmikshâ, vâginam, vâpâ, tvakâh, mâmsam, lohitam, and pasurasâh.

Sûtra CXLIX.

If there are fewer Mantras and more (sacrificial) acts, then after dividing them into equal parts, let him perform the former with the former, the latter with the latter.

Commentary.

It happens, for instance, in certain ishâris that a pair of Yâgyâ and Anuvâkyâ mantras is given, but six acts. In that case one half of the mantras is used for one half of the acts, and the other half of the mantras for the other half of the acts.

Sûtra CL.

If there are fewer acts and more Mantras, let him perform and act with one mantra, those which remain are optional, as the materials for the sacrificial post.

Commentary.

Kapardisvâmin seems to have divided this Sûtra into three, the second being avarishâ vikalpârthâh, the third yathâ yûpadravyânîti. But it is better to take it as one, as it is in MS. 1676.

If there are, for instance, fourteen vapanas, while there are many more mantras, let him select fourteen mantras and use them for each vapana, while the rest will be useful for another performance. A similar case occurs when different kinds of wood are recommended for making the sacrificial post, or when rice or barley are recommended for an offering. Here a choice has to be made. The iti at the end is explained as showing that there are other instances of the same kind.
Sûtra CLI.

From the end there takes place omission or addition.

Commentary.

This refers again to the same subject, namely what has to be done if there are either more or less mantras than there are acts which they are to accompany. In that case it is here allowed to use as many mantras as there are acts, and to drop the rest of the mantras. Or, if there are less mantras than there are acts, then, after the mantras have been equally divided, the last verse is to be multiplied. For instance, in the Dvîkapûla sacrifice for the two Asvins, the placing of the two kapâlas is accompanied by two mantras. The rest of the mantras enjoined in the prakrti is left out. But if there are, for instance, twelve or more ishtakâs, bricks, to be placed, while there are only ten mantras, then the mantras are equally divided, and the fifth and tenth to be repeated, as many times as is necessary to equal the number of the ishtakâs.

Sûtra CLII.

As the Prakrti has been told before, anything that has not been told before, should be at the end.

Commentary.

This seems to mean that anything new, peculiar to a Vikrti, and not mentioned in the Prakrti, should come in at the end, that is, after those portions of the sacrifice which are enjoined in the Prakrti.

Sûtra CLIII.

The rule should stand on account of the fitness of the Kumbhî, a large pot, the Sûla, the spit for boiling the heart, and the two Vapâsrapanîs, the spits for roasting the vapâ.

Commentary.

Kumbhî is explained by srovyâdipâkasamarthâ brihati sthali; Sula by hridayapakarthā yashrih, and Vapāsrpani by vapāsrpanārthe yashī dve. The exact object of the Sūtra is not quite clear. Prabhuṭva is explained by samarthatva, that is, fitness. This would mean, that on account of their fitness, or because they can be used for the object for which they are intended, or, so long as they can be used, the rule applying to them should remain. The commentary explains tantram by tantratā or ekatā. It may mean that the same pots and spits should be used, so long as they fulfil their purpose. The next Sūtra would then form a natural limitation.

Sūtra CLIV.

But if there is a different kind of animal, there is difference (in pots and spits), owing to the diversity of cooking.

Commentary.

If different animals are to be cooked, then there must be different pots for each (pratipasum), because each requires a different kind of cooking. The commentary adds that, as the reason for using different pots is given, that reason applies also to young and old animals of the same kind (gati), i.e. the young and small animal would require a different pot and a different kind of cooking.

Sūtra CLV.

At the Vanaspati sacrifice, which is a modification (vikāra) of the Svishtakrit, the addresses (nigama) of the deities should take place in the Yāgyā, because they are included in the Prakriti.

Commentary.

These nigamas of the deities are not mentioned in the rules of the Vanaspati sacrifice, but they are mentioned in the rules for the Svishtakrit sacrifice of the Darsapūrnamāsa, which is the Prakriti, and should therefore be taken over. Here again, because a reason is given, it is understood that the same reason would apply to other portions of Śvishṭakrīt also, such as the Dvī abhighārana, which is to be retained in the Vanaspati sacrifice.

SūTRA CLVI.

The Anvārambhāntyā or initiatory ceremony does not take place in a Vikrīti, because the Vikrītis would fall within the time of the Prakrīti, and the Anvārambhāntyā has but one object, namely (the initiation of) the Darsa-pūrna-ṃāṣa sacrifice.

Commentary.

The Anvārambhāntyā ceremony has to be performed by those who begin the Darsa-pūrnamāṣa sacrifice. It has thus one object only, and is never enjoined for any other cause. It is not therefore transferred to any Vikrīti, such as the Saurya ceremony, &c. The Darsa-pūrna-ṃāṣa sacrifice having to be performed during the whole of life, or during thirty years, the Vikrītis would necessarily fall within the same space of time. The initiatory ceremony has reference to the Darsa-pūrnamāṣa sacrifice only, and thus serves as an introduction to all the Vikrītis, without having to be repeated for each.

SūTRA CLVII.

Or (according to others) the Anvārambhāntyā should take place (in the Vikrītis also), because the time (of the Darsa-pūrnamāṣa) does not form an essential part.

Commentary.

This Sūtra is not quite clear. It shows clearly enough that, according to some authorities, the Anvārambhāntyā or initiatory ceremony of the Darsa-pūrnamāṣa sacrifice should take place in the Vikrītis also; but why? Because the time has not the character of a sēṣha, which is said to be a synonym of aṅga, an essential part of a sacrifice.
SŪTRAS CLVI–CLIX.

When it is said that the Darsa-pūrnamāsa should be performed during life, this is not meant as determining the time of the sacrifice. It only means that so long as there is life a man should perform these sacrifices, and that their non-performance would constitute a sin. The former argument, therefore, that the time of the Vikriti sacrifices would fall within the time of the Prakriti sacrifice is not tenable.

SŪTRA CLVIII.

And again, because there is difference in the undertaking.

Commentary.

Ārāmbha, the beginning, is explained as the determination to perform a certain sacrifice (darsapūrnamāsābhhyām yakshya iti nisākṣaya sākṣaraḥ saṅkalpaḥ). The object of the undertaking in the case of the Darsa-pūrnamāsa sacrifice, as the Prakriti, is simply svarga, in the Vikriti it may be any kind of desire. Therefore the Anvārambhāniyā ceremony of the Darsa-pūrnamāsas should be transferred to its Vikriti. This seems to have been the opinion of the same authorities who are referred to in Sūtra CLVII. The final outcome of the whole controversy, however, is clearly that our Ākārya is in favour of omitting the Anvārambhāniyā in the Vikriti. Anayoḥ pakṣhayor anvārambhāniyābhāvakpakṣasyaiva balavattvam ākāryābhilashitam iti manyāmahe. The Anvārambhāniyā is not to be considered as an ordinary Āṅga, but as a special act to fit the sacrificer to perform the Darsa-pūrnamāsa and to perform it through the whole of his life.

SŪTRA CLIX.

For every object (new sacrifice) let him bring forward the fire (let him perform the Agnipraṇayaṇa, the fetching of the Āhavantya from the Gārhapatyā fire). When the sacrifice is finished the fire becomes again ordinary fire, as when the (divine) fire has returned (to the firesticks).

Commentary.

The fire for a sacrifice is supposed to be set apart or consecrated (sāstrīya), but it is so for a special sacrifice only, and when that sacrifice is ended, it is supposed to become like ordinary fire again. Artha is prayogana, the sacrifice for which the fire is intended (agnisādhivyavihítakarmānu-shṬānam; tasya tasya vihitasya karmānu-nushṭhānārtham garhapatyādibhya ṛhavanīyādyagnim pranayet). The commentator remarks that there are two Agnis, the one who is visible, the other who is the god. Now while the divine Agni leaves the coals and ascends or is absorbed again in the two firesticks (arani), the other remains like ordinary kitchen fire. See on Samārohana, Weber, Ind. Stud. IX, p. 311; Āsvalāyana-Srauta-sūtra III, 10, 4-5.

Sacred Books of the East

Translated by Various Oriental Scholars

And edited by

The Right Hon. F. Max Müller.

 This Series is published with the sanction and co-operation of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

Report presented to the Académie des Inscriptions, May 11, 1883, by M. Ernest Renan.

M. Renan présente trois nouveaux volumes de la grande collection des "Livres sacrés de l'Orient" (Sacred Books of the East), que dirige à Oxford, avec une si vaste érudition et une critique si sûre, le savant associé de l'Académie des Inscriptions, M. Max Müller... La première série de ce beau recueil, composée de 24 volumes, est presque achevée. M. Max Müller se propose d'en publier une seconde, dont l'intérêt historique et religieux ne sera pas moindre. M. Max Müller a su se procurer la collaboration des savans les plus éminents d'Europe et d'Asie. L'Université d'Oxford, que cette grande publication honore au plus haut degré, doit tenir à continuer dans les plus larges proportions une œuvre aussi philosophiqüement conçue que savamment exécutée.'

Extract from the Quarterly Review.

'Ve rejoice to notice that a second series of these translations has been announced and has actually begun to appear. The stones, at least, out of which a stately edifice may hereafter arise, are here being brought together. Prof. Max Müller has deserved well of scientific history. Not a few minds owe to his enticing words their first attraction to this branch of study. But no work of his, not even the great edition of the Rig-Veda, can compare in importance or in usefulness with this English translation of the Sacred Books of the East, which has been devised by his foresight, successfully brought so far by his persuasive and organising power, and will, we trust, by the assistance of the distinguished scholars he has gathered round him, be carried in due time to a happy completion.'

Professor E. Hardy, Inaugural Lecture in the University of Freiburg, 1887.

The Hon. Albert S. G. Canning, 'Words on Existing Religions.'

'Ve have recently the publication of the "Sacred Books of the East" in English is surely a great event in the annals of theological literature.'

FIRST SERIES.

VOL. I. The Upanishads.

The Upanishads contain the philosophy of the Veda. They have become the foundation of the later Vedānta doctrines, and indirectly of Buddhism. Schopenhauer, speaking of the Upanishads, says: 'In the whole world there is no study so beneficial and so elevating as that of the Upanishads. It has been the solace of my life, it will be the solace of my death.'

[See also Vol. XV.]

VOL. II. The Sacred Laws of the Āryas,

As taught in the Schools of Āpastamba, Gautama, Vāsishtha, and Baudhāyana. Translated by GEORG BÜHLER. Part I. Āpastamba and Gautama. Second Edition. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

The Sacred Laws of the Āryas contain the original treatises on which the Laws of Manu and other lawgivers were founded.

[See also Vol. XIV.]

VOL. III. The Sacred Books of China.

The Texts of Confucianism. Translated by JAMES LEGGE. Part I. The Shū King, The Religious Portions of the Shih King, and The Hsiâo King. Second Edition. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

Confucius was a collector of ancient traditions, not the founder of a new religion. As he lived in the sixth and fifth centuries B.C. his works are of unique interest for the study of Ethology.

[See also Vols. XVI, XXVII, XXVIII, XXXIX, and XL.]

VOL. IV. The Zend-Avesta.

Translated by JAMES DARMESTETER. Part I. The Vendidâd. Second Edition. 8vo, cloth, 14s.

The Zend-Avesta contains the relics of what was the religion of Cyrus, Darius, and Xerxes, and, but for the battle of Marathon, might have become the religion of Europe. It forms to the present day the sacred book of the Parsis, the so-called fire-worshippers.
[See also Vols. XXIII and XXXI.]

VOL. V. Pahlavi Texts.
Translated by E. W. West. Part I. The Bundahis, Bahman Yast, and Shâyast lâ-shâyast. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

The Pahlavi Texts comprise the theological literature of the revival of Zoroaster's religion, beginning with the Sassanian dynasty. They are important for a study of Gnosticism.
[See also Vols. XVIII, XXIV, XXXVII, and XLVII.]

VOLS. VI AND IX. The Qur'ân.
8vo, cloth, 21s.

This translation, carried out according to his own peculiar views of the origin of the Qur'ân, was the last great work of E. H. Palmer, before he was murdered in Egypt.

VOL. VII. The Institutes of Vishnu.
Translated by Julius Jolly. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

A collection of legal aphorisms, closely connected with one of the oldest Vedic schools, the Kathas, but considerably added to in later time. Of importance for a critical study of the Laws of Manu.

VOL. VIII. The Bhagavadgîtâ, with The Sanatsugâtiya, and The Anugîta.
8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

The earliest philosophical and religious poem of India. It has been paraphrased in Arnold's 'Song Celestial.'

VOL. X. The Dhammapada,
Translated from Pāli by F. Max Müller; and
The Sutta-Nipâta,
Translated from Pāli by V. Fausbøll; being Canonical Books of the Buddhists. Second Edition. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

The Dhammapada contains the quintessence of Buddhist morality.
The Sutta-Nipâta gives the authentic teaching of Buddha on some of the fundamental principles of religion.
Vol. XI. Buddhist Suttas.
Translated from Pali by T. W. Rhys Davids. 1. The Mahāparinibbāna Sutta; 2. The Dhamma-lakka-ppavattana Sutta. 3. The Tevigga Sutta; 4. The Ākaṅkheyya Sutta; 5. The Ketokhila Sutta; 6. The Mahā-sudassana Sutta; 7. The Sābbāsava Sutta. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

A collection of the most important religious, moral, and philosophical discourses taken from the sacred canon of the Buddhists.

Vol. XII. The Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa, according to the Text of the Mādhyandina School.
Translated by Julius Eggeling. Part I. Books I and II. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

A minute account of the sacrificial ceremonies of the Vedic age. It contains the earliest account of the Deluge in India.
[See also Vols. XXVI, XLI, XLIII, and XLIV.]

Vol. XIII. Vinaya Texts.
Translated from the Pali by T. W. Rhys Davids and Hermann Oldenberg. Part I. The Pātimokkha. The Mahāvagga. I–IV. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

The Vinaya Texts give for the first time a translation of the moral code of the Buddhist religion as settled in the third century B.C.
[See also Vols. XVII and XX.]

Vol. XIV. The Sacred Laws of the Āryas,
As taught in the Schools of Āpastamba, Gautama, Vāsiṣṭha, and Baudhāyana. Translated by Georg Bühler. Part II. Vāsiṣṭha and Baudhāyana. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

Vol. XV. The Upanishads.

The Texts of Confucianism. Translated by James Legge. Part II. The Yī King. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.
[See also Vols. XXVII, XXVIII.]

Vol. XVII. Vinaya Texts.
Translated from the Pali by T. W. Rhys Davids and Hermann Oldenberg. Part II. The Mahāvagga, V–X. The Kullavagga, I–III. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.
VOL. XVIII. Pahlavi Texts.
Translated by E. W. West. Part II. The Dādīstān-i Dinīk and The Epistles of Mānūṣīthār. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

VOL. XIX. The Fo-sho-hing-tsan-king.
A Life of Buddha by Aravaghośa Bodhisattva, translated from Sanskrit into Chinese by Dharmarākṣa, A.D. 420, and from Chinese into English by Samuel Beal. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

This life of Buddha was translated from Sanskrit into Chinese, A.D. 420. It contains many legends, some of which show a certain similarity to the Evangelium infantiae, &c.

VOL. XX. Vinaya Texts.
Translated from the Pāli by T. W. Rhys Davids and Hermann Oldenberg. Part III. The Kullavagga, IV–XII. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOL. XXI. The Saddharmapundarīka; or, The Lotus of the True Law.
Translated by H. Kern. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

'The Lotus of the True Law,' a canonical book of the Northern Buddhists, translated from Sanskrit. There is a Chinese translation of this book which was finished as early as the year 286 A.D.

VOL. XXII. Gāṇa-Sūtras.
Translated from Prākrit by Hermann Jacobi. Part I. The Āṭārāṅga-Sūtra and The Kalpa-Sūtra. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

The religion of the Gāṇas was founded by a contemporary of Buddha. It still counts numerous adherents in India, while there are no Buddhists left in India proper.

[See Vol. XLV.]

VOL. XXIII. The Zend-Avesta.
Translated by James Darmesteter. Part II. The Sirōzahs, Yasts, and Nyāyis. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOL. XXIV. Pahlavi Texts.
Translated by E. W. West. Part III. Dīnā-ī Mainōg-Khirad, Sikand-gūmānīk Vigār, and Sad Dar. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.
SECOND SERIES.

VOL. XXV. Manu.
Translated by GEORG BÜHLER. 8vo, cloth, 21s.
This translation is founded on that of Sir William Jones, which has been carefully revised and corrected with the help of seven native Commentaries. An Appendix contains all the quotations from Manu which are found in the Hindu Law-books, translated for the use of the Law Courts in India. Another Appendix gives a synopsis of parallel passages from the six Dharma-sūtras, the other Śmilis, the Upanishads, the Mahābhārata, &c.

VOL. XXVI. The Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa.
Translated by JULIUS EGELING. Part II. Books III and IV: 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

VOLS. XXVII AND XXVIII. The Sacred Books of China.
The Texts of Confucianism. Translated by JAMES LEGGE. Parts III and IV. The Li Ki, or Collection of Treatises on the Rules of Propriety, or Ceremonial Usages. 8vo, cloth, 25s.

VOL. XXXIX. The Grihya-Sūtras, Rules of Vedic Domestic Ceremonies.
Part I. Sāṅkhāyana, Āsvalāyana, Pâraskara, Khâdïra. Translated by HERMANN OLDENBERG. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

VOL. XXX. The Grihya-Sūtras, Rules of Vedic Domestic Ceremonies.
Part II. Gobhila, Hiranyakesin, Āpastamba. Translated by HERMANN OLDENBERG. Āpastamba, Yagñaparibhāṣā-sūtras. Translated by F. MAX MÜLLER. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.
These rules of Domestic Ceremonies describe the home life of the ancient Āryas with a completeness and accuracy unmatched in any other literature. Some of these rules have been incorporated in the ancient Law-books.

VOL. XXXI. The Zend-Avesta.
Part III. The Yasna, Visparad, Âśrinâgan, Gâhs, and Miscellaneous Fragments. Translated by L. H. MILLS. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

VOL. XXXI. Vedic Hymns.
Translated by F. MAX MÜLLER. Part I. 8vo, cloth, 18s. 6d.
[See also Vol. XLVI.]

   Translated by G. THIBAUT. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.
   [See also Vol. XXXVIII.]

VOLS. XXXV AND XXXVI. The Questions of King Milinda.
   Translated from the Pāli by T. W. RHYS DAVIDS.
   Part I. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d. Part II. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

VOL. XXXVII. Pahlavi Texts.
   Translated by E. W. WEST. Part IV. The Contents of the Nasks, as stated in the Eighth and Ninth Books of the Dīnkard. 15s.

VOL. XXXVIII. The Vedánta-Sūtras. Part II. 8vo, cloth, with full Index to both Parts, 12s. 6d.

VOLS. XXXIX AND XL. The Sacred Books of China.
   The Texts of Taoism. Translated by JAMES LEGGE. 8vo, cloth, 21s.

VOL. XLI. The Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa. Part III.
   Translated by JULIUS EGGELING. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

VOL. XLII. Hymns of the Atharva-veda.
   Translated by M. BLOOMFIELD. 8vo, cloth, 21s.

VOL. XLIII. The Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa.
   Translated by JULIUS EGGELING. Part IV. Books VIII, IX, and X. 12s. 6d.

VOL. XLIV. The Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa.
   Translated by JULIUS EGGELING. Part V. Books XI, XII, XIII, and XIV. 18s. 6d.

VOL. XLV. The Gaina-Sūtras.
   Translated from Prakṛt, by HERMANN JACOBI. Part II. The Uttarādhyayana Sūtra, The Śūtrakṛtāṅga Sūtra. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.
